THE McCLARY M'FG COMPANY

London. Toronto. Montreal. Winnipeg.

Reading, Eng., have arranged to give quotations in dollars and cents, and have issued a new list of prices for this market accordingly.

T. Kinnear & Co. have a new shipment of five-crown Excelsior currants and Perfectos.

Advices received by J. L. Watt & Scott announce an advance of 5 francs in Grenoble walnuts.

Sloan & Crowther expect a further shipment of Argimbau's Valencia raisins in a week or so.

Harrison & Crossfield, through their local agents Watt & Scott, are presenting their buyers with tea cups.

Davidson & Hay are in receipt of a shipment of Dundee marmalade in seven pound tins and one pound pots.

Edward Adams & Co. have received a consignment of Fraser river salmon in barrels, which are going off rapidly.

Sloan & Crowther have received shipments of fine grade sardines, with Keys and Morton's bloaters and kippered herrings.

Perkins, Ince & Co. are in receipt of a shipment of 350 packages of Young Hyson teas, covering a large number of kinds.

For currants and raisins see James Turner Co.'s "ad." and write for prices and samples. They claim to have a splendid assortment.

The Uncas brand of Florida oranges received last week by Clemes Bros. were nearly all cleaned out on the day they arrived.

Davidson & Hay have received a consignment of Morton's fresh and kippered herrings and preserved bloaters and dried sprats in tins.

A serious accident was happily averted last week by the arrival of a car of Ram Lals tea ex the Monte Videau. When car arrived James Turner Co. had only 8 cases in stock.

W. H. Gillard & Company of Hamilton, report a new arrival of kippered herrings, preserved bloaters and fresh herrings in tomato sauce, the pack of J. T. Morton, of London, Eng.

Edward Adams & Co. are now filling orders for Eleme figs in 10 and 12 lb. boxes Oliver's layer Valencias in ¼ and ⅛ boxes are excellent fruit. The goods are handled by E. Adams & Co.

New Brunswick pack ¼ tins mustard sardines are being offered by W. H. Gillard & Co. of Hamilton at 10c. per tin. Considering the size of the tin and the fact that the goods are of excellent quality, the price is exceedingly low.

Caffaroma is claimed by its proprietors, C. A. Liffiton & Co. of Montreal, to make the best coffee in the world. The trade should investigate.

Morgan Davies & Co., tea merchants, Toronto, have suspended payment. The trade claim that the firm has made it a practice to systematically cut prices, and they look upon the failure as something upon which "to hang a moral and adorn a tale." The liabilities are said to be about $6,000. The firm has been in busines about 40 years, some six of which have been in Toronto. It is not its first failure.

Believing that the finest grades of fruits, at the lowest possible prices consistent with quality, pays both wholesaler and retailer best, and gives satisfaction to all, W. H. Gillard & Company, of Hamilton, have secured special values in this line, and their customers this season will have one of the largest and best assortments in the country to select their Christmas goods from.

The page at the back of Gillard & Co.'s inset has something unique in the way of an advertisement. It gives photographs of H. C. Beckett's four-year-old son in four different positions, in which he is sampling a cigar and a pipe. And a friend of the family says the boy drinks Imperial Congou, eats Gillard's new pickle, and rises like Diamond baking powder.

Dem. Schisas of Patras, writing under date of Oct. 26, says: Market remains unaltered, and I don't think that we can go lower. The present figures are perfectly ridiculous and worth while the serious attention, not only of regular buyers but also of speculators. All I can say is that our growers are perfectly ruined, and at present rates they only just cover expense of cutting the fruit let alone. All the expenses of cultivation have to be brought out of their own pockets. There seems no doubt that the cultivation for the next crop will be very much neglected for want of means, some peasants having already seriously thought of cutting down the currant plants and utilizing the ground for growing wheat.

FLOUR AND FEED.

These days flour and feed are sold on so close margins that there is no room for taking chances on bad accounts. And although they ought to be strictly cash commodities, yet all dealers do not adhere to this basis. The argument is that others do it and we must do the same or lose the trade. But the question is whether there is not more money in foregoing trade of this description than carrying the risks and the loses that are inevitable to the credit system no matter how carefully watched.

If the time expended on looking after doubtful accounts was devoted to other branches of the business, it might be more profitably employed.

Buying right is one of the main points, and this should have the full benefit of your experience not only to see that the stuff was bought at the lowest market price, but that the quality is such that will keep and gain customers. A dealer who keeps a stock of clean oats and hay of the best quality on hand will have little to fear of the loss of trade in refusing to open doubtful accounts.

"Plugging" is one of the tricks resorted to by dishonest farmers, though seldom practised around here. He stuffs a section of stove pipe into each bag before filling it and pours dirty grain all around it. Then fills the pipe in the centre of the bag with good clean grain, and then carefully withdraws the pipe. A trier thrust down the centre of the bag fails to detect the deception as it only travels through the clean section.

It is expected that Manitoba will take a front place in oatmeal milling in the future, as the quality of oats grown in the country is, it is claimed, better than that raised in the other provinces, and with a little more attention to the cultivation can be further improved.

The total amount of hay products on hand in Chicago is about 34,376,000 lbs. against 54,990,000 lbs. one month ago, and 67,998,000 lbs. a year ago. This decrease is mainly due to the large quantities taken for export to England.

The firm of Coleman, the large mustard manufacturer of England, have placed on the market American flour in retail packets of different sizes for use in cake and pastry and other purposes aside from bread making, which is done almost wholly by the bakers.

Among the flour and feed trade, window dressing seems to be greatly neglected, if not in many cases utterly despised. And yet this branch of the business demands more careful attention from those who desire to succeed. It is not any easy matter to make an attractive display—the point to aim at is to try and impress the public who look at your window, with the excellency of the goods sold.

THE MARKETS.

TORONTO.

There has been very little change in the flour market this past week, if anything the feeling has been towards a little lower prices. Holders are disposed to press sales, which accounts for the weakness, as prices of wheat are unchanged from last week.

FLOUR—Manitoba patents, $3.70 to $3.80; strong bakers', $3.55; white wheat patents, $3 25 to $3.40 ; straight roller, $2.80 to $2.95; low grades, $2 10 to $2.25 ; Ontario family, $2.85 to $3.10. These prices are delivered here in large lots.

MEAL—Rolled oats, $3.80 to $3 90; granulated and standard oatmeal, $3.80 ; cornmeal, $3.15; gold dust, $3.40.

FEED—Prices of mill feed are steady and demand brisk. Bran (ton lots) $12, delivered (on track) $11.75 per ton; shorts (ton lots) $14; delivered on track, $13.50; mixed feed 90c per 100 lbs.; feed corn, No. 3, 53c. per bushel; oats, offering more freely, car loads on track, 32½ to 33c. per bus.; farmer's loads, 33c. per b is.

HAY—Pressed in fair demand and prices steady at $9.50 on track. Market prices are a little lower, with clover selling as low as $6 per ton, and timothy at from $7 to $9 according to quality.

STRAW—Prices unchanged for pressed on track at $5.50 per ton. Prices on market lower with demand good at the decline ; loose $4 to $4.50, and sheaf $7 to $7.50.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

Markets in flour are lower and trade is quiet. Oatmeal is higher west and tends to strengthen market here, but there has been no advance. Feed is lower and oats are off a point. Manitoba hard wheat, $4.55 to $4.65 ; Ontario high grade, $3.80 to $4 ; medium patents, $3.65 to $3.80 ; oatmeal, $4.30 to $4 40 ; cornmeal, $2.60 to $2.70 ; Middlings on track, $18.50 to $19 ; bran, $17 to $18; cottonseed meal $32 per ton.

MARKETS—Continued.

Quebec, all in wholesale quantities. "Crystal rice is now selling from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Smith & Keighley : We are offering some fine California dried fruit in all lines.

Smith & Keighley : We are offering some fine New Orleans molasses at prices ranging all the way from 35 to 50c. according to quality.

Warren Bros. & Boomer : We are selling large quantities of 3 gallon pails of fine syrup. We purchased all that the refinery had of this line.

James Turner & Co. : The trade seem to appreciate our efforts to have Grenoble walnuts on the market so early. Our first consignment is almost sold out. A second lot is close to hand.

Eby, Blain & Co. : We have received a shipment of finest Panariti currants. They are the finest ever seen in the country.

Pure Gold Manufacturing Co. : We were never so busy with orders, those from British Columbia and the Northwest fairly flooding us.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Nov. 16, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The week just past has not been quite so eventful as the previous one in the matter of striking changes, but the movement has been of a much steadier character. One fact which occasioned this was the usual fall advance in freights, which, of course, led to the pushing forward of a lot of goods. The cutting that we specially referred to last week is still being resorted to by some of the houses, but they can hardly keep it up, and as regards the general tenor of prices this week, they can be called steady. Sugar has been moderately active, and it is said that some of the houses are selling at refiners' prices but they are not likely to continue it long. Tea is quiet after the trade sale of last week, while coffee and spices rule quiet and unchanged. A good business has been done in dried fruits and stocks have been pretty well distributed, leaving the supplies on the market of very slim proportions. There is nothing special in syrups or molasses, while canned goods are steady in tone in so far as canned vegetables are concerned. Payments continue much the same.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been a good steady trade done in dried fruits during the weak and values show a firmer feeling in consequence of lighter supplies on spot. Sales of ordinary off-stalk Valencias have been made in round lots at 4 to

4 1-4c., while firsts have brought 4 1-2c., most of the business being done on this basis, as the grade which this price calls is the fruit that jobbers are having the most demand for. Layers are wanted on spot with little or none obtainable, and the same is to be said of selected off-stalk. We quote prices firm, therefore, at last week's figures: Ordinary off-stalk, 4 1-4 to 5c., according to grade; fine, 5 1-4c.; selected, 6c.; and layers, 6 to 6 1-2c., as to quality. Advices from primary markets are firmer on currants, and one sales agent here has been instructed to withdraw his lot from the market for the time being. This is not at all surprising considering the low prices at which currants have been selling in Greece this fall. Spot business in the fruit is of a steady character from jobbers' hands, while sales of round lots have transpired at 3 1-2c. We quote regular jobbing prices as follows: Provincials, 3 7-8 to 4 1-4c; Filiatrias, 4 3-4 to 5c., and Vostizzas, 6 to 7 1-2c., according to quality. Figs are quiet and steady, the quantity offering at present being small and prices firm at 13 to 15c., according to quality. Dates rule scarce and firm at 6c., and prunes are steady at 5 3-4 to 6c.

NUTS.

There is no new feature in nuts and prices rule steady as before. We quote filberts, 8 1-2 to 9c.; French walnuts, 8 to 9c.; Grenoble walnuts, 11 to 12c.; peccans, 8 1-2 to 12c.; peanuts, 8 to 11c. per lb., and cocoanuts, $3.75 to $4 per hundred; Tarragona almonds, 11 1-2 to 12c.; and shelled almonds, 23 to 45c., according to grade.

FRUIT.

There has been the usual sales of green fruit throughout the week, and, owing to the quality of some of the offerings, the range of the week's bids in some cases was not quite so high as last week. Florida oranges newly arrived have sold at $1.75 to $2.25. Lemons are in seasonable demand, good stock selling at $3 to $3.50, and inferior, $2.50 to $2.75. California peaches are in fair demand at $2 per box. Pears are about over, and there is nothing to report about them. There is a brisk demand for cranberries at $6 to $6.50 per barrel. Grapes are dull. Malagas are arriving in fine condition, and selling at $4 to $4.75 per keg. The market is rather firmer on apples, some 5,000 barrels having changed hands during the week on the basis of $3 to $5.

SUGAR.

The sugar market has ruled easy during the week. There is no change in refiners' prices, however, from the decline which we noted last week, although we hear that some jobbers have been filling orders with sugar at what it actually cost them. They are exceptions, however, and the bulk of the trading during the week has been done on a fair and legitimate margin. We quote as before from the refineries, granulated, 4 3-4c.; and yellows, 3 3-4 to 4 1-2c.

MOLASSES.

The molasses situation remains much the same, and the houses who want to do business in a regular way are complaining about the difficulty of doing so with people offering Barbadoes at a big cut more for the purpose of annoying competitors than with any intention of doing business at the figures they name. We do not alter our quotation, however, which we still quote at 33 to 34c. for business in a regular jobbing way.

SYRUPS.

There is a moderate business doing in syrups at steady prices. We quote Canadian 1 5-8 to 2c. per lb., and American 19 1-2 to 23c. per gallon.

TEA.

The tea market, although quiet, gives indications of a somewhat firmer feeling in consequence of rather firmer advices from Japan. We quote prices steady, as follows: Japans: Common, 12 to 13c.; medium, 15 to 17c.; fine, 18 to 21c.; and finest, 23 to 32c.

COFFEES.

The coffee market is rather lightly supplied, and the tone rules firm in consequence. Business has been of moderate volume with prices steady as follows: Jamaica, 16 to 18c.; Maracaibo, 19 to 21c.; Porto Cobello, 18 to 20c.; Rio, 17 1-2 to 19c.; Java, 24 to 28c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

SPICES.

There has been no special change in the spice market which rules steady as follows: Jamaica ginger, 15 to 16c. for common, and 18 to 20c. for finer qualities; black pepper, 6 to 7c.; pimento, 6c.; and nutmegs, 50 to 52 1-2c. to $1.

RICE.

There is a fair demand for rice on local account, and a good week's business has been done on the whole. We quote: Japan standard, $3.75; standard B, $3.40; English style, $3.20; choice Burmah, $3.85; Japan crystal, $4.25; Patna, $4.25 to $5; Carolina, $6.50 to $7.

CANNED GOODS.

The actual local movement in canned goods is small, but although buyers are disposed to operate cautiously, the market is certainly firm in tone. Good sized lots of tomatoes have been moved at $1.75 to $1.85, and corn in 2-lb. tins at 75 to 80c., while peas run from 85 to 95c., according to quality. In salmon business has ruled quiet with prices steady at $1.25 to $1.27 1-2 for best brands, and $1.10 for Cohoes, despite low offers by some firms. Lobsters have changed hands in lots at $1.60 to $1.75 and mackerel 95 to $1 per dozen from first hands in straight lots.

FISH.

The receipts of fish continue moderate and just about equal to the demand, which dealers generally admit is better than for years past at this season. Labrador herring have moved at $5 to $5.25 per barrel, and shore herring at $4 to $4.50, while Cape Breton have fetched $5 in straight lots. Green cod is in fair demand, with sales at $4.75 to $5, and No. 1 dry cod has changed hands at $4.50 to $5. Barrel salmon is very scarce, and is held in round lots at $12.50. We quote: No.1 C.B. herring, $5.50; No.1 Newfoundland do.,$5; No. 1 green cod, $5 to $5.25; Labrador salmon, $14 to $15 per bbl.; B.C. do. $12 to $13; No. 2 mackerel, $12; finnan haddies, 7c. to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1.10 to $1.50 per box; kippered herring, $1.50 per box; haddock, 3 1-2 to 4c.; cod, 4 to 4 1-2c.; boneless cod, 6 1-2 to 7c.; hand picked malpeque oysters, $4.50 to $5; ordinary do., $2.50 to $3.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

There is a good steady demand for both fresh and limed eggs the receipts of the former being light, and prices firm as follows: 16 to 16 1-2c., limed stock, 15 1-2 to 16c. Onions are in moderate demand, with sales of car lots $1.75 to $2.05, and jobbing prices $2.25 to $2.50 per barrel. Potatoes are in rather better shape, with sales of car lots of 50 to 55c. per bag. It is too warm yet for any heavy receipts of dressed poultry and only a few lots have arrived. Geese have sold at 7c., turkeys, 8 1-2 to 9c.; chickens, 7 to 7 1-2c.; and ducks, 8 to 9c. Honey has been in fair demand, especially comb stock, 50 case lots of white clover selling at 14c.; white buckwheat brought 12c. Strained honey is dull at 7 to 8c. for new and 5 1-2c. to 6c. for old stock. The hop market is quiet at 20 to 22c. Beans are rather firmer, choice handpicked beans, $1.50 to $1.60; ordinary to good, $1.20 to $1.40, and inferior, $1 to $1.10. Maple syrup sells at 4 1-2 to 5c. in the wood, and 50 to 60c. in tins; sugar is dull at 6 to 7c. per lb.

PROVISIONS.

The movement in provisions is rather slow, but dealers report a fair enquiry from outside points. Lard is in fair demand at steady prices, and there is a moderate movement in smoked meats. Canadian short cut, $22 to $23; mess pork, Western, new, per bbl., $21 to $22; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12 1-4c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-2c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 8 1-4 to 9 1-4c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market continues dull. There is little trading here except at the wharf, where some 4,000 boxes were offered, including receipts by boat and rail. These sold at 10 1-2 to 10 5-8c which, considering the quality of the offerings, is a pretty good figure. There is nothing striking from the country. The public cable is unchanged. Finest Ontario fall cheese, 11 to 11 1-4c.; finest Townships fall cheese, 10 3-4 to 11c.;

BUTTER.

The butter market rules steady and quiet. The tone on creamery is unchanged and the supply offering does not appear to be excessive. We understand that there were purchases on account of shippers on spot at 22 1-2c. The supply of dairy stock continues scarce, and, as pointed out some time ago, the fact is having its influence on the position of creamery. Finest fall creamery, 22 1-2 to 23c.; earlier makes, 21 to 21 1-2c.; finest Townships dairy, 21 to 22c.; finest Western dairy, 19 1-2 to 20c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Chase & Sanborn have received a large line of Maracaibo coffee this week.

Geo. Childs & Son. have also a considerable consignment on the same steamer.

There have been enquiries for Mexican coffee during the week with bids of 18 1-2 to 19 1-2c.

Ransom, Forbes & Co. and N. Quintal & Son also have good lines coming forward during the same week.

Hudon, Hebert & Co. have a large line of currants on the way via New York at present by this week's steamer.

Chaput, Fils & Co. are expecting via New York next week some of their last shipments of dried raisins and currants.

A trade circular from London of the date of the 1st, says that Indian teas were very scarce on that market then.

Cable advices from London are rather firmer on beet sugar, which is quoted at 13s. 3d. for November and December delivery.

An order for 8,000 packages of tea was put through by a broker here last week for one of the leading jobbing houses.

Frank Hart, of Hart & Tuckwell, is just back from an extended tour through the fruit sections of the continent.

Rose & Laflamme report that their cables this week note a decline of 1s. 6d. in the price of Sultana raisins at London.

Private despatches from New York say that the receipt of a large shipment of Santos coffee at New York may ease up the market.

Japan advices are very firm on teas, a broker here stating that he could not duplicate orders except at a sharp advance of at least a cent per lb.

Gillespie & Co.'s advices from New York are to the effect that the feeling in dried raisins is better on that market, and that stocks are much more firmly held.

R. J. Anderson, of Doyle & Anderson, has joined the ranks of the benedicts. He was banqueted by his bachelor friends on Saturday night at the Cosmopolitan Club previous to his wedding, which took place on Tuesday morning.

Advices to T. Sauvageau & Co., of St. John street, who have done a very large business in teas this fall, state that currants are very much firmer in Greece, and to offer sparingly.

Tees, Wilson & Co.'s trade sale of Japan and Congou teas at the Board of Trade on Wednesday morning was well attended, among those present being Messrs. M. McPhee, of Alexandria, H. H. Guay, Victoriaville; J. Sullivan, Arnprior; D. G. Ellis, of Hamilton; Lockerby Bros., Montreal; Carter, Galbraith & Co., Montreal; Standard Tea Co.; Jackson & Co., and others. The quantity of tea offered has already been given in THE GROCER. The Japans ranged from 12 to 17c.; Japan dust, 4 1-2 to 6c.; Congous, 11 1-2 to 22c.; Gunpowders, 33, and the Young Hysons, 30c.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

St. John, N. B., Nov. 16.

Dullness seems to be the feature of the week. The decline in sugar, which has been so sharp, has enabled the Montreal refineries to do a good business here, they dropping their price a little in advance of the refineries here. The drop found quite a stock of sugar on hand. Holders are not pushing sales, as the feeling here is that the low price is made to aid the buying of raws, and that when the object was gained the price would again advance. There has has been some disappointment here in regard to the late elections in the States, as the opinion is it will have an influence on tariff legislation in that country that will not be to our advantage, as there are many things we would like to market there which at present we cannot do owing to their high duties.

Canned Goods.—The movement in canned goods here this year has been far in advance of any previous one, one firm handling as many as fourteen cars and another ten. The prices from first hands have ranged low. This accounts for the fact that in some cases wholesale stocks are light. Some, however, feeling that prices would be better, have not pushed sales, and in their case stocks are large. Prices to-day: Corn, 90c.; peas, 90c.; tomatoes, $1; salmon, $1.40; beef 2's, $2.50 to $2.60; oysters 2's, $2.25 to $2.40.

Dried Fruit and Nuts.—New goods along all lines are now in the market, and in round lots some low prices are heard. There will be a good deal of California dried fruit in this market this year. This fruit is yearly growing in popularity both on account of its excellent quality and on account of the manner in which it keeps. The prices are a little lower than last week. We quote: Off-stalk Valencias, 4 3-4 to 5c.; Valencia layers, 5 3-4 to 6c.; London layers, $2.40; currants in bbls., 3 3-4c.; cases, 4 1-2c.; dried apples, 6c.; evaporated, 10 1-2 to 11c. In nuts prices are the same as last week: Peanuts, 10c.; filberts, 10 to 11c.; walnuts, 10 to 13c.; Brazil, 10 to 11c.; almonds, 13 to 15c.; peccans, 12c.; dates, 5 1-2 to 6 1-2c.; prunes, 6 3-4 to 7c.; figs, 10 to 12c.

Sugar.—The price of granulated is off 1-2 cent, and the feeling is unsteady. It is thought that if the price should fall off enough parties from the other side might step in and buy largely in raws and cause a sharp advance. Prices to-day: Granulated, 5c.; yellows, 4 1-4 to 4 1-2c.

Molasses.—The feeling is firm and prices remain the same as last week. We quote: Best Barbadoes, 31 to 32c.; second do., 29 to 30; Antigua, 28 to 30c.; Porto Rico, 32 to 35c.; syrup, in bbls., extra quality, 35c. per gallon.

Dairy Produce.—Eggs are scarce, prices have advanced, and there is every reason to expect the price will be higher, the price in the country being in many cases higher than here. Butter remains as last week, good being in extra good demand. In cheese the market is firm and holders are looking forward to higher prices. Prices are to-day: Creamery butter, 23 to 25c.; dairy do., 20 to 22c.; store packed do., 18 to 20c.; eggs, cases, 19c.; do., bbls., 18c.; cheese, 10 1-2 to 11c.

Fruit.—Apples continue to arrive in in large quantities and find a good market. They are in splendid condition, particularly the Bishop Rippon apples. Some kirds particularly look as if they were not going to keep well. It would look as if packers of apples were learning a good lesson, as they run through the barrels better than ever before. Every barrel should have the packer's name on it and he should be compelled to pay if it did not turn out right. Lemons are firm and unchanged in price. We quote: Apples, $2 to $3; oranges, West India, $6 to $7 per bbl.; $2.50 to $3.10 per box; grapes, per keg, $5 to $6; per basket, 30 to 40c.; Florida oranges, $3.50 to $4; peaches, per crate, $1.50 to $2; pears, $2.50 to $3.50; onions, per crate, $1; per bbl., $3.

Provisions.—Pork and beef continue high. Pork per carcase finds a ready sale at 7 1-2 to 8c. It has been bought live weight to go to the Upper Provinces as high as 7c., but this is not a general price, but it leads one to think that the market will continue firm. Clear mess, $23 to $23.50; mess, $22; P. E. I. prime mess, $18 to $18.50; plate beef, $14 to $14.50; pure lard, 12 1-2 to 13c.; compound, 10 to 11c.

Fish.—Prices remain as last week, though pollock are easier. We quote: Codfish, large, $4 to $4.20; medium do., $3.40 to $3.50; haddock, $1.80 to $2; pollock, $1.90 to $2; bay herring, bbls, $2.75 to $3; hf. bbls., $1.40 to $1.50; shad, $7 per hf bbl.; smoked herring, 10 to 11c.; Canso, bbls., $5 to $5.25; hf. bbls., $2.50 to $2.75; Shelburne No. 1, bbls., $3.75 to $4, hf bbls., $2.25 to $2.35; do., No. 2, bbls., $3 to $3.25; hf. bbls., $1.75 to $1.80; dulce, 6c.

Salt.—Coarse, 50c.; fine, $1.10.

TRADE SALES.

The stock of C. D. Ferguson, merchant of Aurora, has been sold by Suckling to N. Hockin of Toronto for 77½c. on the dollar cash.

The stock of the estate of L. B. Montgomery & Co. of this city was sold at Sucklings for 29½c. on the dollar to the Canadian Mineral Wool Co. of Bay street. The stock was about $6,000.

N. E. Grocer: We have interviewed good authority on the subejct of the new pickle crop and supply. As a matter of fact the pickle crop is rather short about all over the country—that is, it is not nearly up to the average. There was no stock carried over from last year's supply, to amount to anything. So the pickle business should be in a pretty good condition. But business is so quiet that it is hard to tell what the future will bring forth. Many of the manufacturers are short of stocks, but there is still enough in the country to go around. Some of the manufacturers have enough, and those are cutting prices. The situation seems to be about evenly balanced, and in ordinary times, if conditions of trade were nominal, the pickle outlook would be in a good condition. As it is the outlook is very far from dubious.

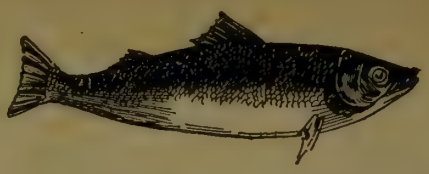
THE SITUATION IN RICE.



It is a question, says Chicago Grocer, whether there ever was a time in the history of the country when the situation on rice was so universally important as it is during the present season. The severe storms throughout the rice producing districts of the South did much material damage to the crop both before it was harvested and directly afterwards while it was yet in stacks that the exact amount of harm has never been fully computed. Statements have been sent out from New Orleans and other cities, generally regarded as basis of supply on this important item of commerce, which, if fully verified, as one well-known Chicago broker recently remarked, "make ordinary rice worth about ten cents per ounce." That many of these reports were purposely exaggerated with the idea of booming prices may easily be understood by anyone who has given the subject a moment's thought. And yet the question remains, what was the actual damage? In answer to the question we give the following extract from an editorial which recently appeared in the New Orleans Picayune, but even this must be considered with due allowance for the fact that the journal quoted serves a constituency which demands that it favor a "bull" market in preference to the other side of the question. This does not mean that the figures mentioned are in the least questionable, but rather where there is uncertainty known to exist the tendency is to magnify the damage rather than to underestimate it. The Picayune says:

Very nearly three months of the rice season have now elapsed, and the movement of the cereal to market during that time should show in some measure the probable size of the crop. The total receipts of rough rice at New Orleans to date have amounted to 301,397 sacks, as compared with receipts for the same time last year of 620,600 sacks, in other words, less than half the amount has been received this year than was the case up to this time last season.

With these facts before the trade it will be hard to persuade anybody that the crop will prove more than a million bags. That this is the prevailing impression is proven by the advance in prices which has taken place, and by the very general disposition of receivers of good grades to hold them back for better prices.

An interesting feature in connection with the movement of the crop to date is the almost complete disappearance of the large stock of old crop rice carried over at the beginning of the season. This rice was at one time a heavy burden to the market, but it has now been pretty thoroughly absorbed, and much of it was sold at very good prices, bringing the owners out even, and in some cases ahead, where a large loss was confidently expected at the end of last season.

With the stock of old rice absorbed, and with every evidence of a short crop, there is no reason why rice should not sell at good prices during the rest of the season. It has already improved considerably, but well-posted men believe that the situation warrants still better prices.

CANNED SALMON AGAIN.

DEAR GROCER,—Remarks re cutting prices of above, referred to in your last issue, reads very much as if written by a traveler who could not, or was unsuccessful in placing many orders to arrive, and now uses the opportunity of saying "I told you so," when at one time, no doubt, he would eagerly have taken an order as all others did. At prices offered four months ago all announced "rock bottom," not one spoke of lower prices, and when he speaks of "avoiding selling to arrive," he knows well enough such firms who do not post their men on "future delivery" are losing trade, or, in other words, "not up to date," and should there be one man who advised his customers not to buy his photo ought to have a prominent position in your paper. It may please him to know my stock is not large and such brands as I have cannot be bought cheaper, unless from some traveler, whom I referred to in a previous number, who knows I have enough for the present, and thinks he can make retailers feel blue with a lower quotation when goods are not wanted. If he would re-read what he has written a reply to, a different thought will probably strike him than imagining anyone attempting to give "pointers" to the wholesale trade as to how to conduct their "respective businesses."

Yours, etc., A SUBSCRIBER.

TEA $178 PER POUND.

Warren Bros. & Boomer have a sample of the celebrated Silver Tip Ceylon tea which secured the gold medal at Chicago and obtained a similar honor at the Kimberley (Australia) exhibition in 1891. This tea is valued at $178 per pound. It is not, however, on account of its commercial value that it is quoted at such an extraordinarily high figure. What makes the price is the peculiar way in which it is picked and dried. The leaf must be the top one only of the branch and must be gathered without bruising, as the slightest bruise would disqualify it. The drying is done by the sun. The leaf as cured is long and gray in color, and by the uninitiated would never be taken for that of tea. To the touch it feels like plush. The tea attracted a good deal of attention, and one expert, ignorant of what it was, who was tasting it in the liquor, valued it at 35c. per pound. When he was told that it was valued at $178 per pound the expression of his face can be better imagined than described.

EXHAUSTED GINGER.

It is of the first importance that every grocer should be acquainted with the way in which the goods he sells are dealt with by those who manufacture them. A grocer is not an analyst, and the small profits of his business will not allow him to enjoy the expensive luxury of having all his purchases analysed by a scientific man, prior to offering them for sale to his customers. Our readers will therefore be interested in a discussion which took place at a meeting of the Society of Public Analysts which was held in June last, and at which a paper on "Ginger, with special reference to discrimination between genuine and exhausted specimens," was presented by Dr. Bernard Dyer and Mr. J. F. H. Gilbard, both analysts of very high repute. These gentlemen say: "It is well known that ginger which has been 'exhausted' or 'extracted' by mineral water manufacturers find a ready market as an adulterant of genuine ground ginger, and that the detection of such adulteration is infrequent, although dealers in honest spices have long groaned under the unfair competition to which such adulteration subjects them." After giving a great many details of the results of analyses which have been made, and describing the processes employed, they conclude with the following:—"While it appears to be unfortunately true that some samples of genuine ginger may be mixed with a considerable quantity of exhausted ginger without affording conclusive analytical evidence of the fact, it is at the same time, we venture to think, obvious that in a great many cases the addition may be detected, and that at all events much of the flagrant adulteration of ground ginger which is commonly believed to exist might be prevented by analytical vigilance." The question then arises whether such an admixture is an adulteration within the meaning of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act. The analysts above-mentioned give it as their opinion that to mix spent ginger with whole ginger is as much an act of adulteration as to mix skim milk with whole milk. But in the case of Lane v. Collins it was decided that it was not an offenre under section 6 of the act to sell milk which has been skimmed as milk, because the judges held that it was still milk, although the cream had been taken from it. Then, too, it appears to us that whilst it is the province of the analyst to determine the quality of an article it is somewhat beyond his proper limits to interpret the law relating to the sale of goods. We have noticed in more than one instance that a public analyst has appended to his certificate an expression of his opinion as to how the law should be interpreted in relation to the article which he had been called upon to examine. Magistrates have been heard to deprecate this, and we are by no means sure that they would not pursue the same course if in court an analyst were to use the phrase "flagrant adulteration of ground ginger" in relation to the sale of an admixture of exhausted ginger with whole ginger. That point, however, is a subject for discussion. What will most interest our readers is the possibility of their being imposed upon by the poorer article being supplied to them when they have ordered ginger of full strength and quality. That this is being done by unscrupulous dealers we have more than once been positively assured, and in the course of the discussion on the paper from which we have quoted, one speaker said that "to his knowledge a very large bulk of spent ginger which was used for trade purposes, was re-mixed and sold to the unwary as whole ginger." Another speaker said he knew of an actual case where ginger, which had been thoroughly extracted with strong spirit, and which was merely a mass of cellulose, fibre, and starchy matter, with no resin left, and practically tasteless, was used for adulteration purposes to his certain knowledge. Such conduct is, of course, scandalous, and deserving of the most public exposure. We may explain for those who are not familiar with this "trick of the trade," that manufacturers of cordials as well as ginger beer makers put the ginger they use through certain chemical processes by which they obtain the volatile essential oil which is the valuable property in ginger. The fibrous substance which is left after these processes is what is called "spent" ginger. Unscrupulous dealers grind this up with a proportion, generally small, of the whole ginger, and, by certain methods of doctoring, produce a ground ginger which is bright in color and of pungent flavor, and which sometimes the analysts tell us might deceive the very elect; this preparation they sell at a very low price, against which of course the unsophisticated article stands but little chance. On this subject our contemporary, the Produce Markets Review, which is always well informed, says:—"Any so-called ground ginger of a very light color offered at a low price should at once be regarded as suspicious, and purchases should be confined to houses known to be incapable of the practice in question. One infallible test is to be found when quotations are made for ground ginger 20s. to 30s. per cwt. below the price of whole ginger offered at the same time; whereas the cost of grinding alone ranges from ¼d. to 2½d. per lb., according to the fineness of the grinding and sifting." From the foregoing brief statements of what we believe to be the facts, our readers will learn the necessity which there is for them to be on their guard in buying, and to be forewarned is to be forearmed.—Grocers Chronicle.

DOES AGE IMPROVE FLOUR?

Flour fresh from the mill is in its best state. Flour left for weeks or months in bins or barrels may take on new scents and other attributes; but these are not improvements. They are the result of partial decomposition, of absorption from surroundings, and from changes that naturally carry the flour away from the normal. Flour may be "aged" exactly as cheese is "aged," says an exchange, but flour that is "high" from the absorption, from the decomposition of starch, from the weakening of its gluten, and from the growth of bacteria, is certainly not improved. Bakers say that flour is more easily handled, and makes the best and longest-keeping bread when it is newest. Buckwheat flour, rye flour are familiar examples of what takes place with "aging," and in wheat flour the deterioration is simply less marked. Much that is called improvement is simply a matter of taste in the consumer. One likes fresh butter and new cheese, while another prefers rancid butter and "high cheese." Just the same way age "improves" flour by changes that introduce new features. But is it improvement?—Practical Baker.

There is very little of the spirit of live and let live in the business world of to-day. In some quarters there seems to be an entire absence of it. And the Pharmaceutical Society of England seems to be badly afflicted in this respect. At least this is what is to be inferred from its actions of late. The law stipulates that any person who shall sell or keep an open shop for the retailing of poisons, not being a chemist, shall for every such offence pay a penalty of £5; also that it is unlawful to sell any poison unless the box, bottle, wrapper or cover be labelled with the name of the article and the word "poison," and with the name and address of the seller. Some time ago the Pharmaceutical Society or its legal advisers put an extended construction on the law which its makers never probably intended should be. The particular construction was that patent medicines came under the category of poisons. The intention was obvious: The pharmaceutical people wanted to stop the English shopkeepers, who had been selling these medicines, for nobody knows how long, with benefit instead of injury to the public, from further trafficing in them. The legal machinery was put into operation and victims were soon struggling within its intricacies. Almost unceasingly this work of persecution has gone on for some time. Many of the cases were of a most frivolous and petty character. The bottles of medicine which the unfortunate shopkeepers had sold probably for many years were submitted to analysts for investigation. There is poison in nearly everything; and of course poison would be found in the proprietary medicines submitted to the analyist. Then ten chances to one it was woe to the unhappy storekeeper. Occasionally the pharmacists carried their persecutions too far, and then the results were against them. This was the trouble the other day in an appeal case heard before a London court. A Manchester storekeeper had been charged with an infringement of the act in having sold a preparation known as licoricine and which contained morphine. The bottle containing it had a notice pasted thereon which read: "This preparation combines the properties of licorice root, chlorodyne, etc., and to insure its careful use, according to printed directions, the Pharmacy Act, 1868, require it to be labelled 'Poison.'" The analyist who examined the preparation and found morphine therein was not prepared to say whether the taking of the whole contents of the bottle would do an adult any harm. The judge thereupon gave judgment for the defendant, hence the appeal. But in the appeal case the Pharmaceutical Society was no more successful than in the first instance, the verdict of all the presiding judges going against it. The result of this case is important in the precedent it establishes, namely, that in order to make out a case against a storekeeper for selling proprietary medicines it must be proven that the bottle containing the preparation has in it sufficient poison to kill an adult.

These persecutions that are being carried out in England against inoffending storekeepers are all the more interesting to the merchants in Ontario who handle patent medicines in that they give them an idea what they might have experienced had the Ontario Pharmaceutical Society succeeded in getting its obnoxious amendments adopted at the last session of the Ontario Legislature. It is improbable, however, that one knock-out will deter the Ontario pharmacists from making further attempts to gain their object. It may take a good many to do that. At any rate they will bear close watching. Next year the general elections for the province will be held, and it would not be at all inopportune for the merchants in every constituency to sound the candidates as to their beliefs in this matter. An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure.

A good deal has been written and said of late regarding the advisability of retail merchants making greater efforts in the way of soliciting trade. Regarding such propositions we have nothing but what is favorable to say. Much could be done in the premises; but at the same time, in the soliciting of trade the desirability of getting customers to the store should not be lost sight of. Personal acquaintanceship between merchant and customer is one of the things most to be desired. It not only minimizes the possibility of friction but makes the doing of business much more pleasant. The wholesalers know this, hence the assiduity with which they try to cultivate the acquaintance of the country merchant during the fall exhibitions, particularly sending out invitations to them to call and see them and look through their warehouses, and going so far as to keep their travelers home to entertain them.

We cover the ground from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and have double the circulation of any other journal in Canada.

How country merchants are to secure the desideratum of a better acquaintanceship with their customers is largely a matter for themselves to determine. They know best the peculiarities of their customers and how they may best cater to them. At the same time a suggestion or so in the premises may not be amiss. One fundamental requisite is a courteous and obligiug demeanor on the part of the merchant and his clerks. Inattention and discourtesy are two things that man, woman or child will not brook. Other magnets whereby customers may be drawn to the store are cleanliness of the person and store, and well and uniquely dressed windows. Attractive and nicely worded advertisements telling of some line of goods that you may have to show them will also do much in the premises. Solicit trade by all means, but let it be a means to an end, and that end the bringing of customers to your store.

Commission men have been complaining for some weeks regarding the condition of some of the dressed poultry when it reaches them. The particular cause of the complaint is in the matter of packing. Poultry packed in close cases during such mild weather as we have been experiencing this fall does not by any means tend to improve its quality. On the contrary, it positively injures it, a damp and clammy condition being imparted to it, and this has been the characteristic of a good deal of the poultry that has been brought into Toronto market this fall. The result naturally has been a depreciation in the value, in some instances considable, while much discontent has been engendered among shippers, much of which would have been obviated had proper care been exercised in the packing. To ensure dressed poultry arriving in good condition it should be wrapped in paper and put in crates. Poultry packed in this way appreciates rather than depreciates in value, as is frequently the case with poultry shipped in close boxes.

DECISION RE ASSIGNMENTS.

An important decision was given in the Ontario Court of Appeal Saturday regarding the Law of Assignments and Preferences. July 18th last the Breithaupt Leather Co. placed a writ against the goods of a merchant named Marr in the hands of the sheriff of Simcoe, who seized the goods the same day. Two days afterwards Beardmore & Co. and Park & Co. also placed writs in the hands of the sheriff. July 26 Marr made an assignment. Between August 8 and September 5 a number of other writs were placed in the sheriff's hands for execution. In distributing the estate the sheriff proceeded to do so pro rata. This, of course, meant that the Breithaupt Leather Co., Beardmore & Co. and Park & Co. were to rank with the ordinary creditors, their writs executed before the assignment counting for nothing. The Breithaupt company took exception to this method of distributing the assets, and brought suit in the county court of Simcoe. The judge's decision was against the plaintiffs. Not satisfied they took the case before the Court of Appeal. Friday the finding of that court was contrary to that of the Simcoe court. This means that the three writs issued before the assignment was made must be satisfied before any distribution of assets is made between the other creditors. This is practically an endorsation of the decision of Justice Galt, who declared ultra vires section nine of the Ontario Assignments and Preferences Act, which section had been created to prevent writs issued prior to an assignment and still unsatisfied taking precedence over claims of other creditors.

ABOUT DRIED CURRANTS.

The report that advices from Patras bespoke greater firmness on dried currants has occasioned some comment in the grocery trade in Montreal, but the impression seems to be that any change from now out will not have any appreciable effect on the valuation of the fruit in Canada. In this connection some interesting comparisons have been made of the situation this fall, and the way currants were held on the market last season at the same time. As everyone knows, the currant market opened this year with prices unprecedentedly low, so low in fact that an advance of some kind or other was almost a foregone conclusion, so that grocers are not surprised that Patras cables have a firm tone. Owing to these low prices, however, Montreal houses bought freely of currants at the low values, and now supplies either here or on the way are considered to be ample, while the fact that they are well distributed also is another argument in favor of a moderate range of value. Last fall the circumstances were different. Practically all the currants in Montreal were controlled by one firm, who had their price and would not listen to any talk of concession. As a consequence unprovided jobbers neither had any supplies of their own under control, nor could they procure them on the open market, and consequently, if they wanted the goods had to pay for them. This year the case, as we have said, is entirely different, for several houses have supplies both on spot and on the way which they consider to be amply sufficient for all their possible wants. They do not look for any material change in the price of currants, therefore, although the primary markets may stiffen up a trifle, but it may be noted that even at the last advance cabled from Patras the cost and freight prices are low compared with those ruling in previous seasons.

CITY TRAVELERS' "AT HOME."

Successful was the At Home given by the City Travelers' Association Friday night in St. George's Hall. The guests were city travelers, non-members of the Association. There were over a hundred present, and everyone's cup of pleasure seemed to be well filled. And it was not surprising, for "Mine Host" the Association had anticipated to a degree the entertainment of its guests. Excellent and varied was the musical program, choice and plentiful the cigars, ample the refreshments, and attentive to the comfort of their guests were the members of the Association. This was the program the guests listened to as they paused in their card playing, conversations and puffed their cigars: Five-shot Quintet Club, Messrs. Horden, Collins, Macdonald, Charlton, Hoogs; Harmony Quintet Club, Messrs. Dinnick, Gorrie, Verral, Adamson; banjo and guitar duet, Messrs. Horden and Collins; ventriloquist, Mr. Hoogs; sexaphone soloist, J. W. King; reader, Mr. Howitt; soloists, E. B. Piggott, J. R. Morrison, Mr.Major, Macdonald, Gorrie, A. J. Tipping; piano soloist, W. Dunn. W. T. Harrison was accompanist, and R. M. Corrie master of ceremonies.

Something which the guests listened to with apparently as much interest as did they the program, was the address of the President of the Association, James Owen, in which he gave a brief and lucid history of the Association, its aims and objects, and the work it has accomplished. He said that the projectors had felt that there was no need of forming an insurance scheme in connection with the Association, because the Commercial Travelers' Association covered the ground in that respect. It was therefore decided to make the Association a beneficiary organization. "A man insures his life, he insures his property, and why should not a man insure himself against sickness?" he queried amid applause. During the past year they had had a big draught on the sick fund and yet the Association was to-day more prosperous than ever, and for a young organization had a handsome surplus. (Loud applause). "The point I want to make," continued Mr. Owen, as he took his hands from his trousers' pockets and laid his index finger in the palm of his right hand, "is this: If we can do so much with so small a membership what could we do if all the city travelers took an active interest in the Association." Those present saw the point, smiled and applauded vigorously.

DOINGS OF COUNTRY MERCHANTS.

F. Krug, of Tavistock, is in receipt of a large consignment of fruit.

Watson Bros., of Guelph, have just received a full line of Christmas fruits.

C. A. Nearn, of Goderich, has made preparations for a big Christmas trade.

The sale which T. Mills, of Wingham, has been carrying on has proved a success.

Henry & Trask, groceries, boots and shoes, Drayton, have dissolved. E. G. Henry continues.

Coutleon Bros., of Clinton, have made a big shipment of fruit and butter to New Brunswick.

P. Anderson, one of Guelph's merchants, is anticipating a trip to the Old Country after Christmas.

D. C. Strachan, of Goderich, has refitted his store and it is now said to be one of the finest in the West.

Fish King Hay, of Kincardine, is expecting a big consignment of fresh water salt herrings and trout.

E. J. Madden, of Newburg, has shipped 2,000 boxes of cheese to England. He paid from 10 to 10 1-4c. per lb. for it.

J. E. McElderry & McCrae, of Guelph, are in receipt of a big consignment of blue fruit and Valencia raisins for the Christmas trade.

Edward and James Walsh, of Stratford, have just returned from the Old country, where they have been with a carload of horses.

Price & Son, of Goderich, have got their store in good shape for the Christmas trade, it being well stocked with groceries of all kinds, especially teas.

John Moffatt, of Kincardine, is now prepared to supply his customers with fruit good and cheap. He is also in receipt of a large consignment of new Japan tea.

The lumber yard and planing mill of W. Murray & Co., North Bay, was burned the other morning. A gentleman who was negotiating for the purchase of the lumber had arrived in town a few hours before the fire broke out. There was no insurance.

John Sullivan, of Wingham, who recently took unto himself a wife, is comfortably settled down in his new home.

R. Y. Fish, of Waterloo, was last week visiting his store and mill in Elmsdale, Muskoka, where he found everything, under the management of Alf. Munn, progressing favorably.

GETTING RICH ON CREDIT.

American shrewdness is well illustrated in a real estate transaction that occurred in a small town not many miles from Pittsburg. On a capital of 75 cents a man possessed himself of a capital of $220,000 worth of property. Six or seven months ago Mr. Blank met with some losses in business which cleaned out what capital he had and left him with 75 cents in his pocket. He realized that something had to be done. Having a place where he was always sure of accommodation, he wasted no time, but on the very day he met his loss he began to look about to turn something up. For a long time he had noticed a 220-acre tract of land adjoining a town of 5,000 inhabitants, which he thought would make a good real estate investment. He went to the agents of the estate and secured a 90-days option on the place for $350. He didn't have the money, but being well known in the neighborhood, was given credit. He next engaged a surveyor, who laid the plot out in 1,600 lots, and charged $750 for his services. This, likewise credit. He thought it would be a good idea to have a street railway located, and, as time was money in his case, he succeeded in getting a charter through, being a friend of the Governor, in three days.

He next announced through advertisements obtained on credit that he desired to sell a number of lots at $250 each, conditionally; that is, no money was to be paid on the purchase until he had broken ground for the location of some manufactory employing not less than 200 men. When such a factory was started, the buyers were to hand to him half the purchase money. In 18 days $85,000 worth of property was disposed of to some of the most solid citizens of that town and Pittsburg, a great deal being sold in blocks. About this time the creditors who had favored him were beginning to press for their money; so, in order to hasten a consummation of his plans, he called upon a prominent manufacturer of Pittsburg and made him a proposition that if he would move his works to this point he would give him so much ground and a cash bonus besides.

All this time the promoter had nothing but his 75 cents, and creditors were pressing him on every side. The manufacturer refused to locate until he had received a deed of the property. The promoter here met another difficulty. He couldn't get a deed until he paid for it. He finally saw a way out of it, and asked the manufacturer if he would begin digging for the foundations, assuring him the deed would be forthcoming in due time. This the manufacturer did, and no sooner was the stone hauled and the ground broken than the real estate man called upon his purchasers for half the purchase money, according to agreement. In a couple of days he had $42,000 in his possession. With this he was able to pay the manufacturer his bonus, to settle all his debts, and by placing several mortgages, to purchase the property. He now has four manufactories under way, two squares of railway laid and 1,200 lots left, after having paid for everything and allowing himself a liberal salary besides.—Pittsburg Despatch.

ELI AND CHAUNCEY.

"I was talking one day with Mr. Depew about demand and supply," writes Eli Perkins. "I said the price of any commodity is always controlled by the demand and supply."

"Not always, Eli," said Depew; "demand and supply don't always govern prices. Business tact sometimes governs them."

"When," I asked, "did an instance ever occur when the price did not depend on demand and supply?"

"Well," said Mr. Depew, "the other day I stepped up to a German butcher and out of curiosity asked:

"'What's the price of sausage?'.

"'Dwenty cents a bound,' he said.

"'You asked twenty-five this morning,' I replied.

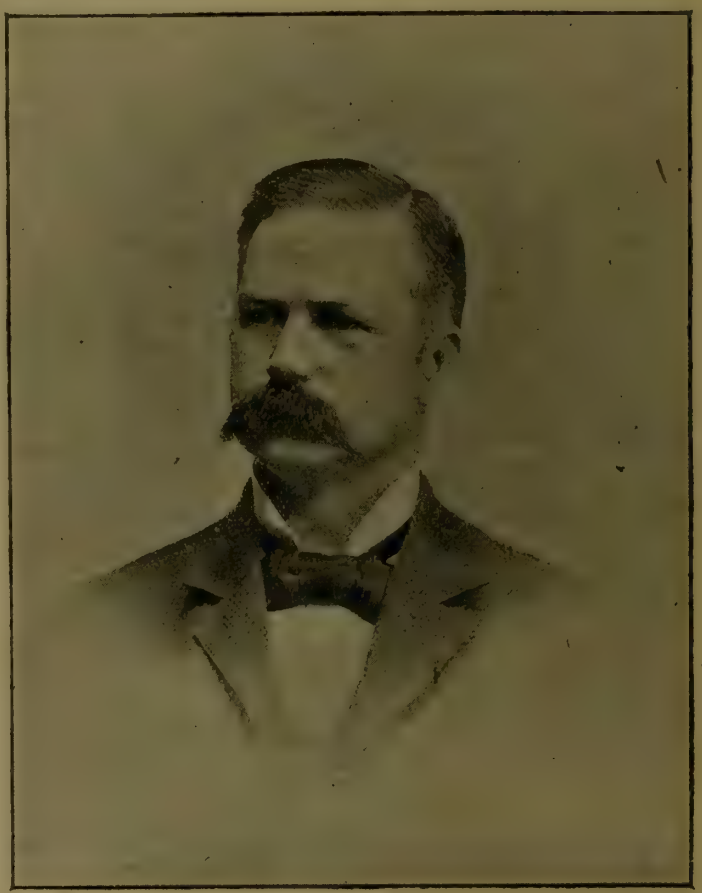
"'Ya, dat vas ven I had some. Now I ain't got none, I sell him for dwenty cends. Dot makes me a rebutation for selling cheab, und I don'd lose noddings.'

"You see," said Mr. Depew, laughing, "I didn't want any sausage, and the man didn't have any; no demand and no supply, and still the price of sausage went down five cents."

"Well, there are strange things in this world," I said. "Now, take the words 'manufacture' and 'make'; I always thought that both words meant the same thing."

"Why, they do, Eli," said Mr. Depew.

"Not always," I said.



"Now, when could they have a different meaning?"

"Why, this morning I came down on a Central car manufactured to carry fifty passengers, but it was made to carry seventy-five people."

"Yes, I dare say; but we'll now talk about the Behring Sea question."—Express Gazette.

R. W. RITCHIE.

The subject of this sketch is the oldest traveler in the employ of Eby, Blain & Co., wholesale grocers, Toronto. When Eby, Blain Co. purchased the business of Wm. Ramsay & Co., Mr. Ritchie was on the road for that firm, having started out two or three months before the transfer of the business was made, and his services were retained by Mr. Eby. Previous to entering the firm of Wm. Ramsay & Co., he, like a good many of his fellow travelers, had served an apprenticeship behind the counter of a country store. His present route lies on the Credit Valley branch C.P.R., the T.G. & B. and the W.G. & B. and includes such towns as Wingham, Mount Forest, Owen Sound, etc. Mr. Ritchie is peculiarly fitted for the duties of a traveler. First of all he knows his business, and he has so carefully fathomed the peculiarities of his customers that he knows just what each one wants or does not want. As a painstaking and conscientious man, none could be scarcely more so. If he has an article which he feels this or that customer would not be able to turn over to advantage, all the powers that be could not force Mr. Richie to sell it him. Then as an expert in Japan teas he stands in the very first rank. None excell him on the Toronto market, and it is doubtful if any equal him. His route runs through a big Japan tea consuming part of the country, and his knowledge of this kind of tea stands him in good stead, for he knows just exactly the districts which are partial to Yokohama or Nagasaki growths or whichever the case may be. Any goods in which he has not unbounded faith find no place in Mr. Ritchie's "grip," and everybody who knows him will tell you his word is as good as his bond. It is no wonder, therefore, that he has been so successful or that he is such a hard man for his brother travelers to follow. "I don't want Ritchie to die," a fellow traveler of his was once heard to say, "but I do wish he was traveling in another section of the country." There are many things characteristic of Mr. Ritchie which younger "Knights of the Grip" or those who essay to become so, may with profit emulate. A good conscience toward all men is a good thing. But if, in the thirst to make good returns to the house, articles are represented to be what they are not this is not possible. His home is in Ingersoll, and his friends say he is as successful as a family man as he is as a traveler.

R. W. Ritchie.

WORLD'S FAIR PRIZES.

The benefit that may be derived by individual persons or firms who have won prizes, medals or awards at the World's Columbian Exhibition, suggests the idea that all this might be made a means of bringing a very great deal of special renown to Canada.

The custom in this fair, as in others, will likely be that these awards will be sent to the Dominion Government at Ottawa, who in its turn will send them to the various Provincial Legislatures to distribute, one at a time, as they are received. A prize winner in this way will not get as much credit for his efforts or expense as he really deserves, nor will his efforts bring him further reputation than he can gain by self-advertising. The benefit therefrom will be small either to him or the country. Again, it will take years before he can recoup himself for his unusual trouble and outlay.

It would be a pity, therefore, if the great efforts that have been put forward by so many of our people to bring credit to our country, should be allowed to pass away without some action having been taken to derive the greatest benefit possible out of what has been tried and accomplished.

It is proposed, therefore, by many Canadians that the Dominion Government retain the awards till all are received. Then in due time have a large gathering in Montreal for the Province of Quebec and the East, and in Toronto for Ontario and the West. To these gatherings invite all the prize winners, who may be represented by proxy if they personally could not be present, when they will receive, with special honor and renown, the reward they have so well earned.

The occasions could be made a great advertisement for Canada, showing the world in a special and marked manner months after the Chicago Fair has passed away and when its excitement cannot mar the interest of our resources and advantages in a renewed and more effective way.

With patriotic speeches by eloquent men and extensive preparations made to have them thoroughly reported in foreign newspapers, each individual would be well recompensed for what he had done for himself and his country, and by the publicity given him induce him and others to put forward greater efforts at the next World's Fair, to show all nations that not only are we a people financially strong, but that in all that pertains to make a great nation, either in art, science, manufactures, agriculture, horticulture, mining or forestry; educationally, piscatorially or any other way, we are able to compete and hold our own.

This idea, therefore, is commended to the care of the Manufacturers' Association and the Boards of Trade of Montreal and Toronto, to open up correspondence with the Government to the above end. There are other associations that would also be glad to join the above mentioned if they were notified and asked to assist, notably the one interested in dairy products.

This journal will be pleased to receive any suggestions from any of our readers that will help.

MUST KNOW HIS BUSINESS.

One of the secrets of success of prosperous business men is their ability to select competent heads of departments. In a large flour mill the man above all others who holds the key to the proprietor's bank account is the head miller, says a milling contemporary. It is important, in fact absolutely necessary, that the head miller should be a thorough master of his trade in his ability to get the best results out of his wheat. In the matter of waste a very slight loss per bushel of wheat or barrel of flour in a thousand barrel mill amounts in the aggregate to a large sum. A loss of one pound per bushel in a year would amount to $15,000.

IT WAS SATISFACTORY.

A retail grocery firm, being asked for a statement of their condition by a jobbing house, gave their assets as follows :

Cash invested in grocery	$1,014 72
Surplus outside of business	4 14
Real estate	2,500 00
Chattel property—pointer pups, etc.	8 35
Tom Collin's note—past due	400 00
Pool checks	2 20
Cereals—mostly pop corn and navy beans	4 26
Hereditary wealth from our uncle in England	00,000 00
Bonds	00 00
Missouri 6's	Just out
Pacific Mail	Non est
Credit Mobiler—registered	0,000 00
Emma Mining Company, 1st mortgage	0,000 00
United States 5's	Are on
Western Union—preferred	U bet

The firm stated that in addition to the above, their personal effects, etc., were as follows :

"One wife and two children, three heating stoves, two left-handed looking glasses, an extension table, with all appurtenances thereunto belonging. Now, gentlemen, you will readily perceive that we are frank—concealing nothing. All our real, personal and chatteral and collateral and hereditary wealth are unfolded to your gaze. We confess that in an unguarded moment we did put one of our children in our wife's name. With that exception, the property is nearly all convertible. Now, brethren, after reviewing the above multitude of wealth, don't get reckless and insist on forwarding two or three carloads of staples. We can't use them. Don't consider us a national bank ; rather put us down as a 'Freedman's bureau savings institution.'"—Ex.

THREE GOOD THINGS.

The three great requisites to healthy, and hence happy living—good air, good water and good nature—are so cheaply obtained that they are very frequently ignored or not estimated at their real value, if the conclusion of Mr. Robert Bonner, says an exchange. In this country, where pure air is to be had for the mere demand, one often sees small windows and few of them in sleeping rooms, or else no provision is made for opening at the top to let out foul or warm air, quite as necessary as the opening at the bottom. Many an invalid would recover could he but live in a constantly purified atmosphere and drink nature's purest beverage. Many another, a victim to indifferent health, would be restored to his norman condition if his mental atmosphere were cleared of all the ill-nature, the petty complainings, envy, malice and uncharitableness of his own or his family which cloud his life. The perfect man, physically or mentally, is he who has discovered that we are simply erring, struggling children, and that an abundance of charity for others' shortcomings will meet a like return and help greatly in preserving serenity.

RESULTS OF ADVERTISING.

The market seems to be fairly well satisfied with the report of the first year of Messrs. A. & F. Pears (Limited). There have been some slight fluctuations since the dividend was announced, but the ordinary shares are still at a substantial premium. Buyers of these shares at the issue price are getting 10 cent on their investments, and those who have bought on the market get 8 to 9 per cent. The total net profit earned has been £70,955. This is within £1,000 of the best year shown by the prospectus before the business passed into the company's hands. In the prospectus a statement appeared to the effect that in the vendors' opinion the advertising expenses could be safely reduced to £80,000 a year from the £104,000 which was spent in 1891. It would appear that they have found this immense sum insufficient. They have spent more than the £80,000 in advertising, and "the vendors have agreed to bear the excess." This shows a very sensitive conscience on the part of the vendors, but it shows quite as clearly how delicately sensitive such an article as soap is to fluctuations in advertising. It is evident that the directors had very quickly found that economy in advertising was not a wise policy.

EVERYBODY USES SOAP

But, not everybody knows what kind to buy.

The soap that is the purest, that does the best work with the least labor, that goes farthest, that can be used on everything washable and by everybody, is the soap which common sense will tell you to buy.

Such a soap is

"Sunlight"

GROCERS find it a pleasure to sell this soap because they know there is no humbug about it, and that every bar sold to a customer means a satisfactory sale and no complaint afterwards.

CUT PRICES.

Some retail storekeepers have the idea when standard preparations are "cut" so that they have to be sold at or very close to cost, that it is better not to handle them, even though they may be called for repeatedly. This method of conducting business is, in my judgment, very unwise as well as unprofitable. It is unprofitable, because it acts as a hindrance to the securing of new trade.

If Mrs. Jones is aware that you do not sell such goods, she will pay her respects to a storekeeper who does, and your competitor, who, perhaps, was compelled to sell certain goods at cost, by keeping them in stock and by letting it be known that he has them on sale, has secured an order for other articles on which he has realized a good profit. And this from your customer. He has profited not only on this sale, but has opened the way for future trade, for his customer is sure to return when in need of the same goods you have refused to keep, and very often will leave an order for other goods and you will awake to find that her custom has been transferred to your competitor.

It is but idle to endeavor to impress upon your customer the fact that you are not handling cut goods, on account of the little or no margin of profit, especially when your neighbor announces in bold letters that the same goods may be obtained at his store at a figure which you have informed your customer is practically the cost of the goods. At once she supposes that you are not as shrewd a buyer as your neighbor, and assumes that if you cannot compete with him on cut goods it would be the same with everything else in your line.

The idea that it is unprofitable to handle cut goods while confined almost exclusively to retailers, is occasionally shared by wholesale houses. To instance a case: Mr. A—, a large wholesale grocer, refused to handle certain goods for the above reason, and gave notice to that effect to the company manufacturing them. By reason of a special inducement offered by this company to the retailers, orders for their goods were secured to be filled by the wholesale house with which the purchaser held business relations. A large retailer turned an order into the company with the request that it be sent to Mr. A— to be filled. Knowing that Mr. A— would "turn down" the order, the purchaser was requested to give the name of another firm with whom he kept an account; which he accordingly did, and they delivered him, not only the cut goods, but secured at the same time, what another member of the firm regarded a "very nice" order for other goods. This house, by cheerfully filling his order, is held in higher esteem by the retailer than is Mr. A—, who, by refusing the order, has sacrificed his customer's future trade which sometimes reached as high as a thousand dollars a month.

When conversing with a certain grocer regarding this action of Mr. A—'s, I was told that not for a moment would he think of acting in this manner to any of his regular trade. He was of the opinion that certain standard preparations would always be sold for less than prices established by the proprietors of the goods; and that it seemed small business for a storekeeper to accept orders on which a good profit was realized, and refuse to supply other goods in his line on account of the small margin.

This to me is the right view of the question, and I find that it is shared by all merchants who are awake to a very important consideration nowadays—the pleasing of one's customers.—J. H. Ingersoll, in Trade.

PRIVATE BRANDS AND CUTTING.

The use of their own private brands by retailers is recommended for two reasons—they serve to advertise the dealer instead of the packer, and they afford the former some protection against injury by the reckless price-cutting of rival merchants, says Merchants' Review. To most retail grocers the last mentioned point is perhaps the most important, because cutting is practised almost universally, while the majority of the trade have small financial resources and are therefore in a practically defenseless position as against the assaults of the "cutters." But this very circumstance also makes it difficult for many dealers to employ a private brand. In order to make it worth the jobbers' or manufacturers' while to pack goods under special labels, the orders must be of a certain magnitude. If only a small lot is ordered, a price above the market rate is charged. A private brand therefore is a luxury that only dealers possessing ample resources can afford. But if a private brand is beyond the reach of the small dealer, he need not be thrown back upon the proprietary brands that are notoriously cut. It is not a case of Hobson's choice, for there is nothing to prevent several dealers forming a purchasing combine for the purpose of obtaining the discounts for quantities, and having the goods packed under some title that may be mutually agreed upon—the goods afterwards to be distributed among the members of the combine in such quantities as may be required by each grocer. This, in fact, is the method employed by an association of retail merchants in a neighboring State that has adopted the co-operative system in the purchase of supplies for the members, and all articles that it is desirable to have packed under a trade brand or labeled by the jobber with the association's own label, there being, no doubt, a mutual understanding in the combination that prices of such goods are to be resolutely maintained. Whether the example set will be generally followed by other retail associations only time can reveal, but the plan seems to offer to the smaller dealers a very simple yet effective solution of the cutting problem, so far as some grocers' specialties are concerned.

The destruction of profits on proprietary goods, through the keen competition among retail distributers, has long been a source of bitter complaints in the grocery trade, and in Europe as well as in this country. In England, according to a London trade journal, the dissatisfaction at the unremunerative character of the trade in proprietary articles has resulted in a determination on the part of some of the grocers not to handle such goods in the future, the latter declaring that they will no longer allow their stores to be turned into advertising depots for the benefit of manufacturers.

ANOTHER BRITISH BREAD HORROR

British taste appears to run to the horrible in breads. Says the London, England, Confectioners' Union: When will it end, this perpetual patenting of bread and biscuit mixtures? The public do not appear to appreciate them, yet hardly a week passes without some self-appointed savior of mankind lodging a specification at the patent office and paying heavily for the privilege. The latest recruit to the swollen ranks of inventors of "patent mixtures" is John Whittaker, a baker, residing in Backford street, Halifax, who says that the object of his invention "is to manufacture bread, biscuits, biscuit powder, and other bread goods so that they will be more nutritious than bread as at present manufactured." It is well known that hypophosphite of calcium and calcium hydrate are ingredients or properties necessary and good for the human system and freouently prescribed by medical men. One or both of these medical properties Mr. Whittaker proposes to combine and blend with flour for the purpose of being made into bread. The following is an example of manufacturing the bread containing these ingredients when making, say, eight stones of bread, to do which, says the inventor, "I should add the necessary quantity of flour, together with seven gallons of milk, one ounce of calcium hydrate mixed with one gallon of water, four ounces of hypophosphite of calcium, and the usual amount of sugar, lard and yeast, according to the judgment and discretion of the baker; afterwards the whole is then kneaded and baked into bread. In making biscuits and other fancy breads, the proportion of hypophosphite of calcium and calcium hydrate would be slightly increased, but I do not limit myself to the exact proportions of ingredients enumerated above, as they may be somewhat varied according to requirements, nor do I confine myself to use both the above-named ingredients, as the calcium hydrate may be omitted."

The many friends of Mr. Frank Gourley will regret to learn of his demise at Maple Creek, N.W.T., on Wednesday. The deceased was a former Montrealer, and married a Montreal lady, Miss Macdonald, since deceased, by whom he leaves ope son. For years he was a member of the firm of Gourley & Nolan, long since dissolved, after which he went to the Northwest, where besides a ranch of 4,000 acres, he kept a general store. In both political and social circles in this city he was always a favorite and many will regret his departure from life.—Gazette, Montreal.

Storing apples in barrels lined with newspapers is an experiment made by a western farmer. He opened barrels that had been packed for a long time and found that in those unlined more or less of the fruit decayed, while in paper-lined barrels every apple was sound and in fine condition.

The crop of potatoes in the Province of Prince Edward Island this year is enormous, and the potatoes are of splendid quality. The result has been that this market has been flooded with them. It is estimated that there are over 200,000 bushels now in port. As a large number of additional cargoes are expected this week it was decided to send three cargoes of the present surplus to Boston, and three vessels are being loaded and will proceed to the Hub at once. It is probable further cargoes will be shipped there soon. Potatoes are retailing from vessels here at 25 cents per bushel.

The trade returns for the month of October and for the four months of the present fiscal year were issued by the Customs Department Friday. The exports for the month show an increase over the corresponding month last year of $2,259,656, which to a certain extent reduces the decrease for the four months. The value of the exports so far this year is $52,741,554, as against $53,260,513 last year. The imports for the four months are valued at $44,063,242, as against $42,268,425, an increase of nearly two millions. The duty collected this year amounts to $7,291,824, as compared with $7,345,945.

Reeve Welsh, one of the best-known men in Western Ontario, and who has for years carried on a large produce trade with farmers at Stoney Point, left home ten days ago. His disappearance caused considerable alarm among his friends, who were unable to account for his continued absence. He was finally located in Detroit, and Friday

The Council of the Board of Trade has adopted and forwarded to the Postmaster-General the report of a committee of the council on Government insurance of registered letters, declaring: (1) That the revenue derived by the Government from the sale of registration stamps amounts to a considerable sum during the course of a year, while the proportion of loss is very small; (2) that a guarantee by the Government of the safe delivery of all registered matter, or, failing that, the reimbursement of the amount lost, would be of great value to all who use that means of conveying valuables; and (3) that the Government should be urged to adopt some means whereby the desired security could be given, provided such could be done without the imposition of any material extra charge in the cost of registration.

CHEESE IN THE BIBLE.

The beginning of the cheese industry is buried in the oblivion of the past. That it is very ancient is beyond question. The first mention of it, historically, is found in the book of Job, chapter 10, verse 10: "Hast thou not * * * curdled me like cheese?" The original Hebrew word here used is gebinah, which means curdled milk, the earliest known form of cheese. The next mention of cheese in the Bible is found in I. Samuel 17:18: "Carry these ten cheeses unto the captain," the commission of Jesse to his son David, with reference to his three brothers, who were with the army under Saul. The Hebrew here has charitse hech, which means the cuttings and slicings of cheese. This shows that cheese was being made in solid form, and was not merely curdled milk. The third and last mention of cheese in the Bible is found in II. Samuel, 17:29: "and sheep and cheese of kine for David." The insurrection of Absolom had driven David from Jerusalem, and those faithful to his cause were in danger of starvation. Among the food supply sent to the camp of David was cheese. The word here used is shaphah—cheese of kine, or cheese made from cow's milk. The use of this distinctive term is an evidence that cheese was made from the milk of animals other than cows, or it would not have been necessary to so distinguish it. It was an article of food, and, most probably, in the days of Saul, a luxury, as David was told to carry it to the captain, no doubt of the "hundred" to which his brethren belonged. The reference in II. Samuel would indicate that it was a luxury enjoyed only by the rich, as the cheese mentioned was for David. Whatever may have been the character of the cheese mentioned in these three references they certainly put beyond question the great antiquity of cheese as an article of diet. The book of Job was written 1,520 years before the beginning of the Christian era—over 3,000 years ago. That cheese was not considered deleterious to health is evident from the fact that it was not prohibited by the law of Moses, as was everything which was likely to be injurious.—Michigan Tradesman.

DRY GOODS.

TORONTO MARKET.

Trade among the wholesale dry goods houses has not shown any extra development on spring delivery. Sorting orders have had a better tone owing to the colder weather experienced. Overcoatings and heavy goods have been in increased demand. Holiday novelties are being closely inspected, and some very liberal purchases reported. Silks remain quiet, but general dress goods are in very fair demand. Wools are active.

Linen threads are steady at the 10 per cent. advance announced on November 1st. The raw material is still high at manufacturing centres.

Collections are only moderate, but very few weak points have been disclosed.

A repeat of estamene serges, cheviots and hopsacking is to hand in navys and blacks in Alexander & Anderson's dress goods department.

Japanese handkerchiefs in all the different varieties are in full stock with Caldecott, Burton & Spence. They are making specialties of these and of kid gloves for the holiday trade. Japanese doylies and Swiss silk handkerchiefs are being offered including many novelties. Childrens, misses', ladies' and men's lined kid mitts and gloves are shown in an extra large ranges, and inquiries are reported good.

W. R. Brock & Co. are making a special display of their printed figures, such as dolls, pug dogs, cats and kittens, monkeys, etc. These goods come in short ends of about 25 yards, and have from 2 to 8 figures in each yard. These are used by the consumer by cutting out the figures, sewing the parts together and stuffing the toy to make it resemble the natural object.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have just received a shipment of Japanese silk embroidered scarfs, table covers, piano drapes, especially brought out for the holiday trade. The goods comprise the newest art shades in gold, lemon, old rose, pink, light and dark sky, reds, nile and mossgreen. The embroidery on these goods is done with gold thread and is exceedingly rich and handsome. The designs are the newest and are at the same time strikingly neat.

John Macdonald & Co. have a fresh shipment of military, hercules and serpentine braids to hand. Silver and gold braids are reviving. They have all widths in all these varieties. Wool goods are active. They have Canadian and Northwest yQuearns, en City and Standard Saxony, Standard Andalusians, J. and D., Super Scotch, J. and J., Baldwin's Beehive, and two, four and eight fold Berlin wools. All colors are found in the above.

LARD.

Lard is a term applied to the fat of the slaughtered hog, separated from the other tissues of the animal by the aid of heat.

In the crude state it is composed chiefly of the glycerides of the fatty acids, oleic and stearic or palmitic, with small portions of the connective tissues, animal gelatine and other organic matters.

Kinds of Lard.—According to the parts of the fat used and the methods of rendering it, lard is divided into several classes. According to methods of rendering, lard is classified as kettle and steam. From material used the following classification may be made:

Neutral Lard.—Neutral lard is composed from the fats derived from the leaf of the slaughtered animal, taken in a perfectly fresh state. The leaf is either chilled in a cold atmosphere or treated with cold water to remove the animal heat. It is then reduced to a pulp in a grinder and passed at once to the rendering kettle. The fat is rendered at a temperature of 105 to 120 deg. F. (40 to 50 deg. C.). Only a part of the lard is separated at this temperature and the rest is sent to other rendering tanks to be made into another kind of product. The lard obtained as above is washed in a melted state with water containing a trace of sodium carbonate, sodium chloride, or a dilute acid. The lard thus formed is almost neutral, containing not to exceed twenty-five per cent. free acid; but it may contain a considerable quantity of water and some salt. This neutral lard is used, almost exclusively in making butterine (oleomargarine).

Leaf Lard.—The residue unrendered in the above process is subjected to steam heat under pressure, and the fat thus obtained is called leaf lard. Formerly this was the only lard recognized on the Chicago Board of Trade, and was then made of the whole leaf.

Choice Kettle Rendered Lard.—The quantity of lard required for butterine does not include all of the leaf produced. The remaining portions of the leaf together with the fat cut from the backs, are rendered in steam jacketed open kettles, and produce a choice variety of lard known as "Kettle Rendered." The hide is removed from the back fat before rendering, and both leaf and back fat are passed through a pulping machine before they enter the kettle. Choice lard is thus defined by the regulations of the Chicago Board of Trade:

Choice Lard.—To be made from leaf and trimmings only, either steam or kettle rendered, the manner of rendering to be branded on each tierce.

Prime Steam Lard.—The prime steam lard of commerce is made as follows: The whole head of the hog, after the removal of the jowl, is used for rendering. The heads are placed in the bottom of the rendering tank. The fat is pulled off of the small intestines and also placed in the tank. Any fat that may be attached to the heart of the animal is also used. In houses where kettle rendered lard is not made the back fat and trimmings are also used. When there is no demand for leaf lard the leaf is also put into the rendering tank with the other portions of the body mentioned. It is thus seen that prime steam lard may be taken to represent the fat of the whole animal or only portions thereof. The quantity of fat afforded by each animal varies with the market the meat is to be sent to. A hog trimmed for the domestic market will give an average of about 40 pounds, while from one destined for the English market only about 20 pounds of lard will be made. Prime steam lard is thus defined by the Chicago Board of Trade:

Prime Steam Lard.—Standard prime steam lard shall be solely the product of the trimmings and other fat parts of hogs, rendered in tanks by the direct application of steam, and without subsequent change in grain or character by the use of agitators or other machinery, except as such change may unavoidably come from transportation. It shall have proper color, flavor and soundness for keeping, and no material which has been salted shall be included. The name and location of the renderer and the grade of the lard shall be plainly branded on each package at the time of packing.

This lard is passed solely on inspection, the inspector having no authority to supervise rendering establishments in order to secure a proper control of the kettles. According to the printed regulations, any part of the hog containing fat can be legally used.—H. W. Wiley in National Provisioner.

CREDIT TO UNFORTUNATES.

Has a grocer any right to extend credit to an unfortunate family, when he himself lacks proper capital to conduct his business and is being carried along by his jobber?

The above question has been placed before the Philadelphia Retail Grocer's Association. How can there be but one answer—certainly not. The grocer is practically a trustee for the jobber, and is in honor bound to protect his credit with him. The store is not a charitable institution, and sympathy should have no voice in its management unless the proprietor is solvent and in no way prejudices the rights of his creditors. We recognize that it is hard to say No, to one who has suddenly become unworthy of credit, and who, perhaps, has been a former good customer for years. And yet the retail grocer in equity to himself and his creditors is bound not to take any more than ordinary risk in granting credits. When the case is stated as above, there is no excuse for extending credit to unfortunates.—American Grocer.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Nov. 22, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Business if anything has improved slightly during the week. Actually new business is quiet, but there is a good deal of activity around the warehouses shipping dried fruit, etc., for the Christmas trade. Travelers' reports are varied, and range from fairly brisk to quiet. In the city business is fair only with the preference to the suburbs. The market is now well supplied with new Marlot, Grenoble and French walnuts. The only important change in prices is a further decline in sugars. It took place on Monday, and came immediately following the announcement of a decline. It did not excite much interest, being merely what the trade had expected, although its advent was probably rather sooner than anticipated. Payments continue to be the most unsatisfactory feature of the trade, they still being slow.

CANNED GOODS.

Nothing new has developed in this line except it be that there is an increased enquiry for fruits. Tomatoes, peas and corn continue in fair demand at the ruling prices of 80 to 85c. We hear of two or three packers offering tomatoes at 80c., with 75c. bid. Salmon, of the first-class brands, is still selling fairly well for the season, but all the retail merchants are pretty well supplied, and a lull is anticipated till after the holiday. The idea as to price of good brands is $1.25 for talls and $1.50 for flats; cohoes, $1.05 to $1.10. Lobster, of the better brands, is in fair demand at $1.85 to $2.10 for talls and $2.40 to $2.50 for flats. Canned fruits, as already noted, are beginning to meet with more enquiry this week, especially yellow peaches, pears and the better grades of plums. We quote: Peaches, $3.10 to $3.25 for 3's, $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's; raspberries and strawberries, $2 to $2.10. Sardines and meats are as before, dull and unchanged.

COFFEES.

Shipments of Rio coffee are expected here in a few days, but in the meantime the market remains bare. We quote as before: Rio, 21 to 22c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

NUTS.

Direct shipments of Marbot and Bordeaux walnuts arrived here during the past week and the market is now well supplied. Prices are reported to be a little stiffer abroad. Trade is now beginning to open out, principally in the new kinds. We quote: Brazil nuts, 14c. per lb.; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. per lb.; Tarragona almonds, 12 1-2 to 14c.; peanuts, 11 to 21c. for roasted and 8 to 10c. for green; cocoanuts, $4.50 to $5.50 per sack; Grenoble walnuts, 13 to 15c.; Marbot walnuts, 12 to 13c.; pecans, 13 1-2 to 15c.; chestnuts, $4.75 to $5 per bushel; hickory, $2 to $2.25.

RICE.

Quiet and unchanged and without special feature. Prices remain as before at 3 5-8 to 3 3-4c. for ordinary and 5 to 5 1-4c. for Montreal Japan, and 5 3-4 to 6c. for imported Japan.

SPICES.

A good business is reported to be still doing in this line at unchanged prices. We quote: Pure black pepper at 13 to 15c.; pure white at 20 to 28c.; pure Jamaica ginger at 25 to 27c.; cloves, 14 to 25c.; pure mixed spice, 30 to 35c.

SUGAR.

The market continues on the downward grade, Monday last one of the refiners having reduced prices 1-4c. on granulated and 1-8c. on yellows. This drop is warranted by the price of raws which had declined on the New York market. The lower price has had a further disquieting effect on trade, both wholesalers and retailers being timid buyers. The little that is going out is chiefly in granulated. The idea as to price of granulated is 4 3-4c. a pound, and yellows are quoted at from 3 3-4c. up.

THE GROCER'S special sugar cables from London show the course of the world's market for the past few days:

	Centrifugal. 96°	Muscovado for refining.	Beet— Nov.	Beet— March

Nov. 16.....	15 6	13 3	13 11½	13 0½
Nov. 17.....	15 6	13 3	13 9½	13 0¾
Nov. 18.....	15 6	13 3	12 9	13 0
Nov. 20.....	15 6	13 3	12 9	13 0
Nov. 21.....	15 6	13 3	12 6½	12 10½

Willett & Gray, in their Weekly Statistical, say:

The Week.—Raws declined 1-16c. for Centrifugals, unchanged for Muscovados. Refined unchanged. Net cash quotations are: Muscovados, 2 13-16c.; Centrifugals, 3.18c. Granulated, 4.47c. Receipts, 32,865 tons. Meltings, 25,000 tons. Total stock in four ports, 32,273 tons, against 25,408 tons last week, and 88,703 tons last year. By cable: Stock in Havana and Matanzas, 43,000 tons, against 44,000 tons last week, and 8,000 tons last year. The six principal ports of Cuba give for the week: Receipts, none; exports, 1,000 tons; stock, 59,000 tons, against 60,000 tons last week and 26,000 tons last year. Total stock in all the principal countries, 513,873 tons, against 504,443 tons at same dates last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries estimated, 57,000 tons, against 52,000 tons last year. Beet sugar quotations, cost and freight, 13s. 3d. per cwt. for firsts.

Raws.—The week has been quiet and more steady for quotations than for some time. Early in the week a sale of Java sugars was made at 1-8c. decline from last week's quotations, but at the close centrifugals were sold at but 1-16c. decline, while Muscovados remain unchanged, making the decline for the week only 1-16c. per pound, and with a closing that is rather firm in the absence of any pressure to sell. Receipts were larger than the requirements for melting, and stocks have increased 7,865 tons. The Louisiana crop is being more rapidly marketed and it will prove a large crop, though not as large as was expected at its opening. Reports from the Cuba crop are most encouraging, and already in many districts as large an out-turn as in 1891-92 is expected. The total crop that season was near 1,000,000 tons. Shipments from the Demarara crops, January 1 to November 1, were 59,029 tons, against 56,520 tons last year. The shipments in November and December last year were 57,000 tons, and about the same quantity is expected to be shipped for balance of year. All available sugars in Demerara for November shipment have been sold.

Refined.—Have remained steady and unchanged during the week, and a rather better demand is shown towards the close, but the buying is only for immediate wants and on the smallest basis that will meet actual requirements. The increase in demand is due partly to the expiration this week of the cheap lake and rail freight rates, in consequence of the closing of navigation on the lakes. The reduced meltings are quite sufficient to fill all orders and leave a surplus for consignments to different parts of the country.

The average price of Muscovado sugar of 89 deg. test, from January 1 to date is 3.31c. The average price of centrifugals is 3.79c., and the average price of granulated is 4.93c. per lb., all net cash. The difference between centrifugals and granulated averages 1.14c. per lb., which is the usual regular difference which existed ten years ago under the independent refineries.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Trade is dropping off a little in this line, still there is a fair quantity moving at from 1 3-4c. up. The market is reported to be stiffening. Molasses quiet and unchanged. We quote: Barbadoes, fine, first crop, 37 to 40c.; West Indian, 30 to 35c.; New Orleans, "open kettle," 47 to 50c.

TEA.

There is the usual quiet seasonable trade doing, with the preference for Congous, Ceylons and Indians. Japan teas remain quiet. Low grade Assams and Ceylon teas are firmer and but few offering.

Latest mail advices from England report market as somewhat firmer for Indian and Ceylon teas and prices of the latter show slight advance.

Mail advices from Shanghai, China, report that there is very little interest to note regarding that market. Green teas remain firm and common Congous show little change. The quality of late arrivals is poor.

Brokers report that there is no new feature to chronicle on the local market. Trade has been on the quiet side with them. This is principally owing to the fact that dealers have good supplies on hand of their own importation which this season have shown excellent value. The tea trade from now until the beginning of next year, it is altogether likely, will be quiet; but after the turn of the year dealers will be sorting up their stocks again, when business is naturally expected to brighten.

DRIED FRUIT.

Valencia raisins continue in fair demand at unchanged prices. Ruling prices for spot are: Off-stalk, 4 1-2 to 4 3-4c.; fine off-stalk, 5 to 5 1-2c.; selected, 6 to 6 1-2c.; layer, selected, 7c. Stocks are light, but further shipments are arriving, although there will probably be no more than what is wanted. The tendency of prices is towards greater firmness. There is nothing doing in Sultana raisins. New fruit will be here shortly. Old fruit is quoted at 5 1-2 to 6 1-2c. Malaga fruit is not moving much yet. We quote as before: London layers, $2.25; connoisseur clusters, $3; dessert clusters, $3.75 to $4; quarter flats Dehesas, $1.50. New Bosnia prunes in cases are expected here this week, and they will sell at about 6 1-2c. Bosnia prunes in hogsheads will arrive in a week or so and prices for them will rule low. French prunes are dull at 5 to 5 3-4c. Currants continue in good demand at unchanged prices. Common currants are selling at 3 3-4 to 4c., but for good fruit we quote: 4 1-4 to 4 1-2c. for provincials in bbls., and 4 3-8 to 4 5-8c. for half bbls.; Filiatras, 4 3-4 to 5c.. in bbls., 4 7-8 to 5 1-4 in half bbls.; Patras, 5 3-4 to 6c. for bbls., 5 7-8 to 6 1-4c. in half bbls., 6 to 6 1-2c. in cases; Vostizzas, 7 to 8 1-2c. in cases, 7 1-4 to 8 3-4c. in half cases; Panariti (better than are Vostizzas), 9 1-2 to 10c. Prices of currants have a hardening tendency. Eleme figs are about out of the market, the few lots which arrived via New York being nearly exhausted. Elemes sell at 10 to 11c., and topnets at 5 to 5 1-2c.; Malaga figs sell at 6 1-2c. in 25 lb. boxes. New dates have arrived this week, both by direct and indirect shipment. The quality is fine and the ruling price is 6 to 6 1-2c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The market has been somewhat demoralized this week on account of large receipts, although prices for really good stock remain much as before. Good dairy tub butter sells at 20 to 21c., with 22c. being obtained occasionally for something extra choice. Jobbers are paying 1 to 2c. below these prices for good dairy. Large rolls are in good demand, particularly new packed, which sells as readily as tub; they are being jobbed out at 19 to 20c. Dairy pound rolls are going out at 24 to 25c. Creamery butter remains quiet; 23c. was paid this week for a lot of fresh made tub and holders as a rule are asking from that figure up to 25c. The jobbing price for creamery tubs is 25 to 26c., and for creamery pound prints 27c. is the idea.

Cheese continues in fair local demand. August make sells at 11c. and September at 11 1-2c. Old cheese is being jobbed out at 10 to 10 1-4c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

Beans.—Trade is dull and good hand-picked are being jobbed out at $1.40 to $1.50.

Dried Apples.—Not much doing, and there are not many offering. Jobbers are paying 5 to 5 1-4c. and selling at 5 1-2 to 5 3-4c.

Evaporated Apples.—Holders are asking 10c. outside, but we hear of no transactions; jobbers are getting 10 1-4c., but there is not much doing.

Eggs.—Much as before, prices being steady and demand fair. We quote: Fresh, 17 to 18c.; limed, 15 1-2 to 16c.; cold storage, 16 to 17c.

Poultry.—The market is liberally supplied, and, while demand is good there is probably more than the market can take care of. Prices are easy. We quote: Turkeys, 8 to 10c. per lb.; geese, 5 to 6c. per lb.; chickens, 30 to 40c. a pair; ducks, 50 to 60c.

Potatoes.—There is a firmer feeling and holders are asking 45c. outside. On track here 48 to 50c. is being paid. For small lots jobbers are asking 55c. from cars and 60c. out of store.

Honey.—Demand small and prices unchanged at 7 to 8c. for extracted white clover in 10-lb. tins and upwards, and at 14 to 15c. for sections.

Hops.—There is not much doing, but the market is firm. Nothing in the way of new hops seem obtainable under 18 to 20c., and yearlings are quoted at 12 to 13c. Forty-five bales of Canadian hops grown on Bavarian roots were sold to a Toronto brewer at 22c. this week.

Onions.—In fair demand and unchanged at 75 to 80c. per crate for Spanish and $1 to $1.10 for Canadian.

Sweet Potatoes.—Demand continues good, but stocks are nearly exhausted, the unfavorable weather in the South having prevented supplies being forwarded. We quote as before at $3.50 to $3.75 per bbl.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The market for dressed hogs is demoralized on account of heavy receipts; $6.50 is the outside price packers will pay for carload lots and holders are asking $6.75. Packers anticipate lower prices, and are in the meantime holding off somewhat. Provisions are in fair demand but prices are lower on account of the drop in hogs and the weaker market in the States.

Bacon.—Long clear, 10 to 10 1-2c.; smoked backs, 12c.; bellies, 13 1-2c.; rolls, 9 3-4 to 10c.

Hams.—In fair demand and lower at 12 to 12 1-2c. for smoked, and at 11c. for pickled.

Lard.—Pure Canadian, 11 3-4c. in tubs, 12c. in pails and 11 1-4c. in tierces. Compound, 9 to 9 1-4c.

Barrel Pork.—Canadian heavy mess, $19; Canadian short cut, $20; shoulder mess, $17.50.

Dressed Meats.—Beef fores are 4 to 5c.; hindquarters, 6 1-2 to 8c.; mutton, 5 to 6c.; lamb, 6 1-2 to 7c.; veal, 7 1-2 to 9c.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

Hides.—Trade in hides continues slow. Dealers are paying for No. 1 cows 3 3-4c., and 2 3-4c. for No. 2's. Steers are 1c. in advance of the price quoted above.

Skins.—There is the usual trade doing and dealers are paying from 65 to 70c., according to quality. No pelts are being offered.

Wool.—No enquiries for car lots, and the prospects are not so bright as they were. Dealers are paying 17 to 18c. for good pulled wool, and 20c. for select No. 1.

Tallow.—Trade continues fair in tallow, with prices steady at last week's quotations, 5 to 5 1-2c. per lb.

GREEN FRUIT.

Foreign.—All kinds of seasonable foreign fruit is beginning to arrive freely. Demand for oranges is increasing, but the fruit is hardly sweet enough yet for sales to be made free. Lemons are quiet. The cold weather is causing a falling off in the demand for bananas.

Domestic.—Apples are occupying the most attention at the moment. There are a good many enquiries, but there is a disinclination to pay the high prices asked, consequently actual business is not so large as might appear. Common fruit sells at $2 to $2.50, greenings at $3, and spies at $3.50 per barrel. Cranberries are in good demand. We quote: Oranges—Floridas, $3.25 to $3.50; lemons—Messinas, $5 to $5.50; Malagas, $3.75 to $4 per box, and half chests, $7 to $7.50; bananas, $1.25 to $1.50; pears, 50 to $1 per basket; tomatoes, 40 to 60c. per dozen; grapes—Concords, 2 1-2 to 3c. per lb.; Niagaras, 2 1-2 to 3c.; Rogers, 2 1-2 to 3c.; small baskets grapes, 25 to 30c.; Malaga grapes, $4.50 to $6 per keg; apples, 25 to 30c. per basket, and $1.50 to $4 per barrel; cranberries—Cape Cod, $6.50 to $7 per bbl.; boxes, $2.40 to $2.50; Canadian, $5 to $6 per barrel; boxes, $2 to $2.15. California fruit—apricots, 17 1-2c. per lb.; peaches, 14c. per lb.

FISH.

Trade is quiet just now owing to the quantity of poultry on the market. Prices remain unchanged. We quote: Fresh sea salmon, 17 to 19c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6 1-2c.; Labrador herring, $4.50 per barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per barrel.; Digby herring, 11 to 12 1-2c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7 1-2c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.; prepared frogs, 50c. a doz.; dressed sturgeon, 7 to 8c.; oysters in bulk, $1.50 for standard and $2 selected; cisco, 3 to 4c. each; salt mackerel in bulk, 10c. per lb.; pike, 6 to 6 1-2c. per lb.

SALT.

Dealers report a good jobbing trade and also a good movement in car lots. Prices are at last week's decline. We quote: Coarse salt, bbl. lots, 90c.; coarse sacks, 60c.; fine sacks, common, 70c.; dairy, $1.25; American rock $10 per ton.

SEEDS.

There has been a fairly liberal movement in alsike at prices ranging all the way from $4.50 for inferior to $7 for fancy. There are indications of a fair movement in red clover, but in the meantime trade is quiet at $5.50 to $5.75, with $5.90 to $6 being occasionally paid for choice to fancy. Timothy is hardly quotable, there being so much on the market that has been saved out of fall grain. This kind is quoted at $1 to $1.25, while prime is worth $1.50 to $1.60.

The Petrolea Advertiser in its weekly report says : We quote the above as the market price. Crude oil has taken another drop, and we understand the Imperial Oil Co. have reduced their price for crude this week four cents per barrel, viz., $1.03 delivered at their refinery, $1.01 1-2 delivered at the late Premier Oil Co. refinery, $1.01 1-2 delivered at their East Eng station, and $1.01 1-2 at their receiving station in the Marthaville district. Now one of the most important questions of the day is : What are the crude producers going to do about it ? Are they willing to sit still and see their product dwindle down in price week after week until it reaches a point at which the drill must be stopped ? We would suggest that a mass meeting of the producers should be called for the purpose of taking the position into consideration and to devise some means of disposing of their oil to better advantage, and to permanently limit the downward tendency.

MARKET NOTES.

Edward Adams & Co. have received a consignment of new walnuts.

The pickles put up by Gillard & Co., London, England, are in store with Lucas, Steele & Bristol. Get their five case lot figure.

Edward Adams & Co. are in receipt of another consignment "Fan" Young Hysons.

The new bag prunes offering by Lucas, Steele & Bristol have gone off well. They can be retailed at 5 cents. They made deliveries of new walnuts to-day.

Edward Adams & Co. report a continued steady sale for "Aunt Sally" and "Aunt Abbey."

W. M. Bowie, late with the Morse Soap Co., has opened up in the commission business with such good agencies as the Armour Packing Co., Kansas City, and Feron & Ballou Co., California dried fruits, of Chicago.

W. H. Gillard & Company of Hamilton, report the arrival of a large consignment of J. T. Morton's (London, Eng.) goods, and ask for inquiries re same. This popular manufacturer has this season exported finer goods than ever.

The display made by Lucas, Steele & Bristol in their sample room this week has attracted many buyers. They report sorting up trade in Christmas goods most satisfactory. The demand for better class of fruits has been exceptional.

A. E. Webb & Co., warehousemen, having recently removed their storage warehouse from 54 and 56 Wellington street east to 69 Front street east, have sold out to L. E. Auston & Co., who will carry on the business at the last mentioned address.

Prompt shipment is a necessity at this season. Lucas, Steele & Bristol report that they ship all orders same day as received. This firm call the attention of buyers to the great variety of selected Valencias offering.

There is some red canned salmon offered here at cut prices, $1 to $1.05. The quality of the bulk of it is good, but there are odd tins in the lot which are off, hence the low prices. They are sold for what they are, but the sellers guarantee the quality, making allowance for any bad tins.

It is reported that a company has been formed in Vancouver, B.C., for the purpose of erecting a cold storage building with the intention of cultivating a trade principally with Australia and New Zealand, and to receive from there consignments of fruit, butter, mutton, etc. In connection with their business they are arranging with H. J. Bray, a wholesale fish dealer of this city, to handle a car load of fresh salmon and halibut each week, or as frequently as he can dispose of it. If these intentions are carried out the trade will be well supplied with fresh sea fish.

A splendid line of long wool dusters is being placed on the market by Frank Holt, 81 Colborne street, late of the Holt-Thompson Mfg. Co. of Chicago. The dusters are made of extremely long wool, dyed in various colors, thus giving them a pleasing effect. They are intended to take the place of the feather duster, and a good business is predicted for Mr. Holt.

Eby, Blain & Co. have new dates in stock.

Granulated sugar is 1-4c. and yellow sugar 1-8c. cheaper.

Dawson & Co. are in receipt of a car load of Florida oranges this week.

R. S. McIndoo is in receipt of a consignment of Odart's English pickles.

Warren Bros. & Boomer have a shipment of Malaga figs in flat 25-pound boxes.

Sloan & Crowther are in receipt of a shipment of 800 boxes of Argimbau's fine off-stalk Valencia raisins.

FLOUR AND FEED.

Flour prices are very low, lower than for many years past. According to all past records, the next change will be upwards, and as prices are abnormally low the advance is likely to be a stiff one. No man can foresee the future, but judging by the past, flour at present prices is good property.

The Northwestern Miller contains the following letter: "Every country in Europe except Russia, has this year had a short wheat crop. Our own crop is at least 1,000,000 bushels under that of last year, and 200,000,000 less than we raised in 1891. The general financial stringency of the last six months has brought out large supplies, for all that the harvest this year has been a poor one. This has kept the market price down. The price is governed by the law of supply and demand. For over a year we have had too liberal a supply. The exports this fall have been large, amounting to about 80,000,000 bushels since the last harvest began. It is doubtful if January 1st, 1894, there will be enough wheat in the United States to meet our usual requirements till after another harvest. As a result of the present low price, a smaller acreage of winter wheat has been sown than for several years past. After a thorough investigation of the conditions existing, I feel certain that the year 1894 will bring much higher prices for wheat, and I do not hesitate to urge every one of our Northwestern producers to hold their wheat in hand for a few months. We may just as well keep at least a part of this extra profit for ourselves as to give it to the elevators and millers by selling now. The conditions are such that every bushel of wheat now remaining in the producer's hands can be made to bring one dollar before another harvest, if all of it would be held for that price. Each day the world consumes over 6,000,000 bushels of wheat, and the present large supplies at terminal points would rapidly decrease, if the farmers would cease for a time to augment them."

A large shipper of hay to Great Britain seems to have come to the conclusion, after losing $7,000 in shipping to England, that there is no money in the export hay trade. His losses of shortages alone are very heavy. Upon a shipment of 100 tons from Montreal to Liverpool recently there was a loss of eleven tons. The loss in weight after the hay is shipped is much too heavy, and means should be employed to ascertain how these losses occur.

It frequently happens that flour, in spite of the greatest care in baking, yields an inferior loaf, and the failure is commonly attributed to adulteration, but when submitted to investigation neither microscopic nor chemical tests reveal any adulteration. Such flour is returned to the mill or dealer as unfit for use. This defect is caused by flour being exposed to the sun. It has been proven by experiment that flour cannot bear the action of the sun, even when not exposed to its rays. When flour is exposed to the heat of the sun an alteration takes place in the gluten similar to that produced by the heating in the old stone system.

On account of the scarcity of flour and the higher price of bread, Spain has authorized the importation of 150,000 tons of wheat at a reduced duty.

The claim that grain absorbs moisture has been verified by some test experiment made at the California Agricultural College. Various kinds of grain were placed in a moist atmosphere and the increase in weight was noted. The greatest increase was in the first twenty-four hours, the absorption being nearly 33 per cent. of the total absorbed during the fifteen days exposure. It was computed that perfectly dry grain 65 degrees F. would absorb as follows: Oats, 29.08 per cent.; barley 28.17 per cent.; wheat 25 per cent. Under ordinary conditions the percentage is perhaps not so high, 15 to 16 per cent. probably being the average.

During the past year the estimated result of the wheat harvest of Manitoba compared with last year were as follows: In 1893 the area under crop numbered 1,003,000 acres, against 876,000 acres in 1892, and the yield per acre was 18.2 bushels, against 16.5 bushels in 1892; the total crop aggregated 18,300,000 bushels, against 14,500,000 bushels in 1892.

The movement of wheat from Manitoba this season is larger than any previous year. A C. P. R. official says: "By the end of this month, when navigation will probably close, we expect to have eight million bushels of this year's crop out of the country."

TORONTO.

MARKETS—Continued.

to be under the proprietorship of the Palace Grocery Company, said to be a wealthy Boston syndicate.

Clemes Bros. are in receipt of a shipment of Malaga grapes.

An increasing demand is reported for white imported Castile soap.

F. W. Hudson & Co. report increasing sales for Morris' extract of beef.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have a shipment of choicest Vostizza and Patras currants.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are in receipt of a bill of lading of a shipment of Rio coffee that is on the way.

Smith & Keighly are offering barrels of fine B.C. salted salmon, the quality of which is said to be excellent.

Tuckett is putting some new chewing tobaccos on the market. They are styled Long Black 7's and 12's, and Solace 12's .

Sloan & Crowther are in receipt of a shipment of Keiller's Dundee Marmalade in one and two pound pots and seven pound tins.

The first shipment of new Hallowi dates arrived in Toronto Monday. They were consigned to J. L. Watt & Scott, and were immediately taken by the trade. The brand was "M. T."

The Sunlight Soap Co. have authority to use the back of the postage stamps in New Zealand for advertising purposes. Each stamp bears the words, "Be fair, try Sunlight Soap."

Hon. Mr. Foster has arranged to meet the Boards of Trade of Toronto and Montreal next Friday, when the question of the introduction of a general Insolvency Act by the Government will be urged.

A representative of a Chicago canning firm is in Kingston with the view of starting a large canning factory there. If local assistance, sufficient to enable the business to bear a local reputation, is secured, a company with a capital of $25,000 will be organized.

T. Hoskin reports business good in his different lines of pickles, jams and jellies. Mr. Hoskin has been in this line of business about twelve years, and during that time has worked up a large trade. His factory is in King street west.

R. Donald, the well known retail grocer, King street east, Toronto, has a window that is attracting a good deal of attention. It is artistically dressed with fancy wax candles which the firm is making a specialty of for the holiday trade. A picture by Paul Peel, "Helping Mother," lends attractiveness to the scene.

In many of the smaller towns throughout the country the general storekeeper carries a stock of stationery and school supplies, and it is just as essential that he should buy these goods at the right place as it is that he should purchase his stock of groceries, hardware, dry goods, or boots and shoes where he can get them to the best advantage. In view of this the advertisement of the W. J. Gage Co., Ltd., Toronto, which appears on another page is worthy of a careful perusal. This firm is a large manufacturing as well as wholesale concern. The execution of orders sent them by mail is a department of their business to which they give special attention.

WAREHOUSE TALK.

Davidson & Hay: "Glistening cream is selling rapidly."

Lucas, Steele & Bristol: "Diamond Crystal is the salt grocers sell stocks of. It pays to sell good salt and this is the best.

Davidson & Hay: We have a fine line of sprups in stock, which are showing exceptional value.

W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton: "We have the finest and most varied stock of currants, raisins and other fruit on the market, and sales are large."

Davidson & Hay: We are offering special inducements to large buyers in the leading brands of salmon, such as "Horseshoe," 'Lion," and "Red Star."

W. H. Gillard & Co.: "Pettijohn's California Breakfast Food, advertised by us, and which we handle by the car-load has the largest sale of any breakfast cereal of a like nature in the United States. The peculiar process used in the manufacture of this article brings out in it all the valuable stimulating of the wheat and makes it a food very easily digested, especially fitting it for the use of invalids. This extra work of course necessitates an extra expense, in consequence of which many imitations of this brand are offered at less money, but the manufacturers of Pettijohn claim that they offer better value than any of their competitors."

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Nov. 22, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Although the more conservative houses protest as stoutly as ever that they intend to thoroughly ignore the cutting tactics that some of the houses here are following on leading lines of groceries, the fact in itself has unsettled prices on some lines, which, however, cannot be quotably changed. These remarks apply to sugar, canned goods, molasses sugar and dried fruit, and the growling thereat is growing deeper, and may, as we have pointed out before, lead to reprisals, especially as three houses in the trade are now having a little fun among themselves. The cooler heads are afraid of this result at present and are using all their influence to prevent, as they consider that there is enough disturbance at present without any more firms taking a hand in the affair to make matters worse. Despite this drawback, however, which of course tends to make buyers backward, the week's volume of business has been fair, and for any trading in a regular way the ruling quotation at least is unchanged. Sugar is lower, refiners having put granulated down ¼c. and yellows ⅛c. per lb. Syrups have met with a rather better enquiry, and some good sized sales of molasses have occurred. Tea is quiet and values generally steady. Coffee and spices are firm, and a fair business has transpired in dried fruit at steady prices, when it is a question of really fine fruit.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been a satisfactory volume of business in dried fruit, and although two or three of the jobbing houses here are still offering some goods at very low figures, no difficulty is experienced in doing business in really prime stock at 4 to 4½c., which is a steady basis for common to fine grades in round lots. Lots of 500 boxes off stalk have changed hands at 4¼c., and layers at 5½ to 6c. The supply offering here has been light, but one or two lots to which we referred in our trade notes last week will be here this week. We quote former prices for ordinary jobbing business as follows: Ordinary Valencia off stalk 4¼ to 5c. according to brand, fine 5¼c., selected very scarce at 6c., and layers at 6 to 6½c. according to quality. Dried currants rule steady, but supplies here are ample and the demand not especially brisk. Patros advices continue steady in tone, but the prices mentioned there are low, viz., 7s. 3d. to 7s. 9d. cost and freight. We quote Provincials 3¾ to 4c., Filiatrias 4½ to 5c., and Vostizzas 6 to 7c. as to quality for jobbing parcels. Figs are quiet and steady at 13c., dates 6c., and prunes 5¾ to 6c., with business very small.

NUTS.

Nuts do not furnish any new feature. We quote filberts 8½ to 9c.; French walnuts, 8 to 9c.; Grenoble walnuts, 11 to 12c.; pecans, 8½ to 12c.; peanuts, 8 to 11c. per lb., and cocoanuts, $3.75 to $4 per 100; Terragona almonds, 11½ to 12c.; and shelled almonds 23 to 45c. according to grade.

GREEN FRUIT.

The green fruit market has ruled moderately active during the week. Apples have not furnished any large sale, but prices are firm, No. 1 selling at $3 to $3.50 in car lots, and No. 2 $2 to $2.50 for winter stock. Malaga grapes are in fair demand at $4 to $5.25 per keg, and Catawbas 25 to 28c. per basket. Florida oranges are the only kind offering, and move well at $2 to $3.25 per crate. Good lemons are scarce at $2.75 to $3 25. A fair business is doing in cranberries at $5 50 to $6.25 as to quality. Pears are scarce and firm at $6 to $8 per bbl.

SUGARS.

The sugar market is easier, granulated being quoted ¼c. lower and yellows ⅛c. lower. We quote: granulated, 4½c., and yellows, 3½ to 4½c. New York appears to be fairly steady, but an easy feeling appears to actuate the London market, which was cabled with a softer tendency.

SYRUPS.

There has been a little better enquiry noted for syrups, but the movement is still rather slow. Sales of American on western account have been made at 19 to 22c., while Canadian has changed hands at 1⅜ to 2c. per lb.

MOLASSES.

Despite low offers on molasses the jobbing houses say that there is a good demand for jobbing lots at combine prices, 33 to 34c.

but we know that round lots have changed hands at 30c. There is said to be a decided scarcity of Barbadoes molasses in the Lower Provinces, and shipments have been made from this port down there.

TEA.

There is little to be said of the tea market, which is quiet. Dealers report a fair lot of orders from the country for Japans at firmer quotations, at we note sales of lots at 12½ to 16½c., while good sized parcels of fine have brought 19½c. We quote Japans: Common, 12 to 13c., medium, 15 to 17c., fine, 18 to 21c., and finest 23 to 32c.

COFFEES.

The market is firm, and we quote prices 1c. higher, as round lots of Maracaibo have changed hands at 20c. and some Porto Cobello at 19c. We quote: Jamaica, 16 to 18c.; Maracaibo, 19½ to 21c.; Porto Cobello, 19 to 20c.; Rio, 17½ to 19.; Java, 24 to 28c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

SPICES.

The spice market is quiet and unchanged as follows: Jamaica ginger, 15 to 16c. for common, and 18 to 20c. for finer qualities; black pepper, 6 to 7c.; pimento, 6c.; and nutmegs, 50 to 52½c. to $1.

RICE.

There is a brisk movement in rice, the demand being considerably above the average for the season. The near approach of the closing of navigation no doubt induces the activity. We quote: Japan standard, $3.75; standard B, $3.40; English style, $3.20; choice Burmah, $3 85; Japan crystal, $4.25; Patna, $4.25 to $5; Carolina, $6.50 to $7.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods market is dull with the sale of an occasional round lot of tomatoes, but jobbers as a rule are not stocking up far ahead. There is a fair movement in salmon, mackerel, etc. We quote tomatoes $1.72½ to $1.80, corn 75 to 80c., peas 90 to 95c, strawberries $2.75 per doz., raspberries $1.80, salmon $1.25 to $1.27½ for best brands and $1.05 to $1.10 for cohoes, lobsters $1.60 to $1.75, mackerel 95c. to $1.

FISH.

There is a very good business doing in fish, the demand being considerably above the average. Receipts are liberal but there is no surplus. We quote as follows: No. 1 C. B. herring, $5.50; No. 1 Newfoundland do., $5; No. 1 green cod, $5 to $5.25; Labrador salmon, $14 to $15 per bbl.; B. C. do., $12 to $13; No. 2 mackerel, $12; finnan haddies, 7 to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1.10 to $1.50 per box; kippered herring, $1.50 per box; haddock, 3½ to 4c.; cod, 4 to 4½c.; boneless cod, 6½ to 7c.; hand picked malpecque oysters, $4.50 to $5; ordinary do., $3.50 to $4.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

Strictly fresh boiling eggs are hard to get, 20c being freely offered for anything fine. Ordinary grades run at 16 to 17c, and limed 15½ to 16c. Receipts of dressed poultry are still moderate, turkeys selling 9 to 9½c., geese 7 to 7½c., ducks 9 to 9½c. and chickens 7 to 7½c. Comb honey meets a fair enquiry at 13 to 13½c. for white clover and buckwheat 10 to 12c. Strained honey 7 to 8c., for new and old 5½ to 6c. Beans are firm, choice hand picked $1.50 to $1.60, ordinary to good $1.20 to $1.40 and inferior $1 to $1.10. Maple syrup is quiet at 4½ to 5c. in the wood and 50 to 60c. in tins and sugar 6 to 7c. per lb.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is quiet and the general position unchanged. Canadian short cut, per brl., $22 to $23; mess pork, Western, new, per brl. $21 to $22; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12¼c; bacon, per lb. 11½ to 12½c.; lard, com. refined, per lb. 8¼ to 9¼c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market continues colorless, and, in the absence of any general business on spot, it is impossible to give any reliable quotation showing the basis on which business is possible. We content ourselves, there, with describing the position as nominal. Shippers, as a rule, say there is no encouragement at present over the cable, although some of them were looking around to-day, but whether it was to buy or simply to see what there was offering is difficult to say. Some of them assert that their British correspondents are enquiring quite often with regard to the stocks on spot, but nothing can be stated in this connection that is reliable. West of Toronto estimates vary, but some say that a low estimate is 140,000 to 150,000 boxes; while they claim that the stocks here at the close of navigation will be much less than they were last fall, and we readjust our quotations slightly, which, however, are purely nominal. Finest Ontario fall cheese, 10⅞ to 11c.; finest Townships fall cheese. 10¾ to 10⅞c.; finest Quebec fall cheese, 10⅝ to 10¾c.; medium grades, 10½c.; cable, 54s.

BUTTER.

The butter market is strong with the supply offering moderate. Since last week practically all the September creamery in the Province of Quebec has been taken from factorymen's hands at 22 to 23c., and the market is firm in tone, lots of 500 to 600 packages fetching the lots price from exporters. In dairy the scarcity is as marked as ever, and it appears that dealers here who have been calculating on receipt of Kamouraska will be disappointed, as the bulk of it has already been sent to the Maritime Provinces. We quote values firm as follows: Finest fall creamery, 22½ to 23c.; earlier makes, 21 to 21½c.; finest townships dairy, 21 to 22c.; finest western dairy, 19½ to 20c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Coffee has been sold in round lots here during the week at 1c. advance.

Rose & Laflamme note some encouraging orders for Ram Lals tea during the week.

Black tea has been sold on English account at 9¼c. cost and freight on this market.

Patros advices quote currants steady at the following low range: 7s. 3d. to 7s. 9d. cost and freight.

N. Quintal & Fils are offering good value in dried raisins and currants in barrels, half barrels and cases.

Low grade molasses has been offered as low as 28c., but good to fine stock is maintained at former values.

W. F. Costigan & Co. note firm advices on Japan teas, and report also that their advices from the Coast bespeak steadiness on the standard brands of canned salmon.

L. Chaput, Fils & Co. say that there is no difficulty about selling good, sound Barbadoes molasses at 33 to 34c. They are offering at present fine lines of Malaga and Valencia fruit.

W. S. Kennedy, St. Paul street, find that his lines of English and American grocery specialties are meeting a good demand on holiday account. They are just the thing for this trade.

C. A. Liffiton & Co. call attention to the fact that coffaroma is having a large and growing sale. It is sold in 1 and 2 lb. tins.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Gunn have returned from the Coast.

W. H. Seyler, with Eby, Blain & Co., is laid up with one of his old attacks of quincy.

James Ross, with Sloan & Crowther, spent Sunday last with friends in Guelph. The friends, rumor says, were of the gentler sex.

R. M. Corrie, the energetic secretary of the Toronto Grocers' Association, has had his cares increased, but his face wears a smile broader than ever. The new care is a bouncing baby girl, with which R. M. C. thinks none will compare. At least he would not change it with any other no matter how much "to boot" he may be offered.

BETTER FOOD FOR LESS MONEY.

It is often said that an American family wastes more food than a French family requires to support life, and Prof. Atwater, in The Forum, establishes this proposition by showing what the facts are behind it in our own practice. He says: "We waste at the store, the market, and in the house enough to make us wealthy if we could only save. The means that might be used for beautifying the home, educating the children, higher intellectual culture, travel, and the various forms of benevolence, religious and secular, are lost. A large body of people in this country are saying practically, though not in words: "To economize closely is beneath us; we do not want to live cheaply; we want to live well.'" Prof. Atwater says that the wage workers use half their money to buy their food, and that the poor are the ones that practice the worst economy and suffer the most from it. One chief reason for this waste is that few people understand what the nutritive properties of different foods are, and his article is chiefly valuable because it indicates the potential energy of the nutriments in different articles of food in calories.

This means the amount of heat and energy which the food imparts to the body. Prof. Atwater states the case very plainly as follows: "Round steak at fifteen cents a pound contains as much protein and energy, is just as digestible and is fully as nutritious, as tenderlion at fifty. Mackerel has as high nutritive value as salmon and costs from an eighth to a half as much. Oysters are a delicacy. If one can afford them, there is no reason for not having them, but twenty-five cents, invested in a pint would only bring twenty-nine grams, about an ounce of protein and 260 calories of energy. The same twenty-five cents spent for flour at $6 a barrel, or three cents a pound, would pay for 420 grams of protein and 13,700 calories of energy. When a day laborer buys bread at seven and a half cents a pound, the actually nutritive material costs him three times as much as it does his employer, who buys it in flour at $6 a barrel." Some further details are worth mentioning. Beef neck, which costs eight cents a pound, contains 218 grams of protein and 2,795 calories of energy. Corn meal at two cents a pound, contains 518 grams of protein and 20,000 calories of energy. Oatmeal at five cents a pound has 345 grains of protein and 9,190 calories of energy. Salt pork contains nine grams of protein and 7,295 calories of energy. These figures, which show what potency there is in a pound of certain kinds of food, indicate what a man ought to live on if he is to feed himself to advantage and live simply and well. Mr. Edward Atkinson has pointed out that it is possible for our poorer families to live a great deal better than they do, and at a vastly reduced cost, and in these days, when thousands of people are trying to reduce their expenses, it is worth while to know where they can cut the cost and not diminish the nutritive power of their food. Prof. Atwater, who has made extensive studies in the food question, would render an excellent service to the public if he would do much more to popularize this subject.—Boston Herald.

DRAWING THE LINES.

We have spoken in another issue of nature's picking out certain localities for certain work, and have wondered why farmers have not oftener followed nature's example. In other vocations as they advance, there is a strong tendency to go from the general to the particular, and to make that particular the main object of study and pursuit. In medicine, for example, while the "all-round" physician on general principles is by no means to be despised; still, the patient whose eye or ear needs treatment, seeks not the general physician, but the specialist. The profession of the law is divided and sub-divided until the profession is made up of so many experts, each a master, or aiming to be a master, of that particular development.

The reason for this is not hard to find. The physician who chooses the eye, or some part of that organ for his life work, finds there enough to attract and to keep him at work. He likes it. The more he studies and practices, the more it pleases him and the more skilled he becomes; so that when we read, as we did the other day, that a patient's eye was removed, the offending part cut off and the eye restored, after wondering at it we conclude that it is the expert after all that does the best surgery. Other examples are not wanting in this profession, or in others, but they all show that it is the expert from whom the best work comes.

The same principle carried out is frequently illustrated in business. A certain talent develops, and the owner of it finds in it his life calling. John Dunn, years ago, in London, found that in collecting debts he had no equal. Dead-beats, then as now, were the terror of the trade. By some lucky chance —is there such a thing?—Dunn was sent out to collect a debt, long despaired of, and came home with the money in his pocket. Astonished at the result, the firm placed into the the hands of the collector other doubtful bills, and again he returned with the cash. From that time on John Dunn had more business than he could do; but his success was looked upon as little less—or little more—than a marvel. The man became the terror of the town —or at least that part of it that never paid their bills; until at last, all that was needed to secure the long-coming cash was a threat to send Dunn after it. This expression in time settled into the shorter one of Dunning a man—a term common enough ever after—so common as to drop its capital D, and in a word to bury the man who has immortalized his name in English speech by becoming the expert collector of his time.

This tendency towards specialism is still going on. The trades are taking to it wherever there is a possibility of success. We thought of this the other day when the trade papers announced that wholesale firms in Boston had discontinued the sale of several staples. It suggests that grocers are beginning to see that the business is too large for a single firm to cover it well, and that where this is attempted, weak places will be sure to develope somewhere. In houses with capital and force large enough to place a specialist at the head of each department, the whole ground may be covered; but this, after all, is another development of the same idea.—Tri-State Grocer.

THE CANADIAN GROCER PRICES CURRENT.

TORONTO, Nov. 16, 1893

This list is corrected every Thursday. The prices are solicited for publication, and are for such qualities and quantities as are usually ordered by retail dealers on the usual terms of credit.

Goods in large lots and for prompt pay are generally obtainable at lower prices.

All quotations in this department are under the direct control of the Editor, and are not paid for or doctored by any manufacturing or jobbing house unless given under their name; the right being reserved to exclude such firms as do not furnish reliable information.

To be forwarned is to be forearmed. This maxim is to-day applicable to trade in Canada. Although the depression does not obtain in this country to anything like the extent it does in the United States or in England, yet it is here; and to ignore its presence is neither advisable nor wise. No alarm need be taken. The trade of the country is not suffering from any chronic disease; it is slightly indisposed, and largely on account of the conditions that are affecting the commercial interests of the world at large. All that Canadian merchants need is to be careful; and one of the ways in which this can be exercised is in regard to giving credit. Those in the large cities especially need to be enjoined in this respect. One of the most unsatisfactory features is in regard to money. It has been circulating but slowly for some time, and there is no immediate prospect of a radical change being effected. With the present low prices prevailing for grain farmers' deliveries in this particular will continue to be small. At least that is what is to be expected from past experience. Only the other day an instance came under our observation where a farmer obtained a renewal of a mortgage when, according to his own statement, he could have lifted it by selling grain which he was holding. Caution is in order at all times and seasons, but just now, with the trade conditions as they are, it needs to be exercised more rigidly than usual. The shorter the retailer makes his terms of credit and the more rigidly he enforces them the better, while wherever he has a doubt regarding the ability of a customer to pay the final decision should be on the safe side. People may plead this and plead that, but the merchant is not the manager of a charitable institution. As we have said before, he is in business to make a living; and if he is careless in selling goods on credit he is neither just to himself nor to the wholesaler with whom he runs an account. Such a course will naturally lead to reduced sales—for the time being at least—but it also means fewer bad debts and proportionately higher profits. It is not the quantity of goods a man sells that makes the business a paying one; it is the profits which accrue thereto which do that.

Statistics relating to crime are more or less interesting to everybody—to the ordinary individual as well as to the student of crimology. A cursory glance therefore at the report of the Minister of Justice as to the Penitentiaries in Canada will be in order. In that cursory glance can be comprehended much that is interesting and much that contains cause for congratulation. The total number of prisoners in the five penitentiaries—Kingston, St. Vincent de Paul, Dorchester, Manitoba, British Columbia—at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1893, was 1,194, a decrease of 34 compared with 1892. Those which show decreases are: Kingston 51 and Manitoba 4. Dorchester gives an increase of 6 and British Columbia 15, while in St. Vincent de Paul the curious coincidence is presented of 374 representing the number of convicts confined therein at the end of the last two fiscal years. An evidence of how carefully the movements of the convicts are guarded so that they may not wander away and be lost is seen in the fact that only one prisoner escaped during the year, and he was an inmate of the Manitoba Penitentiary. He, poor fellow, probably sauntered too far from his temporary home and, getting last on the prairie, was unable to find his way back! But while the Manitoba institution lost a prisoner in this way it lost none by death, this partially redeemed its remissness in the former particular, although the Dorchester Penitentiary went it one better by having neither escapes nor deaths. Kingston had 7 deaths, St. Vincent de Paul 3, British Columbia 1, a total, including a Kingston convict who committed suicide, of 12 deaths, or about one per cent. of the criminal population of the Canadian penetentiaries, a low average indeed, and pretty clear evidence that the health, as well as the keeping of the persons of the convicts, is carefully looked after. One sad fact is brought out in the report re Kingston Penetentiary. It is to the effect that more than one-half of the convicts are under 30 years of age, viz., 35 under 20 and 216 from 20 to 30.

The seizure for unpaid taxes of goods stored in Oliver, Coate & Co.'s auction rooms has opened the eyes of the people as they never were before to the injustice of the law governing such matters. A law should above all things be just, but this it cannot be when, in order to satisfy it, the innocent are made to contribute thereto. In the instance noted several persons, some of them in straightened circumstances, had left goods with the auctioneering firm to dispose of, but before this could be accomplished in stepped the sheriff and seized everything on the premises to satisfy a claim of the city of Toronto for taxes. That the law is unjust no one gainsays. Even the city officials regret that among the goods seized are those of citizens who are in no way responsible for Oliver, Coate & Co.'s neglect to pay their taxes, and suggestions have come from that quarter to the effect that the city remunerate these people. But it is held that the city cannot legally do this. The goods have not yet been sold, the bailiff having been restrained at the last moment from doing so by an injunction. There is little or no hope, however, of the injunction being made permanent. Whether a technicality can be created or not through which these unfortunate victims of an unjust law may be able to crawl, a determined effort should be made to amend the law so that it may be clipped of its harsh and unjust points. It ought not to be difficult to do this, for the injustice is so flagrant. The right of the city to a first claim for taxes is only proper, but when it comes to appropriating the property of other people that may happen to be on the premises, in the process of satisfying that claim, that is another thing, and its being done under the cloak of the law does not make its injustice anything the less.

Certain conditions are necessary to the sale of any article or commodity: People must desire it or be taught to desire it, and the price must be convenient. The holiday season is nearly upon us and from that season there are certain things that are inseperable. Dried fruit is one of them; and the conditions for a good trade in this line were probably never more favorable than now. True there is not at the moment an abundance of money floating around, but there is an abundance of what probably makes up for the deficiency in the other respect, and that is cheap dried fruit. Never before have some of the commodities under that head, currants particularly, been so low in price. Dried fruit is something that everybody likes and that everybody, poor as well as rich, uses. This season, with the price so low, there promises to be a larger consumption than usual. Most retailers throughout the country are making preparations to cope with it, and those who have not should not delay further. It is the general impression that prices have seen the bottom for the present at least. In fact currants and raisins have already developed a firmer feeling. As far as currants are concerned little else could be expected, for in addition to being lower than ever before, it must be remembered that the price received by the growers for the last crop has not much more than remunerated them for gathering it, let alone the cultivation. By all moans push the sale of dried fruit. Advertise it, display it, and see that you make a profit out of it, even if the grower of some lines did not.

Public property has at last become the result of the deliberations of the Ways and Means Committee on the work of tariff reform. For some weeks past we have heard a good deal regarding the nature of the bill that the committee was framing, but beyond the knowledge that it would certainly aim at the overthrow of the high tariff walls, all deliverances upon its details were of a more or less speculative character. Now the bill has been unfolded for the delectation of the world, and it shows that the Democrats have well redeemed their ante-presidential election pledges. Many of the changes proposed are radical in their character. The average duty of the whole bill is estimated to be not quite three-fifths of the average duty of the McKinley bill. The main features of the bill, according to the chairman of the committee are: (1) The adoption, whenever it seemed practicable, of ad valorem instead of specific duties, and (2) the freeing from taxes of those great materials of industry that lie at the base of production. These are some of the articles to be placed on the free list: Coal, iron ore, wool, salt, timber (both logs and planks), tin ore, block tin, binder twine, apples (fresh, dried, evaporated), bacon, hams, beef, mutton, pork, meats of all kinds prepared or preserved, copper ores, copper plates or ingots, lard, nickel, ores of gold and silver, agricultural implements, soap, vegetables, fruits, eggs. Butter is down to 4c. a pound, hops 8c., potatoes 10c. a bushel, smoked, dried, salted, pickled fish, and otherwise prepared ¾c. a pound, herrings, pickled, frozen, salted, and fish frozen or packed in ice ½c. a pound, fish in cans or packages 25 per cent. ad valorem, brandy, cordials, liquors, and other beverages or bitters of all kinds containing spirits $1.80 a gallon, ale, porter and beer 30c. a gallon. The sugar schedule, which the committee found a most difficult one to deal with, reduces the present bounty of two cents on the raw article one-eighth cent. per annum, beginning July 1, 1895, and extending to July 1, 1902, inclusive, thereafter ceasing altogether. The duty on refined sugar is reduced from half cent per pound to quarter of a cent. Barley is reduced from 30c. per bushel to 20 per cent. This will make the rate about 12c. per bushel. One thing that must strike the average Canadian is that where the McKinley bill struck Canada the hardest the Wilson bill proposes to put salve. This is particularly noticeable in regard to barley, eggs, horses, etc. The bill has yet to run the gauntlet of the both houses of Congress, but as both are Democratic it is likely to pass in principle at any rate.

A CRYING NEED.

In some respects we have a surfeit of law; in others we have a dearth. An instance of this latter condition is seen in the law relating to bankruptcy. And the question of its solution seems almost as difficult as that of the race problem in the United States or the school question in Canada.

Since the Dominion Insolvency Act was repealed in 1880 the provincial legislatures have made more or less effort to provide the desideratum for their own respective territories, but little or no benefit has resulted therefrom. The fact of the matter is they were trying to purify the waters of the branches instead of those of the main stream. In other words, the legislation was provincial instead of Dominion. Most of them probably did their best, but their best efforts were small, because the power of passing bankruptcy and insolvency laws was reposed by the Constitution in the Dominion Parliament alone. The Ontario Legislature has been the most active in turning out measures of this kind; but its best efforts have been hit hard in their most vital parts by the courts, until what is left of them to-day is inhert and useless.

One of the most important features of the Assignments' and Preferences' Act—in fact its very heart as far as the creditor class was concerned—was the clause which was created to prevent judgments and executions not completely executed by payment from taking precedence over assignments made for the benefit of the creditors generally. How far this has succeeded in its purpose is well known Hip and thigh has it been smitten, and while the clause is to-day still appended to the act it is of no more use than is a paralyzed limb to a man. The courts have decided this more than once. Only two weeks ago the Court of Appeal gave a decision ordering a sheriff to satisfy the claims of three creditors who had issued writs a few days before the debtor assigned before making a distribution among the other creditors, he having proposed to distribute the estate pro rata without reference to said judgments.

The need for a Dominion Insolvency law is becoming more and more apparent every year. During the last few months, probably more so than ever before, at least as far as Ontario is concerned. Probably the strongest reason that can be advanced for such a measure is the need of some provision which will eliminate preferred claims, or at least prevent their being turned to dishonest account. As the law stands to day an insolvent can give a favored creditor a hint that he proposes to assign, and that if he (the creditor) wants to get paid in full he had better get judgment against him. But this is only one of the many ways in which the present law encourages sharp and dishonest practices. Another reason for a Dominion measure is the lack of uniformity that exists, owing to which the dishonest debtor in some of the provinces can snap his fingers at his creditors in some of the others. In fact so great is the evil in this respect, that there are wholesale merchants in Toronto who have discontinued doing business in some of the lower provinces on account of the losses they have suffered in consequence thereof. It is a serious thing when the trade and commerce of the country is hampered in this way. Laws should assist, not hinder.

More or less effort has been made ever since 1880 to secure the re-enactment of an act whose provisions would embrace the whole Dominion. During the last four or five years these efforts have been more aggressive. The hope of such a measure being introduced in the House was reposed in the late Sir John Abbott, and had his health been preserved we should in all probability at least have seen some such legislation attempted if not adopted.

For some months past the different boards of trade in the country have been deliberating on the matter. The best minds, both mercantile and legal, in the country have had a part in the matter, and the result is the drafting of a bill which has met with the approval of the boards of trade at Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Halifax and other places, while St. John, N.B., only objected on a few of the minor details. Last week a deputation representing the leading boards of trade in the country assembled at Ottawa and interviewed the Minister of Finance and the Premier in regard to the matter.

The bill is intended to apply to traders and trading co-partnerships, and to trading companies whether incorporated or not, except incorporated banks, insurance, railway and telegraph companies. The sheriff of each county or district, and in Quebec the prothonotary, is to be the guardian, except in counties and districts containing cities with a population of more than 20,000, where the Board of Trade is to appoint a guardian. A debtor shall be insolvent when he has called a meeting of his creditors to compound with them, or if he acknowledges insolvency, if he has absconded, or about to abscond, etc. A creditor or creditors with claims aggregating at least $500 may demand an assignment if a debtor ceases to meet his liabilities generally. Writs of attachment may be secured by any unsecured creditor for $200 if he can show the debtor to be insolvent; these will hold the goods until a liquidator is appointed. Within ten days after assignment or issue of writ of attachment, the guardian may call a meeting of the creditors, and they shall appoint as liquidator, an uninterested party. The creditors may at any meeting appoint one or three inspectors who shall superintend and direct the proceedings of the liquidators. The guardian's remuneration is fixed by an appended schedule and an inspector's at a general meeting of the creditors. The law of set off as administered by the courts of law or equity, shall apply to all claims under the act. All gratuitous contracts and conveyances shall be void if made within the three months next preceeding the insolvency. Any fradulent contract, mortgage, hypothec, or conveyance shall be void if both parties intended to defraud or delay the creditors. Preferences are void; if made within sixty days next before insolvency, they shall be presumed prima facie to be fraudulent. The insolvent is to be discharged with consent of creditors and the depositing of a sworn statement of his affairs, and he shall then be absolutely free and discharged from all existing liabilities. Every discharge procured by fraud, fraudulent preferences or promise of payment, shall be null and void.

The important fact revealed at the conference in Ottawa was that since receiving the draft measure the Minister of Finanee had given the question of insolvency legislation much attention, the result of which was that he had caused another bill to be drafted, and it would shortly be submitted to the Government for approval. Personally he was in favor of an insolvency law, but the subject, he said, was one on which the opinion of Parliament had to be taken. The Premier was non-committal, and the only thing worthy of note that he seems to have said was that it would have been impossible to have passed such a bill last year owing to the shortness of the session. Why time could be found to consider bills of much less importance and not for an insolvency bill he did not explain. The members of the deputation came away buoyed up with the hope that insolvency legislation was at last in sight. It is to be hoped they will not be disappointed.

The framing of an insolvency bill so that it will not unnecessarily trespass upon the liberties of anyone is a delicate undertaking. This is particularly so in regard to the provisions which enable creditors to compel the assignment of a debtor. There are merchants in prosperous circumstances to-day who have experienced in their early history great difficulty in meeting their liabilities. It is in determining whether a debtor is or is not an insolvent that the nice balancing is necessary. That some provision is necessary in this respect is obvious. There are men submerged so deep in the slough of insolvency that there is no hope of their ever being able to get out, and yet they do not seem to realize the fact. Something is needed to put an end to such delusion; but the difficulty lies in creating a power that will not be used unjustly. The draft bill prepared by the boards of trade deals with practically all the grievances now obtaining, and it is to be hoped that the proposed Government bill will be built upon the same lines.

AGAINST THE CO-OPERATIVE IDEA.

THE GROCER'S Montreal correspondent had an interesting conversation the other day with an English gentleman who has been closely connected with the grocery business across the water. Among other things that cropped up was the question of co-operative stores, and whether they were really a source of benefit to purchasers. No positive reply in the negative was given, but the drift of his remarks certainly tended that way, for although the gentleman admitted that in many cases the stores did sell cheap it was generally found that it cost more to run them than a grocery establishment conducted in the ordinary manner. Besides he knew from personal experience that many of them could not sell as cheap as a private store, this fact having been demonstrated beyond doubt at a contest which had taken place. In this contest an order given at a regular store for a variety of articles had been duplicated article for article and quantity for quantity at a co-operative establishment, and the difference in an order for from 7s. to 10s. worth of goods had been 1s. 8d. in favor of the regular store as compared with the co-operative establishment. For instance: Three pounds of butter cost 3s. 8d. at the co-operative store and 3s. 3d. in the regular grocery; six pounds of granulsted sugar called for 1s. 5d. at the co-operative store and 1s. at the grocery. In the case of a pound of candles there had been a difference of 1½d. in favor of the grocery. A bottle of sauce had been obtained ½d. cheaper in the grocery, and the same saving was effected in the case of a pound of tea biscuits and a ¼ lb. of Coleman's mustard. In fact on everyone of the articles stipulated in the contest the difference had been on the side of the privately conducted grocery as against the co-operative establishment. In fact it had been demonstrated that for about eight shillings a customer could purchase at a regular grocery establishment what he would have to pay ten shillings for at a co-operative store, a difference practically of 20 per cent. in favor of the regular grocer. The people who supported the co-operative scheme of course argued that the difference of 2½d. was compensated for in the superior quality of some of the articles bought, but this was simply a claim and not a demonstrated fact. In a word, the gentleman inferred that it would be a comparatively easy task to make a case against the co-operative idea.

OBLIGING GROCERS.

A grocer once said to me that he considered the grocery business a business in which you may be walked on, tossed around, and jumped on in general; but still have to hold your tongue, and bob up serenely every time. 'Tis true, the grocer has to do a great many things now, which ten years ago would have been called silly. He is very often called upon to take a trunk from Greenpoint to Bay Ridge, or, a bed or machine from Fulton Ferry to East New York, and if he does not come at once, he may reckon that woman's trade lost. Then the clerks are often called in to drive a picture nail, hang a picture, put up a clothes line, and all the various other items which are now considered a very essential part of the grocery business. A peculiarity about this tinkering business is that they all want it done in the morning; that is the time when grocers and grocery clerks have nothing to do. In fact, the grocer keeps a force of clerks on hand during the morning just for such emergencies. It makes the grocer feel jolly, too, when the first clerk stays out about an hour over the usual time collecting orders; but when Charlie reports that he had to hold Mrs. Jones' baby or perform some of the other items aforesaid mentioned, everything is forgotten. What good is a man who is not accommodating and self-sacrificing even to the extent of having his orders delivered an hour late?

Another peculiarity about this matter is how willingly the clerks attend to all of it. I have seen some who would climb a tree like a pole cat, carry a two hundred pound trunk to fifth story, or a greasy stove in the cellar, etc., and when they were in the store you could not get them to make a quick move without attaching a trolley pole to them, except when they were closing store. Of all the curiosities in the grocery business which it has been my good fortune to come in contact with, I have yet to find a clerk who is slow in closing the store. Three hundred pound barrels of sugar almost fly, the air appears filled with boxes of soap, and baskets of fruit and vegetables, and before you can say Jack Robinson, presto changeo, your walk is clear, and it is time to go to—well, sometimes bed, but generally to a dance, theatre, or to play pool, and the next morning he can't tell a cake of yeast from a bushel of turnips. Alarm clocks don't bother him, and he could sleep with the City Hall bell ringing at his bedside.

In writing of accommodating grocers, I forgot to mention an interesting instance that happened to a grocer on the heights about a week ago. His trade is of the best, hence no occasion for opening store as early as other grocers. They say the early hours of sleep are the most precious, and I think we will agree to the truthfulness of that assertion, and the grocer especially. It was about 5 o'clock a.m.—the hour when sleep seems to be a whole jewelry store at once—and he was slumbering sweetly, and, perchance, dreaming of the dim, distant future, when grocers will sell sugar at a profit and when dead beats will be no more, when he was aroused by hearing the door bell playing a genuine ta-ra-boom-de-ay. Visions of someone sick, or a fire, or a robbery, flitted through his mind in rapid succession. Hastily dressing he reached the door, and lo! there stood the cause of all the commotion, and a faint whisper came, "Mr. M—, will you please lend me your axe, as I have no wood split to make the kitchen fire." For a moment he felt like doing some scalping business, but his good judgment overcame that and he remembered that he must be accommodating, and he yielded.—J. H. M. in Retail Grocers' Advocate.

The sardine factory at Eastport, owned and operated by Princess Cove Packing Company, was burned at an early hour the other morning. The entire plant and four smoke houses, two of which belonged to Wm. Akers, filled with herring, were destroyed. The factory was run by Hallet & Spear. Loss between $5.000 and $6,000; insurance light.—Gazette, St. John, N.B.

Young in Years

. . BUT . .

A Giant in Size!

In the few years between 1886 and the present, and in the face of tremendous opposition, the soap which has now a sale more than double that of any other soap in the world MUST POSSESS ADVANTAGES AND MERIT FAR BEYOND ALL OTHER SOAPS.

AND THIS IS THE PROUD RECORD AND POSITION OF SUNLIGHT SOAP

The phenomenal success of this soap caused people to wonder how it has all come about, especially when considering that "SUNLIGHT" commands the highest market price.

The answer is simple: SUNLIGHT SOAP is scientifically and chemically made. There is no guess-work about it. It is always the same. Not an ounce of it is put on the market until it has been tested and passed by the chemists employed at the Works. There is no adulterating it in order to cheapen the soap and cheat the user. The result is that SUNLIGHT stands pre-eminent in

TORONTO MARKET.

Excursions on Thanksgiving day brought many buyers to the city, and the buying on Friday and Saturday of last week was somewhat brisker than usual. These visiting buyers picked up many clearances at slaughter prices, but they also bought largely of staple winter goods and of holiday novelties. This week has been somewhat quieter. Very few buyers have been in the city and sorting orders from travellers have been scarcely up to the average.

Almost the only feature of the trade has been the clearing of large lots to the big city retailers. One wholesale millinery house sold $6,000 of silks in one lot, another wholesale house sold $7,000 of silk handkerchiefs and novelties, and another house cleared out a few thousand dollars' worth of dress goods at a single sale. These big city retailers are now gorging themselves with bargains, and their window displays are reinforced with fashionable goods that the wholesalers do not want to carry over. The wholesaler sells at a small loss or perhaps for cost; the retailer then adds a small margin, and still has prices which seem, to the consumer, ridiculously cheap. The small retailer in the city catches it, when this slaughtering begins. He cannot sell when his prices are 10 to 20 per cent higher than that of his elephantine competitor.

Grade C of grey cottons have been sold to wholesalers with a five per cent. discount during the past month. This has again been withdrawn. But this discount still holds in one or two unimportant lines.

Holiday goods are selling well in all lines, although it is not all of the wholesale houses who carry them.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have still a complete range for sorting orders in hosiery and underwear in all lines. Kid gloves for the holiday season are shown in full ranges.

In consequence of the increased demand for ribbed goods in ladies' underwear Gordon, Mackay & Co. have decided to clear out the balance of their stock of Canadian plain woven underwear at prices that will make them go quickly.

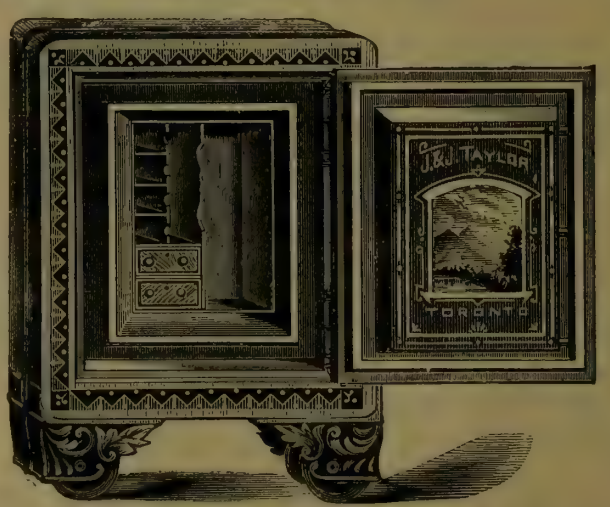
W. R. Brock & Co. have a few special clearing lines in Scotch tweeds and trouserings which they are selling at job prices, which make their sale intensely rapid. Better qualities of overcoatings have been in strong demand for the past two weeks, and they are advising early purchases on account of meagre wholesale stocks generally.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have a full range of neat patterns in cashmere mufflers suitable for the holiday trade. Merinos and silks are also shown, and the colorings are both light and dark with spot patterns predominating. Black wool gloves and mitts are shown in a full range of prices. Colored wool gloves and leather gloves of all descriptions are in full stock.

W. R. Brock & Co. will open on December 1st four cases of lace goods suitable for the holiday trade, being the latest novelties in the lace market, including Irish Pointes in cream, black and two-tone effects, Pointe De Bruges, Chantilly, Oriental, Valenciennes, fancy cotton, etc. Stocktaking is just completed, and in their hosiery, glove and men's furnishing department there are still left, to be cleared out at bargain prices, a large number of odd lots and broken ranges.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are offering in their dress goods department a number of ranges at greatly reduced prices, amongst them a 24-inch melton at 6c., 42-inch at 10c., and a 38-inch figured black dress goods at 20c. These prices hold good only during their stock taking sale.

STOP THIS LEAKAGE.



It has always seemed to us poor policy for grocers to carry so many brands of staple goods, remarks a contemporary Why should one's shelves be burdened with all the packages of coffee extant? Why is it necessary to keep in stock all the different grades of tea? Why should so many different makes of crackers, pickles, salads, canned goods, etc., be carried? It looks as if merchants could not resist the temptation to buy of every sample presented for their inspection. Some of these goods are all right, some fair, while lots of them are worthless. At the end of the year there is always a lot of old stock on hand, much of it unsaleable. They cost money, and money is worth interest, but not a cent's worth of profit or interest do these useless goods produce. Really and truly, what's the use of carrying all these different brands? Keep stock up on popular goods and let the floaters go. Turn your money, don't hide it on shelves and in a dozen different grades and brands of unsaleable goods.

R. W. RITCHIE'S DWELLING PLACE.

It was inadvertently stated in last week's issue that the home of R. W. Ritchie, who represents Eby, Blain & Co., on the Credit Valley branch of the the C.P.R., the W. G. & B., and the T. G. & B. was in Ingersoll. It should have been Orangeville. Few, if any, were misled by the inadvertence, for second thought would persuade them that a traveler whose route lies where Mr. Ritchie's does would scarcely live away up in Oxford county.

Samuel McTaggart, a cheese maker, has been sent to the Central Prison for six months for stealing two cheeses. McTaggart was to have been married the evening previously to being sentenced to the handsome daughter of a highly respected farmer in the Washburn district. THE BUTTERINE INDUSTRY.

One of Kansas City's industries which is making rapid strides, according to the Times, of that city, is the manufacture of butterine. Although it is generally known that four of the great meat packing establishments have butterine departments, many persons will doubtless be surprised to learn that 2,161,557 pounds of artificial butter were made in Kansas City last month. The packers say that the deamnd for butterine is growing very rapidly,and that the output of Kansas City has doubled within the last two years. Prejudice against the substitute for the fruit of the churn seems to be disappearing, as the butterine now manufactured is so nearly similar to genuine butter that none but experts are able to detect the difference.

The butterine manufactured in Kansas City bears the reputation of being the best in the West. Scientists have tested it time and again without discovering any deleterious substance in its composition. The manufacturers make no secret about the ingredients of their product. They say it consists of olio oil, made of choice beef fats; neutral or leaf lard, taken from prime hogs; cream, milk, and a little harmless coloring matter. In the manufacture of the finer grades creamery butter is added. A walk through the butterine department of either of the local packing houses reveals the fact that every care in the way of cleanliness is taken in its manufacture. The compounding is done by none but experienced workmen, and the manufacture of butterine has become an art.

The inhabitants of the two Kansas Citys consume about 300,000 pounds of butterine every month. Nearly all of the butterine used in the South-west comes from Kansas City, and its territory extends westward to the Pacific coast. A large exporting trade is also springing up, and thousands of pounds go abroad every month. The West Indies, South America, Japan and Germany are the principal foreign consumers of butterine.

Butterine sells at a very moderate price, which is a point greatly in its favor. The high grades, classed as creamery, sell in 20, 30, 40, 50 and 60 pound tubs at 19 1-2 cents a pound, while the commoner grades, called dairy, sell at 15 cents a pound in the same sized vessels. Rolls, prints and bricks in ten pound tubs are one-half cent higher than solids. Retailers sell the high grade butterine at 23 to 25 cents a pound and the common grades at 17 1-2 to 20c.—Chicago Grocer.

[As there is often inequality in the prices of the various sellers on this market, owing to differences in buying conditions and other circumstances, and as prices are modified by both quantity and quality, the quotations given below, and in our Prices Current, necessarily take a wide range.]

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Nov. 30, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Trade during the week has been of an uninteresting character. The only thing that has been going out with anything like briskness is dried fruits, and that is nothing more than what has been going on for some weeks. In prices not a change of any import has been announced. Demand for sugar is at a low ebb, and the feeling in regard to price is not one of strength. There has been a little Rio coffee on the market during the week, but it is being rapidly disposed of. Canned goods are without change of any kind. Nuts are meeting with a ready demand, and syrups and molasses are selling fairly well. Nothing particularly new has developed in teas, although there seems to be a fair distribution. The whole trade is nearly all of a Christmas character, and what people want is small parcels of an assorted nature. Money is still slow.

CANNED GOODS.

Nothing new has developed in canned goods. As between packers and jobbers there is nothing practically doing, these two interests being apart in regard to prices. There are not many tomatoes offering, and for those that are a variety of prices are asked. A couple of packers are asking 80c., others 77½c., while some would take as low as 75c., it is said, for brands not so well known. In a jobbing way the regular price for tomatoes is 80 to 85c.; some off brands can be had at 77½c. Peas and corn are quiet and unchanged at 80 to 85c. ordinarily. Canned fruits are sluggish but unchanged in price. We quote: Peaches, $3.10 to $3.25 for 3's, $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's.; raspberries and strawberries $2 to $2.10. The better brands of salmon are still in fair request at previous prices. The idea as to price of good brands is $1.25 for talls and $1 50 for flats: cohoes, $1.05 to $1.10. Lobster is in fair demand at $1.85 to $2,10 for talls and $2.40 to $2.50 for flats. Canned meats are firm. but there is no demand for them.

COFFEES.

There has been a little green Rio coffee on the market this week, but most of it seems to have been wanted to fill previous orders. The outside markets have ruled irregular. Prices here are unchanged and are as follows: Rio, 21 to 22c.; East Indian 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

NUTS.

These are meeting with a ready sale, particularly such as new walnuts, almonds and filberts. We quote:—Brazil nuts 14c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; Tarragona almonds, 12½ to 14c.; peanuts, 11 to 12c. for roasted and 8 to 10c. for green; cocoa nuts, $4.50 to $5.50 per sack; Grenoble walnuts, 13 to 15c.; Marbot walnuts 12 to 13c.; pecans 13½ to 15c.; chestnuts, $4.75 to $5.00 per bushel; hickory, $2 to $2.25.

RICE.

No change, business continuing small and prices as before at 3⅝ to 3¾c. for ordinary and 5 to 5¼c. for Montreal Japan, and 5¾ to 6c. for imported Japan.

SPICES.

Business remains much as before, fairly active at unchanged prices. We quote: Pure black pepper at 13 to 15c.; pure white at 20 to 28c.; pure Jamaica ginger, 25 to 27c.; cloves, 14 to 25c.; pure mixed spice, 30 to 35c.

SUGAR.

Trade is dull and lifeless and devoid of any special feature except it be a scarcity of bright sugars at from 4¼ to 4⅝c. The feeling is easy and lower prices are anticipated; 4¾c. is still the idea for granulated, and yellows are quoted from 3½c up.

THE GROCER'S special sugar cables from London show the course of the world's market for the past few days:

Willett & Gray in their Weekly Statistical say:

THE WEEK—Raws declined 3-16c. Refined declined ¼c. Total stock in all the principal countries, 820,740 tons, against 787,035 tons at same dates last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries estimated. 50,000 tons, against 50,000 last year.

RAWS—The tendency of the markets both at home and abroad have been towards lower prices, evidently because of a disposition to discount the effect of the large surplus of cane sugar and beet crops for the present campaign. The beet, and Demerara. Brazil and Java crops are now available, and in another month the the large crop of Cuba will begin to appear on the market. European beet countries evidently appreciate the situation they are in with a large excess beyond requirements, and there was scarcely a day of this week that did not make a decline of 1½d. in prices. The New York market naturally weakened on any pressure to sell, and with a comparative small business Centrifugals and Java declined 3 16c. per lb. to 3c. for 96° test, the lowest point touched since January, 1891. The future of the sugar situation has not yet been grasped by any one, and is full of surprises no doubt. Larger crops, smaller consumption, tariff changes, general business depression, labor troubles and strikes, all have a bearing on sugar, as it is of universal use. The consumption of sugar in the United States for the year ending October 1st, was 1,828,264 tons, against 1,869,642 tons last year, a decrease of 30,278 tons. But on July 1st of this year our consumption figures show an increase for the first six months of the year of 111,333 tons, or deducting the stock of refined sugar on hand at that time a nett excess of 76,333 tons, so that the actual decrease of consumption since July has been 106,311 tons, and the decrease is still going on. Refiners are now accumulating a new surplus of refined stock, which may or may not disappear before the holiday demand. In any event, it is evident that meltings must be further decreased, as the country is in no condition to consume its usual allowance of sugar. What will become of the surplus, hundreds of thousands of tons, it is difficult to foresee. Invisible stocks will not be increased in the United States, and it is doubtful if they will be in Europe.

REFINED—The situation regarding refined sugar is even more serious than that of raws, for the foreign refiners in their anxiety to market their surplus crop by exportations and get the bounty which goes with such exportations are already crowding shipments this way of granulated sugars which will come in competitions with the American. Sale of German granulated have been made this week at 4c. per lb. delivered in New York. This is a ½c. per lb. below the American price at the opening of the week and ¼c. below the closing price. It can easy be seen what a serious matter this will prove to be before the end of this campaign year. Even without the added possibility of a reduction of the present insignificant 13 per cent. protection, which is proving to be scarcely any protection under large sugar crops in Europe and bounty paid for exportation. Refiners are brought face to face with conditions they have never before experienced, and the outcome of which is not pleasant for them to contemplate.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is a fair demand for small lots, principally for the better grades ranging in price from 2 to 3¼c. There is some going out as low as 1¾c., but low grade syrups are not much wanted. A fair movement is also reported in molasses at unchanged prices. We quote, according to package: Trinidad 32 to 40c., New Orleans 30 to 52c., Porto Rico 38 to 46c.

TEAS.

There seems to be a little better movement in Japan teas, some houses reporting that they have been going out quite rapidly during the week. Indian and Ceylons are in demand, and a good many orders have been taken for China Congous. As to price the idea is 16 to 20c. for Japans, 18 to 35c. for Indians and Ceylons, and 13 to 16c. for low grade Congous, with medium to fine going at 22 to 35c.

DRIED FRUIT.

The activity in this line continues to be the feature of the trade. Valencia raisins are still in good demand with prices steady. Selected off-stalk is scarce and some doubts are expressed whether further shipments will arrive here. There seems to be plenty of layers. Ruling prices are: Off-stalk, 4½ to 4¾c.; fine off-stalk, 5 to 5½c.; selected, 6 to 6½c.; layer, selected, 7c. New Sultana raisins have not yet arrived. First direct shipments are expected early next month. Old fruit is selling at 5 to 7½c. and 8c. Malaga fruit is quiet and unchanged. We quote as before; London layers, $2.25; connoisseur clusters, $3; dessert clusters, $3.75 to $4; quarter flats Dehesas, $1.50. Bordeaux prunes continue to arrive and they are selling at 5 to 5¾c. New Bosnia prunes are due here in a few days and will sell at about 6½ to 10c. A good many currants are still moving. Common currants are selling at 3¾ to 4c., but for good fruit we quote: 4¼ to 4½c. for provincials in bbls. and 4⅝c. in half bbls.; Filiatras, 4¾ to 5c. in bbls., 4⅞ to 5¼c. in half bbls.; Patras, 5¾ to 6c. for bbls., 5⅞ to 6¼c. in half bbls., 6 to 6½c. in cases; Vostizzas, 7 to 8½c. in cases, 7¼ to 8¾c. in half cases; Panariti

MARKETS—Continued.

(better than are Vostizzas), 9½ to 10c. The few new Eleme figs that are to be found on the market are selling at 10 to 12c.; the first direct shipment of the new fruit will probably be here in a few weeks. New dates are going out nicely at 6 to 6½c. for fine layers.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The market is well supplied, shipments during the week being liberal, but the demand is good and prices much as before, although the tendency if anything is towards easiness. Jobbers are paying 18 to 19c. for choice dairy butter and selling at 20 to 21c. Large rolls are taken at 17 to 19c. and jobbed out at 18 to 20c. Bakers' butter is in good demand and selling at 16 to 17c. Farmers' pound rolls are plentiful; jobbers are taking them at 20 to 23c and selling them at 22 to 25c. Trade is quiet in creamery butter. A few tubs are being taken by commission men at 22 to 23c., and they are being jobbed out at 24 to 25c. The jobbing price for creamery pound prints is much the same as for tubs.

Cheese continues in steady demand for local consumption at 11c. for August make and 11½c. for September. Old cheese is quoted at 10 to 10¾c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Trade remains much as before. Some hand-picked lots have been taken by jobbers at $1.20 to $1.25 and the regular jobbing price is $1.40 to $1.50 for the choice article.

DRIED APPLES—Remain quiet and unchanged. Jobbers are paying 5 to 5¼ and selling at 5½ to 5¾c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Dull and unchanged, the jobbing price still being 10¼c.

EGGS—There has been no material change. New laid is quoted as high as 21 to 22c., and ordinary fresh stock is quoted at 17c. Limed are quoted at 15 to 16c. Regarding the proposed change in the United States tariff, some are of the opinion that it will induce some to hold pickled eggs back, while others say it will have no such effect, as by the time it becomes law the South American eggs will be on this market.

POULTRY—The market this week is again glutted with poultry, and much of it is in bad condition. For good stock we quote: Turkeys, 8 to 9c. per lb.: geese, 5 to 6c. per lb.; chickens, 30 to 40c. a pair; ducks, 50 to 60c.

POTATOES—There have been some sales of car lots on track at 51c., but the idea seems to be 1c. less than that figure. Small lots are still quoted at 55c. off the cars and and 60c. out of store

HONEY—Demand small and prices unchanged at 7 to 8c. for extracted white clover in 10 lb. tins and upwards, and at 14 to 15c. for sections.

HOPS—No change. A few lots of good hops are going out at 18 to 20c. for 93's, and yearlings are quoted at 12 to 13c. New hops do not seem obtainable in the country.

ONIONS—Trade has fallen off somewhat, but prices are unchanged, Spanish selling at 80 to 85c. per crate and Canadian at $1 to $1.10 per bag.

SWEET POTATOES—Quiet and unchanged at $3 50 to $3.75 per bbl.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

Dressed hogs continue to arrive in large numbers, and another drop in prices is announced as a consequence. Breakfast bacon is scarce and the price for that article is fairly steady in consequence.

BACON—Long clear, 9¾ to 10c.; smoked backs, 11 to 11½c.; bellies, 13 to 13½c.; rolls, 9¾ to 10c.

HAMS—In fair demand and unchanged at 12 to 12½c. for smoked, and at 11c. for pickled.

LARD—Demand is fair for shipment, but for local consumption there is not much wanted. Pure Canadian 11½c. in tubs, 11¾c. in pails and 11c. in tierces. Compound 8¾ to 9c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $18.50, Canadian short cut $19.50, shoulder mess $17.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 4 to 5c., hindquarters 6½ to 8c., mutton 5 to 6c., lamb 6½ to 7c., veal 7½ to 9c.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW

HIDES—There is practically no change in the price of hides; trade remains quiet. We quote: No. 1 cows' 3¼c., and 2¾c. for No. 2's; steers are 1c. in advance.

SKINS—Remain the same as last report; good sheepskins are bringing from 65 to 70c.; calfskins are nominal, dealers paying 5 and 6c.

WOOL—Nothing much doing in this article. Prices remain unchanged. We quote 17 and 18c. for good pulled wool, and 20c. for select No. 1.

TALLOW—There is a good demand in tallow. Prices are a little firmer, dealers paying 5½c. and selling 5¾ to 6c.

GREEN FRUIT.

FOREIGN—On account of a liberal supply oranges have dropped 25 to 50c., and since the decline an active demand has sprung up. Lemons are also lower, and an increased demand is reported for the better grades; other kinds are not wanted. California dried fruit is not yet occupying much attention. Cape Cod cranberries are not receiving much attention on account of their becoming soft; the New Jersey article now being the most favored at $6.50 to $7.

DOMESTIC—Apples are steady and in good demand. Quite a few apples are being shipped to the States. A few have been shipped to England, but results have not been up to expectations. Practically the only Canadian grapes now on the market are the Catawba, but there is not much doing in them.

We quote: Oranges—Floridas, $2.75 to $3.25; lemons, Messinas, $4 to $5.00; Malagas, $3.25 to $4 per box, and half chests $7 to $7.50; bananas, $1.25 to $2.00; pears, 50 to $1 per basket; Catawba grapes, 3½ to 4c. per lb.; Malaga grapes, $4.50 to $6 per keg. Cranberries, Cape Cod, $6.50 to $7 per bbl.; boxes, $2.40 to $2 50; New Jersey, $6.50 to $7 per bbl.; Canadian, $5 to $6.00 per barrel; boxes, $2 to $2.15. California dried fruit—Apricots, 17½c. per lb.; peaches, 14c. per lb.; nectarines, 15c.

FISH.

Trade has been dull during the week, and prices remain as before. We quote: Fresh sea salmon, 17 to 19c.; skinned and boned cod-fish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $4.50 per barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2.00 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7½c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.; prepared frogs 50c. per doz.; dressed sturgeon, 7 to 8c.; oysters in bulk, $1.50 for standard and $2 selected; cisco, 3 to 4c. each; salt mackerel in bulk, 10c. per lb.; pike, 6 to 6½c. per lb.

SALT.

The trade during the past week has been rather quiet. No change in prices. We quote: Coarse sacks, 60c.; fine sacks, common, 70c.; dairy, in barrels, $1.25; American rock, $10 per ton.

SEEDS.

Business remains much as before. Alsike is being taken at $4.50 to $6 for inferior to choice, and at $6.50 to $7 for fancy. Red clover is quiet at $5.50 to $5 75, with $5.90 to $6 being occasionally paid for choice to fancy. Timothy is quoted at $1 to $1.25 for inferior and $1,50 to $1.60 for prime.

PETROLEUM.

A good business at unchanged prices continues to be done on the Toronto market. We quote: 5 to 10 barrel lots, imperial gallon Toronto: Canadian 12½ to 13c.; carbon safety, 16½ to 17c.; Canadian water white, 18½ to 19c.; photogene, 22c.

The Petrolea Advertiser in its weekly report says: It is not an easy matter these times to ascertain the exact market price of either refined or crude, but as near as we are able to get at it, by enquiry from several sources, and drawing our own conclusions, we quote: Refined, 6 to 6½c. in bulk, or 8¾ to 9½c. in barrels in car lots f.o.b. here. Why refiners should be so reticent, or why they should appear to quote a false price to the press (if indeed they do, and if not we are at a loss to account for the difference in their quotations) we are unable to say. Be that as it may, however, discrepancies in statements there are, and these are peculiar times for Canadian oil men. Producers are harrassed beyond measure to find a scheme to raise the price of crude to a paying figure.

MARKET NOTES.

Smith & Keighley are offering a cheap line of Malaga figs.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have a fresh shipment of new French prunes in stock.

Warren Bros. & Boomer received a shipment of French prunes in mats Tuesday.

Eggs at this season are scarce and dear. The custard powder for sale by Lucas, Steele & Bristol is a treasure in the culinary department.

Clemes Bros. are in receipt of a further shipment of Uncas brand of Florida oranges. They have arranged to receive a car weekly during the season.

Cayenne pepper and mixed spice in five pound tins are on sale by Lucas, Steele & Bristol. They are handy at this season of the year.

Warren Bros. & Boomer received a shipment of 250 bags of Rio coffee Tuesday. It is being rapidly cleaned out, coming as it did upon a bare market.

Eby, Blain & Co. have a shipment of fine imported castile soap in one and three pound bars; also jam in three pound and gallon tins and one pound glasses.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have had a shipment of Turkish prunes tied up between Toronto and New York for the last ten days on account of the railway strike.

The Canada Sugar Refining Co. are putting up honey syrup in two and three gallon tins, which are handsomely decorated and fitted with a handle similar to an ordinary pail.

James Turner & Co. received an order from Quebec city for curling brooms. The buyer saw their "ad" in THE GROCER. "That GROCER is a corker," writes Mr. Turner.

Roberts' tablet jellies are still on sale with Lucas, Steele & Bristol. This firm also handles fine acidulated candies in five pound jars, also the B. F. P. cough drops in five pound tins.

C. Whittall & Co.'s first shipment of Smyrna figs arrived at Halifax, per s. s. Numidian, 26th inst. This will enable the trade to bring their stocks up to the usual standard required for the Canadian trade.

In THE GROCER of Nov. 17, it was stated that F. J. Hart was connected with the Montreal Fruit Exchange. This was an error. Mr. Hart is the president of the Montreal Fruit Auction Co., an organization distinct from the Exchange. and are prepared to supply their customers. They are the Canadian agents, and the article that has been sold as the same on this market is now a thing of the past.

Dawson & Co. shipped a car of turkeys to the English market this week and a car of apples to Chicago. They had to pay a duty of over $103 on the car of apples. Apple shippers will undoubtedly benefit by the proposed removal of the duty.

Since 1847 till now James Turner & Co. never had a better assorted or fine stock of Christmas fruits then they are now offering. Their city business has increased so much that they have been forced to add another telephone to their sample room. This speaks well for the old house.

"Advertising when you have the right grade of goods pays," says W. H. Gillard & Co. "Since our fruit advertisement has been placed in THE GROCER, many orders have been received through the direction of that medium, several of our customers coming to Hamilton to personally inspect our stock."

The copy for Rose & Laflamme's advertisement was received too late for the desired change to be made. The trade may be interested to know how it read. "Health and Happiness. To secure both for your customers give them for breakfast Fould's germ meal, for dinner Patterson's Woster sauce, for tea Ram Lal's tea and for supper Patterson's essence of coffee. If you cannot get them from your wholesale grocer write us for quotations."

SAMPLE-ROOM TALK.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol: Malaga raisins are getting scarce, and our present stock will be exhausted before many days. Several brands are sold out, and we have outside enquiries.

James Turner & Co.: As with Grenoble walnuts, so with new dates, we are the first to have these in Hamilton. Our first import of new dates is about out; others closely to hand.

W. H. Gillard & Co: The Zenith Stain Killer, a new arrival on the Canadian market, which is guaranteed to remove every kind of stain on whatever substance with the exception of the complexion and character, is having a large sale with us.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol: The Carpos currants, in barrels and halves, offering by us, are beauties. Last season in cases they sold for about 7 cents. Get quotations from our travelers.

W. H. Gillard & Co.: Mallawalla Tea, which has now been handled on this market for several years by us, is gaining steadily in favor, and necessitates ordering in very large consignments. A new arrival is just to hand and all back orders can now be filled which have been held for goods.

FLOUR AND FEED.

Although there is small room for adulteration in the flour and feed business, yet you occasionally find it in some articles. Buckwheat flour is the most frequent article practised upon. True the adulterants are harmless, but the decit is there just the same. The miller is not wholly to blame. Dealers can always get pure buckwheat flour by paying the price, but they don't want to pay the price, probably because the public will not pay them. The supply of adulterated goods keeps pace with the demand for cheap goods. It always has and probably always will.

Letters to hand by last English mail report sales of good Russian wheat in Liverpool at 4s. 9d. per 100 lbs., while sales of peas were recorded in the same market at 5s. 4d. per 100 lbs. showing to what depths of depression the wheat market has descended, when the price of hog feed is higher than that of wheat. It is to be hoped that this is the darkest hour before the down, and that the prince of cereals will not have to bear the stigma of being of less value than that of hog feed much longer. One thing is certain says, The Trade Bulletin, and that is the lower prices go now the greater will be their exaltation later on. But how much later? That is the question.

Exports of wheat and flour as wheat, both coasts last week aggregated 2,764,000 bushels, contrasted with 2,645,000 bushels, the previous week and 3,465,000 bushels in the third week of November last year.

Bradstreet's publishes the following statement on wheat supplies and prices. The mere fact that prices of wheat continue to lag at or about 60c. per bushel at Chicago seems to a disinterested mind to indicate that the trade, as a matter of fact, do not really believe in the short crop estimates of wheat here this year. If they did put faith in them wheat would be nearer $1 per bushel in Chicago than it has been in a long time, because the demand to buy on speculative account would be extraordinarily heavy. It therefore becomes quite plain that so far as the speculative public are concerned, low crop wheat estimates are completely discredited. As has been pointed out before the outlook so far as the wheat crop in the United States in 1893 is concerned, is for a harvest of not less than 440,000,000 bushels, which, if added to about 76,000,000 bushels available reserves carried over on July, at least furnishes a total available wheat for this cereal year of 516,000,000 bushels. Taking out 368,000,000 bushels for probable wants for seed and food for the entire year, 148,000,000 bushels are found remaining available for export, of which, as heretofore explained, about 81,000,000 had been shipped abroad about the middle of this month, leaving, as it would appear, about 67,000,000 bushels for export if needed between November 16, 1693, and June 30, 1894, a little more than the average of 2,000,000 bushels available for shipment weekly during the remainder of the cereal year. On the other hand, if the 380,000,000 bushels wheat crop estimate is to prevail it is time the trade appreciated what such a shortage in supplies means, and proceed to buy May wheat to the extent of their ability.

There are different opinions regarding the coming hay season, some maintaining that owing to the high freight rates from the American seaboard shippers here will be greatly handicapped, the lowest freight rate from New York to Liverpool being 50s., and it is stated if this high freight is maintained it will seriously interfere with the export trade of Canada. There have been sales of No. 2 hay in the West at $8 f.o.b., but it is said at this reasonable figure there would be no money in shipping it. Dealers do not anticipate the high prices that ruled last spring, owing to the large quantities of hay sent to England from other countries.

As to the feeding value of wheat bran, the Michigan Farmer says that if made the exclusive grain feed, and fed freely, it will certainly stimulate the flow of milk, and as nature has the power of converting nitrogenous material into fat, it will somewhat increase the amount of butter in the milk, but not to the extent that it increases the flow. Mix with wheat bran its weight of cornmeal, and the combination makes an excellent butter ration. Cornmeal should always, in our judgment, constitute a part of the grain ration, but should not be fed exclusively, as it is too heating.

THE MARKETS.

TORONTO.

Since our last report prices have been fairly steady, and although there are no immediate signs of strength, yet there is good reason for the supposition that prices have reached bottom. Navigation has practically closed and the winter rates are now in effect.

FLOUR—Manitoba patents, $3.70 to $3.80; strong bakers', $3.50; white wheat patents, $3 25 to $3.40 ; straight roller, $2.80 to $2.95; Ontario family, $2.85 to $3.10 ; low grades, $2 10 to $2.25. These prices are in large lots delivered here to the trade.

MEAL—Rolled oats, $3.80 to $3 85; granulated and standard oatmeal, $3.80 ; cornmeal, common, $3.15; gold dust, $3.40.

FEED—Bran still continues in good demand with a further advance this week, city mills now selling at $13.00 per ton ; delivered (on track) $12.50 per ton. Shorts steady, at $14 in ton lots ; delivered on track, $13.75. In oats the feeling has been easy all week, although at the close prices are stiffening up; 32½c. per bus. on track is about value. Market prices are 32½c. to 33½c. per bus.; feed corn, 53c. per bus.

HAY—Prices are steady. Pressed on track worth $9.50 to $9.75. Farmers' loads range from $7 to $9, according to quality.

STRAW—The demand is limited, with prices steady. Pressed on track, $5.50 to $6.00 per ton. Market prices are $7 to $8 for sheaf, with loose nominal at $4 per ton.

PEAS—Steady, with sales on the market at from 56 to 57c.

MONTREAL.

The flour market is quiet and prices are lower. Winter wheat is quoted at $3.60 to $3.80, and Manitoba strong bakers' best brands at $3 50 to $3.55. We quote :—Winter wheat, $3.60 to $3 80 ; Manitoba patents, best brands, $3.70 to $3.80; straight rollers, $3 to $3 10; extra, $2.90 to $3; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.40 to $3.60; Manitoba strong bakers', best brands, $3.50 to $3.55.

The demand for oatmeal is slow, but the market is steady, millers asking more money. Standard bags $1.90 to $2 ; do. brls., $3.80 to $4.10; granulated, bags, $2 to $2.05 ; do., brls., $4.20 to $4.30 ; rolled oats, bags, $2; do., brls., $4 15 to $4.25.

There is a good enquiry for feeding stuffs at quotations. Bran, $15.50 to $16.50; shorts, $16 to $18 ; Mouille, $22.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

P. E. I. oats are firm, being offered at a price between Carleton County and Ontario. Hay is higher. Flour from the mills is quoted about 5c. higher, and millers are firm. Cornmeal is off 5c. We quote : Manitoba, $4.50 to $4.60 ; Ontario high grade, $3.85 to $4 ; medium, $3.40 to $3.60 ; oatmeal, $4.25 to $4 35 ; cornmeal, $2.60 to $2.70 ; western grey B. W. meal, $2.50 ; Middlings on track, $18.50 to $19 ; bran, $17 to $18. Oats, N.B., 36 to 37c ; P. E. I., 38 to 40c ; Ontario, 40 to 41c., these prices are on track. Beans, prime, $1.35 ; hand-picked, $1 45. Split peas, $3.75 to $4 ; pot barley, $3 75 to $3.85. Hay, on track, $13 to $13.50 ; small lots, $14 to $15.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The volume of business has, if anything, shown a slight improvement during the week, and, despite the disturbance caused by low offers on many of the leading staples, jobbers in general hold that there is no serious difficulty about doing business at a fair margin of profit. There has been no striking change in values since our last. Sugar continues at the present decline, 4 1-2c., which it may be remarked is the lowest for over a year. Some fair sized deals in canned tomatoes have transpired amounting to several thousand cases on the basis of 80c., the buyer in the case being a speculator. Dried fruit continues steady, round lots of Valencia raisins changing hands at steady prices. Otherwise there is no special feature to note except that there appears to be a healthy movement in all lines, while payments as a rule continue satisfactory on the whole.

DRIED FRUIT.

Despite low offers by certain sellers on low grade Valencia raisins, the general run of jobbers experience no difficulty in doing business in prime stock at a basis which leaves them a reasonable margin of profit. This is easily understood when it is known that sales of round lots of Valencia off-stalk amounting to over 3,000 boxes have changed hands at 4 to 4 1-4c. for good seconds and 4 1-2c. for prime off-stalk. The latter is the best selling grade, as it is being jobbed to retailers around 5c., while selected off-stalk is firm and scarce at 5 1-2c. in a jobbing way, and good sales of layers have transpired at 6 to 6 1-2c. It is admitted also that stocks throughout the country are not heavy, while those on spot are light, the few lots that have arrived recently being wanted, while those on the way cannot be here before the middle of next month, and besides goods cannot be bought in New York at prices to compete with the figures ruling here. In a general way, therefore, we quote the market for dried raisins firm as follows: Ordinary Valencia off-stalk, 4 1-4 to 5c., according to brand; fine, 5 1-4 to 5 1-2c.; selected, very scarce, at 6c., and layers at 6 to 6 1-2c., according to quality.

Currants are very firm in sympathy with the tenor of strong advices from primary markets already referred to in this column. Business is of satisfactory volume at the following range: Provincials, 3 3-4 to 4c.; Filiatrias, 4 1-2 to 5c., and Vostizzas, 6 to 7c., as to quality for jobbing parcels.

Figs which have arrived this week have been selling at 9 1-2 to 12 1-2c., according to quality, which is rather easier. New dates are steady at 6 to 6 1-2c. in a jobbing way, and round lots have been sold to arrive at the usual concession on this. Prunes remain steady, 5 3-4 to 6c.

NUTS.

There has not been any special feature to note in this market. New walnuts have been selling at 11 1-2 to 12c., and almonds at 11 to 12c. New filberts to arrive in New York at 9c., and pecans 8 1-2c. We quote: Filberts, 8 1-2 to 9c.; French walnuts, 8 to 9c.; Grenoble walnuts, 11 to 12c.; pecans, 8 1-2 to 12c.; peanuts, 8 to 11c. per lb., and cocoanuts, $3.75 to $4 per 100; Terragona almonds, 11 1-2 to 12c.; and shelled almonds, 23 to 45c., according to grade.

GREEN FRUIT.

The market for green fruit has been fairly active and steady during the week. Receipts of apples have been light, and as a result prices have ruled firm at $3.25 to $3.50 for No. 1, and $2 to $2.50 for No. 2 in car lots. Malaga grapes have been in good demand at prices ranging from $4 to $6 per keg. Fine Florida oranges are offering to a free sale at $2.25 to $3 per crate. Offerings of lemons have been of poor quality, and have sold at $2.50 to $3 per box, but receipts of better stock are expected this week. A small demand is met for bananas at $1.75 to $2.50, while cranberries are strong at $5.50 to $6.50. California pears move at $3 to $3.25 per box.

SUGAR.

There has been no further change in sugar since the decline noted in our last but many buyers are undecided what to do in consequence of the repeated slumps that have occurred. Raw sugar, according to advices, is likewise depressed in London and elsewhere and the market is dull in consequence of all these depressing conditions. We quote refiners' prices, 4 1-2c. for granulated, and yellows, 3 1-2 to 4 1-2c.

SYRUPS.

There is no change in syrups, which rule at 1 5-8 to 2c. per lb. for Canadian in the wood and 19 to 22c. per gallon for American in barrels. The volume of business is fair but not excessive.

MOLASSES.

For genuine Barbadoes molasses values are steady in tone, for none of it can be had at concessions, although some stock is offering at lower figures, in which connection it is claimed that some old Trinidad is being put through a mixing process and being sold as the former. We quote 33 to 34c. in a regular jobbing way, with round lots 30 to 30 1-2c. for 50 and 75 puncheon lots.

TEA.

It has been another very quiet week in tea, but sales of Japans have transpired at a range of 12 to 13c. for lots of 200 packages or so. Advices from Japan state that the settlements to the 8th October are many thousand piculs short of those of the corresponding date last year. We quote Japans: Common, 12 to 13c.; medium, 15 to 17c.; fine, 18 to 21c.; and finest, 23 to 32c.

COFFEES.

Coffee is steady at former quotations, there being a fair demand for Java, Mocha, Maracaibo, etc., at steady prices. We quote: Jamaica, 16 to 18c.; Maracaibo, 19 1-2 to 21c.; Porto Cobello, 19 to 20c.; Rio, 17 1-2 to 19c.; Java, 24 to 28c.; and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

SPICES.

A fair movement has transpired in spices of all kinds, and nutmegs are higher, having sold in a round way at 60 to 65c. for medium grades. We quote: Jamaica ginger, 15 to 16c. for common, and 18 to 20c. for finer qualities; black pepper, 6 to 7c.; pimento, 6c.; and nutmegs, 60 to 65c. to $1.

RICE.

There has been a fair movement in rice at steady prices. We quote: Japan standard, $3.75; standard B, $3.40; English style, $3.20; choice Burmah, $3.85; Japan crystal, $4.25; Patna, $4.25 to $5; Carolina, $6.50 to $7.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods market has not shown much change in the way of regular jobbing business, but there have been some large speculative deals put through this week which may possibly influence the market. For instance, we hear on good authority that a speculator has taken the straight line of one packer comprising several thousand cases of tomatoes on the basis of 80c. Corn is also moving more freely from first hands to buyers here at the same figure, while gallon cans of apples are scarce and firmly held at $2.25 the dozen in straight lots to jobbers. We quote tomatoes, $1.72 1-2 to $1.80; corn, 75 to 80c.; peas, 90 to 95c.; strawberries, $2.75 per doz.; raspberries, $1.80; salmon, $1.25 to $1.27 1-2 for best brands and $1.05 to $1.10 for cohoes; lobsters, $1.60 to $1.75; mackerel, $1 to $1.05.

FISH.

The fish market has furnished a business of a satisfactory kind. In pickled fish herring have met with a good demand, with sales of shore fish at $4.50 to $4.65, while Labrador have sold as high as $5 to $5.25 per bbl in round lots. Green cod is offering in fair supply, but dry cod is scarce, and the same remark applies to pickled B. C. salmon which is very firm in tone. We quote: No. 1 Cape Breton herring, $5.50; No. 1 Newfoundland do., $5; No. 1 green cod, $5 to $5.25; Labrador salmon, $14 to $15 per bbl.; B.C. do. $12 to $13; No. 2 mackerel, $12; finnan haddies, 7c. to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1.10 to $1.50 per box; kippered herring, $1.50 per box; haddock, 3 1-2 to 4c.; cod, 4 to 4 1-2c.; boneless cod, 6 1-2 to 7c.; hand picked malpeque oysters, $4.50 to $5; ordinary do., $3.50 to $4.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

The egg market is firm under light supplies, fresh boiling stock easily fetching 20c. for finest, ordinary 16 1-2 to 17c., and limed 16 to 17c. Onions are steady under a fair demand for both red and yellow at $2 to $2.25 per barrel respectively. There is no material change in potatoes, which rule steady at 60 to 65c. per bag in large lots, and in small lots 70 to 80c. Dressed hogs are offering at easy prices, sales transpiring the other day at $6.50 to $7 per 100 lbs. Dressed poultry continues much the same. Turkeys fetch 10 to 10 1-2c., and geese 6 1-2 to 7 1-2c., while chickens are quiet at 6 1-2 to 7c, and ducks 9 to 10c. Honey remains steady. White clover in comb commands 13 to 13 1-2c., and buckwheat, 10 to 12c. Extracted is quiet at 7 to 8c. for new and 5 1-2 to 6c. for old. Hops are dull at 17 1-2 to 21c., with the market in buyers' favor. Maple products are quiet at 4 1-2 to 5c. for syrup in the wood and 50 to 60c. in tins, with sugar 6 to 7c. per lb. Beans are easier, round lots having changed hands at $1.25, and we quote hand-picked $1.25 to $1.35, and other grades, $1 to $1.10.

PROVISIONS.

A fair movement is noted in pork at quotations. Lard and smoked meats are unchanged. We quote: Canadian short cut, $22 to $23; mess pork, Western, new, per bbl., $21 to $22; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12 1-4c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-2c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 8 1-4 to 9 1-4c.

CHEESE.

Cheese does not show any very striking change, the tone ruling fairly steady. Mail advices from Liverpool state: The demand during the past week has not come up to expectations, but holders of fancy quality are firm in their views, and are not disposed to give way in prices. There is a fair enquiry for goods about 45 to 48s. Market closes steady. Quotations are: Extra fancy, 54s. 6d. to 56s.; finest, 52s. to 54s.; good to fine, 46s. to 50s. We quote: Finest Ontario fall cheese, 10 7-8 to 11c.; finest Townships fall cheese, 10 3-4 to 10 7-8c.; finest Quebec fall cheese, 10 5 8 to 10 3-4c.; medium grades, 10 1-2c.; cable, 54s.

BUTTER.

Butter is firm but there is only a small business doing. English mail advices give the market at Liverpool as follows: "The demand has been good, but there is still an absence of really choice quality. Since last issue Hamburg kegs have been more enquired for. Irish—There has been quite a good demand for finest goods, and markets are firm and advancing, supplies still being small. Quotations are: Extra fancy Danish kiels, 134s. to 136s.; finest, 124s. to 128s.; Hamburg kegs, 126s. to 128s. Irish—Finest Tipperary, 117s. to 119s.; seconds, 108s. to 112s." We quote: Finest fall creamery, 22 1-2 to 23c.; earlier makes, 21 to 21 1-2c.; finest Townships dairy, 21 to 22c.; finest Western dairy, 19 1-2 to 20c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Canned apples in gallon tins are very scarce and firm on this market at $2.25 per dozen in round lots.

M. Lefebvre & Co. have closed some good contracts for jams, jellies and pickles during the week.

L. Chaput & Co. note a good demand for their fine lines of dried raisins which arrived recently via New York.

Rose & Laflamme closed out a large lot of dates which is arriving this week ex the S.S. Borderer via Boston at 4 3-4 to 5c.

W. T. Costigan & Co. closed out a large line of canned corn the other day, the balance of a line received a short time ago.

A speculator bought on this market Monday the straight lot of a tomato packer amounting to several thousand cases at 80c.

Hart & Tackwell have landing in New York this week a large line of filberts which they are offering to arrive at 9c.; also some polished pecans at 8 1-2c.

Mr. Lightbound, of Lightbound, Ralston & Co., invited his brother merchants of the wholesale guild to dine with him on Wednesday evening of this week.

W. T. Costigan, of W. T. Costigan & Co., is at present away on a two weeks' business trip in the United States. He is expected back at the end of the present week.

The movement in black teas on English account is still to note, two invoices having been put through during the week at 7 1-4d. and 9d. respectively, f.o.b. London.

Rose & Laflamme secured a new agency this week, having been appointed the head Canadian agents for Batger & Co., London, Eng., the celebrated manufacturers of jams and jellies.

Advices to W. T. Costigan & Co. from Yokohama state that the settlements for all Japan to October 8 were 347,000 piculs against 369,000 piculs for the same time in 1892, a shortage of 22,000 piculs.

ST. JOHN MARKETS, N. B.

St. John, N. B., Nov. 30, 1893.

Business remains quiet for the time of year. The river is now closed, and a number of the packets going to Nova Scotia have made their last trips. These are indications that the fall trade is drawing to a close. In the grocery business it has not been up to the mark, but when we compare ourselves with other points we feel we have much to be thankful for. In a number of articles there is a distinct upward tendency.

Canned Goods.—Markets are firm, oysters alone being a little easier. Hoegg's lobsters are scarce and are held firm at full $2.00 to $2.15. Corn, 90c.; peas, 90c.; tomatoes, 95 to $1.00; salmon, $1.35 to $1.40; lobsters, $1.75 to $2.15; beef, Canadian, $2.60; do., American, $2.70; oysters, $2.15 to $2.35.

Dried Fruits and Nuts.—Prices continue low. Stock of off-stalk is large, but that of layers, Valencia, is small, and a number of orders for this grade have been placed in New York during the past week. California London layers are now in this market. Malaga Londons are selling much too cheap in this market when the fact is remembered that the New York market is bare. Currants are quoted to arrive New York at 1 3-4c. in bbls. Peanuts are being offered from Norfolk very low. Prices to-day: Valencia off-stalk, 4 1-2 to 4 3-4c.; do., layers, 5 1-2 to 5 3-4c.; London layers, $2.00 to $2.25; dates, 6 1-2 to 7c.; prunes, 6 3-4 to 7c.; dried apples, 6 to 6 1-2c.; evaporated apples, 11 to 11 1-2c.; figs, 10 to 12c.; currants, 3 1-2 to 4c. in bbls., 4 to 4 1-2c. in cases; French walnuts, 11 to 12c.; Grenobles, 13 to 15c.; Brazil, 13 to 14c.; filberts, 11 to 12c.; pecans, 12 to 13c.; peanuts, roasted, 10 to 11c.

Sugar.—The position is unchanged. Montreal is still quite successfully competing with local refineries. Granulated, 5c.; yellows, 4 1-8 to 4 3-4c.; Barbadoes, 4 1-4 to 4 1-2c.; Paris lump, 6 1-2 to 6 3-4c.; pulverized, 6 1-2 to 6 3-4c.

Molasses and Syrups.—The market here is easy, and lots have changed hands among the wholesale dealers at 29c. for Barbadoes. A lot which arrivrived here from Yarmouth has not turned out all that could be desired. Best grades are scarce in the city and will bring good figures, though the quantity of second quality keeps the market low. Barbadoes, best, 31 to 32c.; second, 29 to 30c.; Porto Rico, best, 35 to 36c.; second, 30 to 31c.; Antigua, 28 to 29c.; sugar syrup, 35c.; Porto Rico, in 45 gal. bbls., 30 to 31c.

Dairy Products.—Eggs are slow. There are a great many in the market, and in many cases their freshness is doubted. Guaranteed fresh eggs find good sale. Butter is much firmer, and everything points to higher prices. Everything depends on the quality and storekeepers through the country should give this matter of butter much more attention than they do. Cheese is firm. Eggs today, 18 to 19c.; cheese, 10 3-4 to 11c.; creamery butter, 23 to 25c.; dairy do., 20 to 23c.; store packed do., 18 to 20c.

Fruits.—Apples are firmer than last week, and with the stopping of the schooner coming from Nova Scotia ports an advance is looked for. Bishop Pippins are scarce. Florida oranges keep low, and but for the fact that they do not arrive in very good order would be higher. West India oranges are just at present plentiful, between 600 and 700 barrels having arrived on last steamer. It is now a matter between the fruit men and commission men what the price shall be. Grapes and cranberries are higher. Florida lemons, which are now being offered, are very firm. Peaches, pears, quinces, and bananas are about out of the market. Prices: West India oranges, $5.00 to $5.50 per bbl.; Florida do., $3.50 per box; lemons, $4.50 to $5.00; cranberries $6.00 to $6.25; grapes, per keg, $5.00 to $5.50.

Provisions.—Pork shows signs of weakening, though decline as yet has been light. Offers are being made by city dealers as low as the goods can be brought here. Clear mess, $22.00 to $23.00; American mess, $22; prime mess, $18.00 to $18.50. Plate beef is lower at $13.75 to $14; pure lard, 12 to 12 1-2c.; compound, 10 to 10 1-2c.

Fish.—Market is steady. We quote: Codfish, medium, $3.40 to $3.50; large, $4.00 to $4.20; haddock, $1.80 to $2; pollock, $1.90 to $2; bay herring, bbls., $2.75 to $3; hf. bbls., $1.40 to $1.50; Grand Manan herring, hf. bbls., $1.40 to $1.50; Canso herring, bbls., $5 to $5.25; hf. bbls., $2.50 to $2.75; Shelburne herring, No. 1, bbls., $3.75 to $4; hf. bbls., $2.25 to $2.35; Shelburne herring, No. 2, bbls., $3 to $3.25; hf. bbls., $1.75 to $1.80; smoked herring, 10 to 11c.

Salt.—Coarse, 50c.; fine, $1.00.

FIRE IN A PICKLING HOUSE.

The recent fire in Heinz Bros. & Co.'s pickling establishment in Pittsburg, Pa., has elicited many expressions of sympathy from friends of the extensive firm of H. J. Heinz Co. under the impression that it was that firm which was burned out. This is a mistake, H. J. Heinz Co. have had no fire, but Heinz Bros. & Co., who are an entirely different concern, having neither family nor business connections with H. J. Heinz Co., though of a similar name. H. J. Heinz Co., manufacturers of the pickles and condiments bearing the well known "Keystone" trade mark, whose establishment is said to be the largest in the world, have been awarded first prize at the World's Fair on eighteen separate articles of pickles, vinegar and condiments. Many will remember their display in the gallery of the Agricultural Building, where they dispensed bunches of sweet pickles, evaporated horse radish, fruit butters, etc., and gave each visitor who presented the necessary "baggage check" a novel watch charm as a souvenir. Several millions of these charms were distributed, and even now the firm's mails are burdened with applications for them from those who were not fortunate enough to secure them at the great fair.

"It am a mighty good thing fer a man to hab a hopeful an' sangwine disposition," says Uncle Mose, "but 'w'en it gits sich a holt on heem dat he b'liebes he kin git a libbin' by waitin' fer it, he is got a little too much sangwinity fer to be any good."—Indianapolis Journal.

WHO SAYS TIMES ARE HARD?

MR. JOHN CAMERON,
Subscription Agent, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

ALMOST every fifth man you meet now-a-days complains of hard times. You agree with him, of course. Then inquire how this year's business compares with last, and nine hundred and ninty-nine cases out of a thousand he will tell you that his business is twenty-five or fifty per cent. larger than last year. Awfully funny this! He complains of hard times then tells you his business is fifty per cent. larger. What inconsistency!

We cannot complain of hard times. One of our representatives, Mr. John Cameron, has just returned from a 3 months canvass of the Maritime Provinces, in which time he has booked Four Hundred New Subscribers for THE CANADIAN GROCER. We do not want you to take our word for this statement. Drop into our Head Office and we will show you the list. Ask your travelers if they do not see it. Ask your customers if they do not take it. Find out somehow, because we want your business. What arrangements have you made for advertising for the coming year? Are you including THE GROCER? We must have your advertising, and in anticipation of it and considerable more, we are making arrangements for many new improvements. The size will be increased by about 16 pages. Its general appearance will be improved by the use of new type, better paper, etc. Does this look like hard times? Do you still ask if trade journal advertising pays? Most certainly it does. Do not take our word for it. There is proof of it on every side of you. Take the great and flourishing grocery journals in the United States and England, in their pages you find the splendid announcements of millionaire concerns. Now, why do they advertise so extensively? You can hardly say they are fools for doing so, as they are generally the sharpest, shrewdest, and most successful men in their own line. They are not likely to spend a dollar without some return in view. Again, how is it they advertise in their trade journals year after year, spending thousands of dollars in space and on attractive and expensive cuts? Simply because they are content to take the experience of other successful men. Soon they have profited by their own. Probably the first two years of extensive advertising in their trade journal will show no return. Suddenly they notice their trade is rapidly increasing; their goods are known to every dealer in the land; when their traveller calls he finds his lines are already well known, which means that they are half sold. Now, you probably think this successful advertiser should stop and not spend another dollar; the goods are introduced, the trade is large. Not much, he knows that his trade was made by advertising; he knows that it is increasing; he knows that his advertisement in the trade journal is read by every probable buyer of his goods; he furthermore knows that his customers are fickle, that in the rush of business they may overlook him, and a competitor get the order. He knows that he must advertise to retain trade. Knowing all this he welcomes the trade journal, instead of retarding it, he spends hundreds of dollars in it every year; he never stops to figure if he had any answers through this advertisement or that advertisement, he knows his trade is increasing, and that is all he cares about it. In every branch of life it is keeping everlastingly at it that brings success. Successful men are always safe guides, and what others have done others can do. THE CANADIAN GROCER is the only journal in Canada reaching your probable buyers. Its rates are reasonable, its style and get-up is beyond criticism and we have the circulation. Why cannot we get your business?

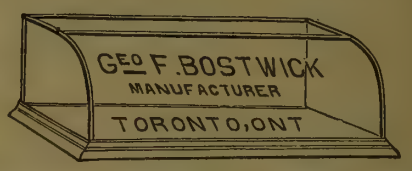
The stock of S. Robellard, grocer, Montreal, is advertised for sale by auction Dec. 4.

FIRES.

H. Gauthier, general merchant, Laurentides, Que., burnt out.

E. Sharp, furniture and undertaker, Woodstock, has been partially burned out.



CHANGES.

D. Kennedy, grocer, Toronto, has sold out.

Richardson & Son, general merchants, St. George, have sold out to S. B. Laurason.

The story is told of a deceased millionaire that he once went to have his hair cut and was charged half a dollar instead of twenty-five cents. He remonstrated; and the proprietor of the establishment himself defended the charges: "You are a rich man and can afford it." "Yes," said he, "I can afford it, but you can't." Before leaving the shop he called the proprietor's chief assistant, and taking him outside said: "Look here; if you aren't quite fixed up over there, you can open up in a place of your own. Come along, and choose one." And history says that that hairdresser learned in a short time the truth of the remark that he could not afford to overcharge.

The day when tea was accounted a luxury in the home and when its consumption was confined to the rich died out before the dawn of the present generation. With the exit of that day disappeared any good and sufficient reason for the imposition of a tax upon it when there are other things more in the line of luxuries upon which a duty may be, if necessary, levied. Protectionists and Free-traders alike love to boast of the free breakfast table which their respective policies are designed to bring about, but when a taxed is imposed upon tea the desideratum cannot be said to exist. Such, as is well known, is what obtains in Great Britain. There tea is one of the few articles upon which a customs duty is levied. The rate of the duty is quarter per cent. and amounts annually to something like $100,000. Against this condition of affairs there has always been more or less opposition ; and as time passes it becomes more pronounced. Lately some of the grocery associations have been taking renewed interest in the matter. Recently the subject occupied the attention of a committee of the United Kingdom Federation of Grocers' Associations, with the result that it was decided to unitedly seek to abolish the tax. The result of this decision will be awaited with interest on this side of the Atlantic. Grocery associations are numerous in England and shoulder to shoulder their influence must necessarily be strong.

Most people make resolves of some kind or other at the waning of the old year. A good resolve for a merchant to make is to clear off as far as possible all open accounts before the end of the year. The advantage to be gained by putting this resolve into practice is mutual, the wholesaler as well as the retailer being assisted in accomplishing what they all more or less desire—a clean slate to start off the new year with. It may be next to impossible to wipe out all the old marks, but the knowledge of that ought not to deter any one from making the attempt. It is well to have an ideal which always keeps a notch or so above your reach. Every open account means so much additional labor when a new set of books are being opened up. Even if an account is not due it seems a wise thing to try and liquidate it at the end of the year, particularly when by so doing a little extra discount can be secured, for in addition to the latter inducement, it is something to feel that your load will be all the lighter thereby when entering upon the New Year. It is scarcely necessary to add that it is advisable at all times to keep your liabilities down to as small a compass as possible at the end of every month in the year as well as at the end of December.

It is obvious that if the retailer is to wipe off at the end of the year his indebtedness to the wholesaler, he must in turn make a little extra effort to collect accounts due him by the consumer. A common complaint with country merchants lately has been regarding the slowness with which the farmers were paying their debts. And yet it is well known that most farmers have stored up in their barns grain which they could, if they would, turn into cash ; but the trouble is they will not. They are waiting for the higher prices which they are hoping will materialize some of these days, although there are but few outside the farmers themselves who share with them this hope. It was thought long ago that the bottom had been touched as to prices, but it was not. And now a good many people have given up guessing when they will. If the retailer held one or more of his staples in anticipation of an advance in prices, and by so doing was unable to meet his liabilities, it is obvious what position his creditors would assume. They would put the legal machinery to work in short order and force him either to pay his debts or assign. The legal machinery may not be so effective in the retailer's behalf as it is in the wholesaler's ; and even if it was it is not likely it would be used much, judging from the past. But what most retailers need is to be a little more aggressive in trying to collect their accounts. They should remember that they are not asking a favor when they request a man to pay an account that has matured. They are seeking the collection of money value for goods given in trust with the expectation that the customer was honest and would pay for them. The merchant who had goods to sell and would not sell them at the market prices, notwithstanding that his creditors were waiting for their money, would scarcely presume to account himself honest ; neither can the farmer who, while he has the produce which he can at any time turn into cash, refuses to do so and compels the retailer to wait month after month for his money. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. And the retailer needs to apply a little of the same sauce to the farmer as is dealt out to him by the wholesaler.

At last a purely business man has decided to become a candidate for the chief magistracy of the city of Toronto. As a rule for some years past our mayors have been recruited from the ranks of either the politicians or the professionals. In most instances both these elements were found reposed in the occupants of the civic chair. The mismanagement and the sins of omission and commission, in a legislative sense, which followed, have naturally led most people to blame the occupants and to seek chief magistrates from the ranks of business men. In pursuance of this object the names of Mr. Brock, Col. Davidson and Mr. Kennedy have been freely canvassed the last two or three years. Last year Mr. Kennedy was formally waited upon by more than one deputation and asked to stand for the mayoralty. But each and every time he refused on the plea of business. The same plea was advanced a few weeks ago, but when his friends became so pressing in their requests, he said he would consider the matter provided a requisition satisfactory to himself was gotten up. His friends then set to work, and on Saturday morning last presented a requisition signed by some 8,000 ratepayers, among whom were the President of the Board of Trade and two of his predecessors in office, and a number of mereantile men, manufacturers, professional men and workingmen. To the prayer of this requisition he acquiesced; and he is now in the field. So far he has it to himself, Ald. Saunders having retired, while the present Mayor has not yet announced himself in either way. It is likely, however, there will be a contest. Ald. Hallam, who said that if Ald. Saunders did not oppose Mayor Fleming, should he run for a third term, he would, and now, rumor says, he will be an opponent of Mr. Kennedy if Mayor Fleming is not.

The condition in which poultry has been arriving on the Toronto market during the last few weeks calls for some remarks. Time and again have protests gone out from dealers as well as the press regarding the manner in which poultry is prepared and shipped to the different commercial centres. But year after year goes by without much improvement being made. This year, at least as far as the Toronto market is concerned, there seems to have been a retrograde movement; never before probably has there been so much poultry here, and seldom if ever has there been so much of inferior quality. One would think on looking at some of the shipments that everybody who had handled them had been commissioned to make a failure of them. This was especially true in regard to the turkeys and chickens. The trouble was not in regard to frame. They all had plenty of that. The trouble was that there was not enough flesh to cover the frames. It is meat, not skin and bones, that sells well. With grain as cheap as it is there is no excuse for killing and shipping poor and half-starved stuff. Another cause for complaint is in regard to dressing, and applies to well-fed and ill-fed poultry alike. The trouble in this particular instance was that too much hot water and not enough time and patience was used in plucking the feathers from the birds. Not only was the skin torn off, but a like calamity occasionally nearly befell the legs. Then to bad feeding and bad dressing was often added bad packing. Instead of being properly packed in case or crate a lot of the poultry was shoveled, like so many potatoes, into a box, not infrequently a large one. It is not necessary to describe the appearance of the contents when they reached the commission merchants. That is better imagined than described. In consequence of the bad condition in which much of the poultry arrived, chickens sold down as low as fifteen cents per pair, and turkeys and geese sold just as low comparatively. If people want to get fair prices for their poultry they must send it in well-fed, well-dressed and well-packed. For such a good market and a fair price can usually be found.

It is to be hoped the Patrons of Industry will prove more successful meddling in politics than they have meddling in business. When they imagined that one of their missions was to enlighten merchants on what percentage of profit on the invoice price of their goods they should do business they made a most egregious blunder. True they may not yet have realized it themselves, but their victims have, and that without question. In politics, however, they may find a wider and better sphere for usefulness. Their platform contains planks that are commendable, but whether we all realize this or not, one thing nearly everybody will acknowledge: As an independent factor in politics the Patrons can do much good. But like most third parties, the best of the principles they enunciate will be absorbed by one or other of the great political parties, perhaps by both, and then the Patrons as an active factor in politics will themselves disappear. In the Western States, where the Farmers' Alliance, a kindred society, was, and is yet for that matter, so strong, disintegration has already set in, a large proportion of the lodges in Nebraska having already surrendered their charters. It will ever be thus in class legislation.

WHOLESALERS AND QUOTATIONS.

We often perform unwittingly acts which would be better left undone. It is a peculiarity of human nature; and were their consequences considered many of them would be left undone.

The wholesaler would not care to acquaint the retailer with the price he paid for all the goods he is selling him. Nor would he tell the consumer if he were to approach him what the retailer paid for the goods he is furnishing him. Whatever the wholesaler might do in the one instance he would at any rate scorn to give the information asked in the second. And yet what the wholesaler would refuse to furnish if asked point blank he does unsolicited.

During the last month or so several complaints have reached THE GROCER regarding wholesale prices which have appeared in the columns of some of the daily papers. Some of these prices have been furnished to the reporters and appeared in the news columns, while others have graced the advertising columns in bold black type. It is in this latter respect that retailers have found the most cause for complaint. Now it is a house advertising tea at an extremely low price. Here it is dried fruit that can be got at Black & White's at such a figure. There it is some line of canned goods that Smith & Jones are offering at a quotation below the market price. True these prices are intended for the eyes of retailers, but unfortunately for the peace of mind of the latter other eyes than theirs see these display advertisements. The consumer, it must be remembered, reads the daily paper just as carefully as do the merchants and sometimes a good deal more so. And then, too, out of every thousand papers issued probably nine hundred of them go into the hands of consumers and only one hundred into those of the retail trade whose attention it is that the wholesaler is seeking to secure. Much discontent has been engendered in the breasts of consumers as a consequence of this practice, if one is to believe what retailers say.

When the average consumer sees the price of staple goods quoted by the wholesale house. about fifty per cent. below what he pays the retailer he does not stop to think about quality, and many other little incidentals, but he immediately jumps to the conclusion that the latter is reaping an exhorbitant profit. It is not fair to the retailer that such an erroneous impression should be allowed to go abroad. Many of the retailers are very wrathy over the matter, and some of them go so far as to assert that the wholesalers should furnish no prices whatever, either in the shape of reports or advertisements to papers that go immediately into the hands of consumers, contending that the duty of furnishing the retailer with the wholesale prices should be left to the purely trade papers that go into the hands of the trade only.

This may be probably an extreme measure to propose, but it is evident that wholesale merchants need to be more careful in the future than they have in the past in regard to the character of the information they furnish mediums that go more to the consumer than to the retailer. Some merchants there are who furnish the daily press with only a few quotations, and then only such as are well known already to nearly everybody. Freely they will furnish information as to the state of trade, its prospects and its possibilities. But at strictly wholesale prices they draw the line.

It may be said that no harm is done by telling the truth. This is all well enough, and in the witness box is only proper. But there are instances where it is nothing short of an injustice to reveal everything to the public gaze, particularly if it is likely to mislead the uninitiated and cause trouble, as was the case in the instances cited. The general does not make public his plan of campaign, the counsel his line of action, at least till his case his called. Why then should the consumer know the exact price the retailer is paying for the goods he sells him.

The day for exhorbitant profits, particularly in staple goods, is gone. Competition is the great regulator of prices to-day; and any attempt that might be made to get an unduly enhanced price for any article of general use would be abortive, or even if it did get a start its career would be like that of some insects which, we are told, have their birth, existence and death in the space of one short day. No, there is no need of wholesale prices being sown broadcast among consumers on the plea of telling the truth.

LEWIS GLOVER.

"He is a first-class traveler, and there is no more popular commercial man going out of Toronto." This is the tribute that was paid to Lewis Glover, the subject of this sketch, by a friend of his. Mr. Glover was born in Peterboro', where his father for many years was a grocer and grain merchant; and it was from his father that he received his early business training. For four years he was manager of his father's mills. Then he graduated into business for himself in the pretty little town of Millbrook, where, during the six years he was there, he worked up a large trade. About seven years ago he went on the road for the Pure Gold Manufacturing Co. of Toronto, and for that firm he is still carrying the grip. His territory covers the Grand Trunk east from Toronto to Cornwall and the Midland division of that railway, taking in such towns as Peterboro', Lindsay, Cannington, Beaverton, Uxbridge, etc. To go over this ground it takes about five weeks. In Mr. Glover are combined many peculiarities requisite to a successful traveler. He is first of all a fighting man. That is not in a pugilistic sense, but in the sense that when he once sets his mind on attaining an object he hews steadily away until he gets it. Consequently he is what is termed a good worker, and for working up a new territory his friends say he is the ideal man. He is trustworthy and honorable, and "Cheap John" methods he abhors.

Lewis Glover.

CANADA AND AUSTRALIA.

The news so far received from the Hon. Mr. Bowell, our Minister of Trade and Commerce, who is at present in Australia, is not of a very definite kind. A well known member of the Montreal Board of Trade stated last week, however, that he had been informed that the Minister's letters intimated that the prospects were encouraging The favorable attitude of the Australian press in their comments on the objects of Mr. Bowell's visit is considered to be a good sign also. They point out that Mr. Bowell's visit must of necessity be a short one, but that during the time at his disposal he will no doubt be enabled to arrive at a pretty shrewd conclusion what goods they (the Australians) requires which we are in a position to supply. With regular steam service established the Australian press consider that facilities not hitherto enjoyed will lead to profitable cultivation and development of the commercial relations between the two great colonies of the Empire. They remark that already Australia takes quite a quantity of Canadian foods, but that they are secured through the middleman in the United States, but that with direct commmunication this will cease. The fact is mentioned that Australia, exporters of wool, fruit and mutton are taking quite an interest in the Canadian's visit; in fact, in a word, the entire tone of their comments are favorable. As both Canada and Australia are anxious to deal with each other, and as the desited steamship service is already present, it seems to be only a matter of time before a brisk inter-colonial trade is assured.

A PLEASANT GATHERING.

There was an enjoyable gathering of about a dozen and a half members of the Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Guild at the residence of William Lightbound of Lightbound, Ralston & Co. in Sherbrooke street in that city on Wednesday evening last. Mr. Lightbound was dining his confreres in the trade, and among those who were present were Messrs. Geo. Childs of Ceo. Childs & Co., president of the Guild ; W. Kinlock of Kinlock, Lindsay & Co., the oldest member of the trade in Canada; H. Leporte of Leporte, Martin & Co.; G. St. Arnaud of Chaput, Fils & Co.; D. Lockerby of Lockerby Bros.; J. H. Semple of J. H. Semple & Co.; D. Brosseau of Brosseau & Co.; F. H. Villeneuve of J. O. Villeneuve & Co.; F. Hughes of Caverhill, Hughes & Co.; F. Morrow of Morrow & Ewing; W. Galbraith of Carter, Galbraith & Co., and Hy. Childs of G. Childs & Co. Unavoidable causes prevented the few remaining members of the Guild from being present.

Naturally with a host like Mr. Lightbound and grocers as guests there was plenty of enjoyment. Numberless were the reminiscence of the by gone golden days of the trade that were related over the board. But although it was admitted that competition was pretty keen nowdays, the gentlemen assembled did not express much reason for regret.

The inner man provided for, the genial host expressed his pleasure at having so many of his friends and competitors with him in a few appropriate remarks. This set the ball rolling. Mr. Childs the President of the Guild, in his remarks, expressed the conviction that the wholesale grocers of Montreal were as intelligent and enterprising body of men as any similar body in the world. He poked some fun at some people by remarking that these were not the only qualities they possessed, but that they also were the most benevolent as they gave their time and captital to supply their fellow men with many of the necessities of life at cost and less than cost.

Mr. Semple another of the speakers referred to many of the deceased and retired members of the trade, pointing out how they had contributed to the business prosperity of Montreal, instancing, Hon. Geo. Moffatt, Messrs. Lechie, Urquhart and others.

Some appropriate remarks also came from Mr. Laparte, who made an appeal for the cultivation of cordiality and good feeling between individual members of the trade. No one, he said, was against good healthy competition, but this did not mean that it was to be carried to a ruinous pitch. Altogether, in addition to a very pleasant evening, some good wholesome advice was exchanged and more gatherings of this kind would do the trade a world of good.

CONCERNING RETAILERS.

J. H. Ratcliffe of Stouffville, has imported a nice line of Congou tea.

J. H. Schnarr, late of Wellesley, has started a grocery store in Berlin.

A. & G. Davey, grocers, Wellesley street, Toronto, have added new fixtures to their store.

Kane & Kane, general merchants of Orillia, have made extensive alterations in their premises. All the small rooms have been turned into one large one which is to be utilized as a show room for clothing.

F. Bastow, grocer, Gerrard and Mutual streets, Toronto, has put some new fixtures in his store.

E. A. Wood of Uxbridge, has secured the corner store next to him and will unite it to his present premises.

Paterson Bros. of Coleman's Corners have dissolved partnership. Thomas retires, and another brother named John takes his place.

Thomas Turner, formerly clerk for Robert Dutton, Barrie, who recently began business for himself in that town, is said to be doing a good trade.

R. Donald, the well-known grocer in King street east, Toronto, has put a new hardwood floor in his store, which has much improved its appearance.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ADVERTISING.

Every retail merchant who advertises, and few indeed there be who do not, might do well to keep a combined scrap and note book for the preservation of bright ideas in the advertising line that he may run across, advises a contemporary. Particularly the small retailer who has not the time to evolve original ideas himself all the time and whose business does not warrant him employing a professional "ad" writer, may be pardoned if he takes suggestions from others or even appropriates entirely the effusions of professionals in other cities. When you come across a bright "ad," or a bright suggestion for one in your trade paper, clip it out and paste it in your scrap book. When a bright idea occurs to you but which you do not care to use immediately, why, jot it down. The results of your pains will return to you after many days anyway, and perhaps next week.

FISH AND OILS.

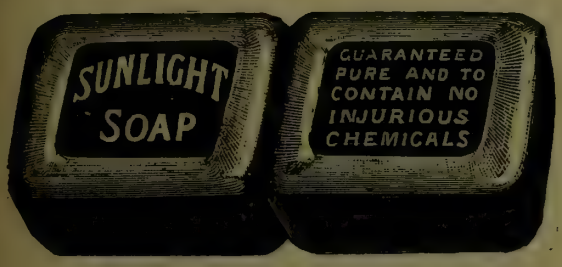
There is no branch of trade at this port, says Montreal Journal of Commerce, which shows so great a decadence of late years as that in salt fish and oils. Fifteen years ago the wharves were lined with small schooners loaded with barrelled herring, and it was no uncommon thing for one of the large houses to have forty thousand barrels of Labrador herring on their hands at one time. In those days thousands of barrels went daily to Chicago from this city. Today not one single barrel goes from here, and only two small schooners came to Monteeal this year with a pitiful lading of 100 barrels of Labrador herring between them.

The fact is the fish are no longer visiting the Labrador Coast. This year not more than five hundred barrels were taken along the whole coast and instead of the old time fleet of schooners which visited the whole stretch of sea-line from Hawke Island to Tub Harbor, picking up fifty barrels here and hundred barrels there, not one was sent this year. It was not deemed worth while to send one specially, so what Labrador herring has reached here has come by chance craft touching in at points like Indian Tickle on speculation.

Where then does the Labrador herring that is so cheerfully sold to grocers come from? Not from Labrador at all. It is simply Newfoundland shore herring branded as Labrador, and its sale as Labrador is a direct fraud on the consumers. The Labrador herring is as superior to its Newfoundland congener as cream to skim-milk. It is fatter, whiter, more juicy and has far more flavor than the tasteless shore herring, and (if it could be got genuine) would sell at $5.25 to $5.50 per barrel as against $4.50 for good French shore herring, and $4 to $4.25 for ordinary shore. But it cannot be got this year, and those who purchase herring under the impression that it is genuine Labrador, are very likely to be getting a good French shore herring instead.

It is perhaps as well under these circumstances that the demand for herring should be dull. The increasing use of fresh fish, canned salmon and boneless cod has undermined its popularity. Thanks to cheap and rapid transit, refrigerator cars, and improved methods of packing and freezing, fresh fish can now be delivered in excellent condition at points where formerly only salt or pickled fish were possible. Hence the consumption of fresh fish is constantly on the increase, with a corresponding decline in the demand for salt or dried. Canned salmon and canned lobster are other strong rivals, and boneless cod is rapidly growing in favor. It is carefully cleaned and put up attractively in 5, 10, 20 and 40 lb. boxes in crates 80 lbs. each. It is no trouble to the housekeeper, as it is ready for use at once, and as a result dealers can find a ready market here for all that comes.

The bank cod fishery has been very fair this year; but very little, comparatively, of the fish comes to this port. The bulk of it is dried and packed in quintals for the Mediterranean, West Indian and South American trade. This year its curing and packing shows a marked improvement. The Newfoundland fisherman have learned by bitter experience that dirty bloody fish, carelessly salted and imperfectly dried, cannot compete with French bounty-supported fish, and this year their fish is better cured, cleaner and better packed than ever before. Large green cod in this market are quoted at $6, with No. 1s at $5.50.



Trade in the fish oils is dull. The stock of steam refined pale seal in this city does not exceed 1000 barrels, and as the price at St. John's Nfld. is relatively higher than that here, no more is likely to come. The catch, too, was only about 130,000, and the make was not large. For steam refined 42½ cents is the market figure, and for straw seal probably 37½ cents would be paid.

Codliver oil is now coming forward from Harbor Grace in a much improved form. The Norwegian so called "frozen" process has been introduced into Newfoundland, and our native codliver oil is now fully equal to that imported from Norway. The old trouble with Newfoundland oil used to be that when it was in cold temperatures it became cloudy and thick. Now it is made at below the freezing point, and will remain clear and limpid even at twenty degrees Fahrenheit below freezing. As it stands cold just as well as the Norwegian, is equally free from stearine, and has far more "body" than Norwegian oil, it should soon supersede the latter in this market. It sells in bulk at 65 to 70 cents per gallon from first hands.

THE CURRANT SITUATION.

There is every reason to believe that the price of currants has touched its lowest point, though it can also be said that the indications do not favor any immediate or considerable advance. The price of the article was never lower, and the industry in Greece was never in such a depressed condition as is witnessed to-day. The growers have harvested the bulk of the crop, and a very large portion has already been marketed at ruinously low figures to the farmers of Greece, the returns in most instances not covering the actual cost to produce by thirty-three and one-third per cent. To the enormous crop this year is due the unremunerative prices that have prevailed. When the fruit was first placed upon the home markets the season's price started at about 10s. 6d. to 11s. c. and f., but the shipments from interior sources increased there appeared a general rush to secure orders, the cables being kept warm in forwarding firm offers of stock, and the replies made in response. The market was started on the down grade,and as concessions were granted purchases were made for this country in the hope that each time bottom had been reached; but, greatly to importers' disgust, the decline was not checked until the extremely low price of 6s .6d. in barrels was reached, a figure equivalent to about 1 3-8c. laid down in this market. Government aid has been anxiously sought for some time past by the poor and oppressed of that poverty stricken country, and we learn by cable that action has at last been taken by the officials there to give some relief to the needy people. The most important fact is that the Government has agreed to remove the excise duty, which action will serve to stimulate the distilling industry, and open up a channel for increased consumption among the wine producers. In addition, the Government has reduced the export duty 3d. per cwt., and this, too, is likely to bring about favorable results upon the stock now held in speculators' and growers' hands. The Patras market has been cabled higher during the past week, the price having advanced to 7s., c. and f., or, say, an improvement of 6d. per cwt., and this improvement, it is believed, is due to the Government action. Messrs. Barff & Co., in their circular of 2nd. inst., say: "As the cultivation expenses for a large portion of the crop are advanced during winter and spring by capitalists in various places of production, it seems likely that these latter will decide to buy currants and hold them over for next year rather than make a precarious advance to growers.' This market has been doing better of late, though the improvement is due almost wholly to the fact that the imports of barrel goods to this time have been nearly all distributed. Holders are demanding in most instances 2 1-8c., though possibly a slight fraction less can be done in view of the fact that the Plata is due next week, supplies upon which vessel can be obtained at 2c. Subsequent boats are offered at 1 7-8c. and 1 3-4c., as to date. The shipments to the United States from the opening of the season to 1st inst., have been 10,015 tons, against 6,754 tons to corresponding period last year. The total shipments to all countries for the same time have been 80,246 tons, against 66,828 tons in 1892. The above figures were prepared by Messrs. Barff & Co., Patras.—N .Y. Journal of Commerce.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

Most of the wholesale houses are busy stock taking at present, but the fact does not prevent them from attending to the small orders which are coming in with a considerable degree of freedom.

A few orders for spring lines are being taken, but nothing very special is to note in this connection. Remittances continue fair for the season.

The great sale of dry goods which took place in New York last week of some 16,000 pieces of domestic goods attracted considerable attention on the market. It was attended by buyers from all parts of the U.S. and Canada, and the fact that values on nearly $2,000,000 worth of goods were within 5 and 7½ per cent. of agents' prices is considered a favorabie sign. Dry goods dealers here at any rate take the result of the sale as indicating that the depression south of the line was due more to uncertainty and non-confidence than anything else. These high prices make it unlikely that these goods will seriously compete with the stocks on Canadian dealers' shelves, which would not have been the case had they been sold at slaughter prices.

Wm. Agnew of Wm. Agnew & Co., who has just made a trip through the west, says that the prospects for spring orders seem to be fair enough on the whole.

Thibeaudea Bros. still report a demand for striped woolen underwear, and complain of a scarcity of the article.

Wm. Kissock of Caverhill, Kissock & Co. got back from England last week. He has provided for the firm's usual fall line of spring goods.

Thomas Brophy, the senior partner in the firm of Brophy, Cain & Co., has returned from Europe. He has amply provided for the firm's usual supplies of fine goods for ladies' wear of all kinds.

Matthews, Towers & Co.'s travelers, who are out on the road, report good prospects on their spring lines of gentlemen's specialties, underwear, etc.

S. Greenshields, Son & Co. state that stock taking has not interfered with their doing a good trade on small orders, which have cleaned up quite a number of tail ends of lines of fall goods.

J. G. McKenzie & Co. consider that business is healthy, and state that there seems to be a greater degree of confidence apparent.

TORONTO.

Another clearing line noticed in Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s hosiery department is ladies' plain shaped vests. They have decided not to take them into stock if price will move them.

A practical present and one that is always acceptable for lady or gentleman is a silk umbrella. Retailers should lay in a small, well assorted stock of fancy handles, good coverings, at moderate prices for the Xmas trade. Gordon Mackay & Co. show an attractive range in this line.

Gordon Mackay & Co. show an immense stock of Japanese silk handkerchiefs, recently added to. Being bought and paid for in silver explains the desperately low prices quoted.

Gordon, Mackay have marked down a line of shot curl cloakings from $1.25 to 75 cents per yard. These are beautiful and effective goods, but did not catch the taste of buyers, hence the drop.

A large purchase of Jute horse blankets (lined) has just been placed on sale by Gordon, Mackay & Co. Twenty-five per cent. discount is the inducement they claim to offer. The season for this article is just on.

MANITOBA CHEESE.

Canada has long been known as a great cheese country. Our cheese exports have increased year by year, until the industry has become one of the greatest magnitude. Cheese is made in all the provinces of Canada, though to a much less extent in some provinces than in others. The province of Ontario, it is well known, takes the lead. It is gratifying to know that the quality of Canadian cheese has improved at the same time that the quantity has increased. Thus the great increase in the make has not been secured at the expense of quality. Indeed, it is no doubt the improvement in the quality which has rendered possible the great growth of the industry, for without a profitable market a large make would be of no value. The recognized quality of Canadian cheese has obtained a ready sale for the commodity in the world's consuming markets. The great fair at Chicago this year gave Canada an opportunity to show what she could do in the cheese line, and the result has been most gratifying to our cheese makers, who have had the satisfaction of securing a great victory in the competition at the World's Fair, securing as they did, the great majority of the prizes awarded. If this country needed further advertising as a producer of cheese, we have secured it at Chicago.

Manitoba is one of the provinces of Canada which is not noted for its production of cheese, but we are young yet and have lots of room to grow and improve in the industry. Manitoba only entered four cheese at the World's Fair competition, and three of these secured prizes, each standing high in their class. One of these cheese scored ninety-nine points, which was as high as that secured by any of the Ontario cheese, only a few out of the long list of Ontario cheese entered for competition reaching this degree of excellence.

It has been customary for Eastern Canada cheese makers and dealers to sneer at the Manitoba product. They have had plenty of criticism and very little commendation for the efforts of Western cheese men. Only recently an expert in dairy science and practice, in the employment of the Dominion Government, went out of his way to criticise the Manitoba cheese industry, and in a lengthy newspaper interview he gave a very pessimistic word picture of cheese making in Manitoba.

The Commercial will not undertake to prove that Manitoba cheese is up to the average standard of the Ontario article, in point of quality. We could not expect such to be the case, considering that the industry is but in its infancy here, and that many difficulties have to be encountered in a new and sparsely settled country. At the same time, the fact that Manitoba cheese scored so high at Chicago, taking three high awards out of only four entered for competition, is an indication of what can be done here. The fact that one Manitoba cheese out of four entered, scored as high as any of the Ontario cheese, should check Eastern sneering about our product. Manitoba secured greater results than Ontario at the exhibition, in proportion to the number of cheese entered for competition, for although a long list of awards were taken by Ontario makers, their exhibits were proportionately larger, and very few came up to the standard of the finest Manitoba article.

If Manitoba can produce one cheese equal to the very finest which the most expert Ontario manufacturer can make, we can duplicate the process again. The high average standard of Ontario cheese has been reached by a long course of perseverance in endeavoring to excell, assisted and fostered by the government. The same effort we believe will secure equally favorable results in the West. Our factories are new yet, and many of them are not as well equipped as they might be, both as regards plant and building accommodation, while perhaps some of our makers are lacking in experience. Better plant will be secured in time, and experience will come with practice.

One thing which is required to improve the quality of our cheese, is more discrimination as to quality in handling the product. The way in which cheese is handled in our local markets is not such as to encourage factorymen to excel in point of quality. Cheese is not bought and sold on its merits as to quality nearly so closely in this market as it should be, and as is customary in other markets. The custom here is to follow the one price for all qualities to such an extent as to menace the welfare of the industry. This is, no doubt, due to the fact that the product is very largely consumed locally. The principle, however, is wrong. If Manitoba is to become a cheese country of importance, we should start at once to discriminate in a commercial way in handling the commodity, and our cheese makers may be depended upon to make a steady effort to improve the general quality of their output.—Commercial, Winnipeg.

CANNOT BE BEATEN

THE COLLECTION OF DEBTS.

The retail grocery business, with all its drawbacks, would be a tolerably pleasant and profitable avocation were it not that the grocer is so subject to losses by bad debts. As it is the depredations of the dead beat cause the ruin of hundreds of grocers every year, and the destruction of part of the profits of many other retailers, who manage to live, but with clipped wings and a fund of bitter experience. The reason for this state of things is to be found in the fact that proper legal machinery for the recovery of small debts does not exist in most of the States, the retail merchant being left defenseless against the operations of the beat. Imprudence in the granting of credit is no doubt responsible for part of the aggregate annual losses of the retail grocery trade. but it would require the wisdom of a Solomon to avoid some losses when credit is granted to customers. Charles Dudley Warner hardly exaggerated when he said that a successful retail grocer required a sagacity and ability that even the Presidency of the United States does not demand, or words to that effect. He evidently had in mind the peril which constantly surrounds the grocer in consequence of the difficulty of collecting the moneys due him. The remedy that some urge—the strict cash system—is impracticable in many cases. The retail grocery busines and the cash system could only be wedded when conditions are peculiarly favorable. If groceries were in as little demand as dry goods, clothing, jewelry, furniture, etc., it would be different, but where a single purchase of either of the above mentioned classes of goods is made by a family a score or more articles are bought from the grocer. The constant traffic between the grocery store and the consumer's residence makes it inconvenient to pay over the cash in each transaction, and where the convenience of the public is concerned the merchant must give way. He must accommodate the public demand for credit, otherwise some more pliant dealer will take his place. There are a few strict cash grocers, whose existence would seem to disprove what we have just said, but how few they are. For one thing, they must rely almost entirely upon transient trade, or at least must rest content with but a part of the trade of most of their steady customers, and, therefore, must cover a wide territory, which involves the establishment of an extensive and costly delivery system. For the convenience of the consumer has to be reckoned with, and however low the prices of the strict cash grocer, if it is not convenient at times to pay cash for goods, some other dealer who will give credit gets the trade. The butcher, the baker, and the milkman are in the same box as the grocer as regards the credit system, the custom of daily calls for orders and to deliver the goods, which is followed in those branches of business, tending to break the hard and fast rule of doing business and to establish credit, which affords a loophole for losses through dishonest debtors. But the grocers' losses are the most serious, because his customers' bills are usually larger, hence it is the grocer who is the greatest sufferer from the lack of efficient and economical collection laws.

A recent publication of the State Department at Washington was devoted to the subject of debts of honor. As the volume consisted of a number of reports of United States consuls, only the customs of foreign nations relating to the subject were treated of, but a much bulkier and more valuable volume could have been compiled from the experiences of the retail grocers of this country, for the debts due to the members of the retail grocery trade are practically neither more nor less than debts of honor, the debtor's sense of honor being the sole dependence of the grocer when money is owing the latter for supplies furnished. As to the effect upon the general standard of morality of the system which provides for the collection of the debts of the retail dealer, but makes no adequate provision for the liquidation of the consumer's obligations to the retailer, the less said the better, perhaps; but it cannot be wholesome, and if defalcations in financial institutions and dishonesty in municipal government are common at times, it may be asked how they could be otherwise when our State Legislatures, through their refusal to pass equitable collection laws, practically put a premium upon a very common form of dishonesty.

The retail grocery trade should not rest content until proper collection laws are enacted that will afford them the same protection that the manufacturer and jobber enjoy. A bill which has been termed a bill for the collection of debts due to wholesalers—but which is a very good measure, nevertheless, and which, under the title of the Torrey National Bankruptcy bill, has received general approval—is likely to be put on its passage in Congress this session, and the attention of the public will doubtless be attracted to the subject of the collection of debts by the newspaper reports of the debates in Congress. Just now, therefore, would seem to be the right time for the retail grocers' associations to agitate for State collection laws, in order that they may obtain the attention that at less favorable times would be impossible to secure. If the case of the grocers is properly put before the public we believe that the desired action of the State Legislatures would soon follow, for the interests of honest consumers and the grocers are identical, so far as the prevention of the practices of dead beats are concerned, as the entire losses of the dealers are not borne by themselves, the honest consumer, in fact, having to pay in enhanced prices a portion of the indebtedness of the "beats."—Merchants' Review.

PERSONAL MENTION.

James Ince, of Perkins, Ince & Co., slipped and fell through McConkey's glass door Tuesday. His hand was badly cut and a physician was called in to dress it.

Robert Gowanlock with Perkins, Ince & Co. has gone back to the St. Clair Flats for the ducks he did not shoot when he was there about three weeks ago. Dick Tinning went up with him to arrange for the shipment of the birds.

George Millar, head clerk for Homer & Co. of Gravenhurst, is said to have had a fine time on his six-day hunting trip. Deer in the vicinity were plentiful, but as the silver bullets, the only kind that would penetrate the species of deer found in the locality of their camp, were scarce in the party, George was only allowed to secure one deer as the result of the six-days' hunt.

R. V. Webster, a large tea planter of Ceylon, who has been spending several days in the city, left this morning via the Northern Pacific for the coast, whence he proceeds home via Australia. Mr. Webster, in conversation with a Free Press reporter, said that Winnipeg was the first place on the American continent where good tea was given him.—Free Press, Winnipeg.

FREE DISTILLATION OF CURRANTS.

The Greek Government has decided to allow the free distillation of currants. It seems to have been the result of a movement started by the King. There is always more or less of a surplusage of currants in that country, and as a means of disposing of this the King has been encouraging distillation, but the possibilities in this direction were evidently minimized on account of the excise duty. This duty the government, according to advices received here, just removed, and currants can now be distilled free of this incumbus. This will lead to a much larger consumption of currants for this particular purpose, and already a hardening tendency is observed on the market. It is said that whether the excise duty had been removed or not the growers had decided they would sell no more fruit at the current low prices even if they had to hold till the spring.

A TRICK OF TRADE.

Hundreds of men look upon A. T. Stewart's establishment as both a primary and a grammar school for the dry goods trade of this city, says N. Y. Sun, and one of these hundreds told this story the other night: "Stewart's store," he said, was opposite City Hall Park. Ball, Black & Co., jewelers, and Leary, the hatter, had stores on the the block below. Stewart noticed every day that there were private carriages standing in front of these stores while the occupants were inside, and there seldom were any in front of his store. Private carriages were conspicuous in New York at that time, for there were very few of them. Stewart wanted them to stand in front of his place as an advertisement. It would give the impression that the occupants, the wealth of New York, were inside buying goods. He hit upon a scheme that kept a row of private carriages in front of his store all day. He paid the driver of each carriage a shilling a day to drive up to his door and wait there until they were wanted."

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Dec. 7, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Trade has not changed in character materially since a week ago. Dried fruits are still the centre of attraction. Direct shipments of new dates, figs and prunes have been arriving this week, and demand for all kinds of fruits for the holiday trade has been well maintained. Outside fruits there is not much doing. Travelers report plenty of sleighing in the country but not much business. Country merchants, they say, anticipate a fair holiday trade. A big business they do not look for. The exceedingly low price of dried fruit is expected to stimulate business in this line, and a special effort is being made, it appears, to cope with it, but even in regard to this particular, more or less caution is being exercised. No important changes in prices have been announced, and the only commodity that shows any sign of weakness is sugar. Payments seem much about as before, rather slow.

CANNED GOODS.

There is nothing materially new in the situation in regard to canned goods. Business if anything is quieter in most lines than it was, but prices are unchanged. Peas, corn and tomatoes are going out slowly as before at 80 to 85c. Canned fruits show some improvement and are in fairly active demand. We quote: Peaches, $3 to $3.25 for 3's, $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's; raspberries and strawberries, $2 to $2.10. Demand for salmon has slackened off some but prices remain as before. The idea as to price of good brands is $1.25 for talls and $1.50 for flats: Cohoes, $1.05 to $1.10. Lobsters are in request for the holiday trade, and a little brisker movement is reported in this line as a consequence. Ruling prices are $1.85 to $2.10 for talls and $2.40 to $2.50 for flats.

COFFEES.

The local market is again bare of Rio coffee, while a good many enquiries are heard. Prices are quoted ½c. higher on coffee. Further shipments for this market have arrived at New York. For other kinds of coffee there is the usual demand. We quote: Rio, 21½ to 22½c.; East Indian 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

NUTS.

Demand is active, particularly for walnuts, filberts and almonds. Brazil nuts are very dear this season and as a consequence some houses are not handling them at all. Grenoble walnuts are scarce. New are on the way, but the trade do not know upon what steamer. New Sicily walnuts are expected to arrive here every day. We quote:—Brazil nuts 13 to 15c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 28 to 32c. a pound; Tarragona almonds, 12½ to 14c.; peanuts, 11 to 12c. for roasted and 8 to 10c. for green; cocoa nuts, $4.50 to $5 per sack; Grenoble walnuts, 12½ to 15c.; Marbot walnuts 12 to 13c.; Bordeaux walnuts 11½ to 12½c.; pecans 13½ to 15c.; chestnuts, $4 per bushel; hickory, $2.

RICE.

Business continues dull in rice at 3⅝ to 3¾c. for ordinary, 5 to 5¼c. for Montreal Japan, and 5¾ to 6c. for imported Japan.

SPICES.

Demand continues active for all kinds. We quote: Pure black pepper at 13 to 15c.; pure white at 20 to 28c.; pure Jamaica ginger, 25 to 27c.; cloves, 14 to 25c.; pure mixed spice, 30 to 35c.

SUGARS.

Sugar market remains unchanged as before. Granulated is in good demand at 4¾c., but yellows are dull at from 3½c. up. The refineries report business fair for this time of year. A bid for a round lot of granulated at a shade under the market price, made by a Toronto wholesale house was rejected.

THE GROCER'S special sugar cables from London show the course of the world's market for the past few days:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Demand continues fairly good for the better quality of syrups at 2 to 3¼c. Low grade is selling down to 1¾c. A fair business is also reported in molasses. We quote according to package: Trinidad 32 to 40c., New Orleans 30 to 52c., Porto Rico 38 to 46c.

TEAS.

There is not much movement in this line, although it does not seems to be any lighter than is usual at this season. Demand is principally for the better grades of Ceylons and Assams at 30 to 35c. and Young Hysons at 35 to 40c.

Last mail advices from London report Ceylons very firm and selling at full prices. In China, Congous, Ponyongs are showing remarkable value. Green teas are without material alteration, except second and third Young Hysons, which are firmer.

Brokers say the Toronto market has been on the whole quiet, dealers have been fairly well supplied, and transactions have been principally in low priced Indians and Ceylons, which are again showing good value. Japans quiet, green teas in small supply, but there have not been many enquiries for them from dealers.

DRIED FRUIT.

Dried fruit continues to absorb most of the attention on the grocery market, and as further shipments have been received supplies are ample in most cases. Valencia raisins are in active request, fine off stalk and layer selected being particularly so. The idea as to prices are: Off-stalk, 4½ to 4¾c.; fine off-stalk, 5 to 5½c.; selected, 6 to 6½c.; layers, selected, 6¾c. Shipments of new Sultana raisins have been received, and they are going out well at 5½ to 6½c. Malaga raisins are in fairly active demand, although a brisker movement is expected in a few days. We quote as before; London layers, $2.25; connoisseur clusters, $3; dessert clusters, $3.75 to $4; quarter flats Dehesas, $1.50. Bordeaux prunes 5 to 5¾c. There is no change. Business continues active and prices firm and unchanged. The Greek Government has decided to allow the free distilation of currants, and the foreign markets are hardening in price, persumably largely in consequence of this. Common currants are selling at 3¾ to 4c., but for good fruit we quote: 4¼ to 4½c. for provincials in bbls. and 4⅝c. in half bbls.; Filiatras, 4¾ to 5c. in bbls., 4⅞ to 5¼c. in half bbls.; Patras, 5¾ to 6c. for bbls., 5⅞ to 6¼c. in half bbls., 6 to 6½c. in cases; Vostizzas, 7 to 8½c. in cases, 7¼ to 8¾c. in half cases; Panariti 9 to 10c. There have been a few new Bosnia prunes in cases on the market, but they are all about cleaned out at 6¾ to 9c. Prunes in hogsheads are due here in a few days, and they will sell at 4¼ to 4½c. There are some new French prunes in bags on the market, and they are selling at 4½c. Eleme figs have been arriving during the week, and the demand is good at 10 to 12c. for 10's and at 11½ to 12c. for 28's. Supplies of figs are none too large, but a second shipment is due in about ten days. The first direct shipment of dates is now on the market and the fruit is showing excellent quality; for the finest Hallowee 6c. is the ruling price.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market does not possess much life this week. Supplies have been checked, but there is still quite enough for the demand, which is not brisk. Contrary to the rule in other kinds, large rolls are coming in freely, and they are selling at 19 to 20c. Prices remain much as before. Jobbers are taking choice dairy at 18 to 19c. and disposing of it to retailers at 20 to 21c. Bakers' butter sells at 16 to 17c., and farmers' pound rolls at 22 to 25c. There is not much doing in creamery. Jobbers are paying 22 to 23c. for tubs and selling at 24 to 25c. Creamery pound prints sell at about 24 to 26c.

Cheese is in much the same position as before. There is a fair trade doing, and prices are firm and unchanged at 11c. for August make and 11½c. for September.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—There is no change and demand is light, at $1.40 for hand-picked.

DRIED APPLES—Business is quiet, but prices are a little firmer. Jobbers are paying 5 to 5¼c. and selling at 5¾ to 6c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Much as before; 9¾c. is being paid outside for carload lots, and the jobbing price is 10¼c.

EGGS—The market has ruled quiet and steady during the week. Fresh are unchanged at 17 to 18c. and limed at 15 to 16c. New laid are scarce at 21 to 22c. Of other kinds there is an abundance.

POULTRY—The market has been glutted all week with turkeys and geese and prices in these are lower. Good chickens and ducks, however, are wanted. We quote: Turkeys, 7 to 8c. per lb.; geese, 4½ to 6c.; chickens, 30 to 45c. per pair; ducks, 40 to 65c. per pair.

POTATOES—There has been no material change. Carlots are selling on track at 50c. and small lots are selling out of store at 55 to 60c.

HONEY—Dull at 8 to 9c. for extracted white clover in 10-lb. tins and upwards and 14 to 15c. for sections.

MARKETS—Continued

HOPS—There have been a few sales of '93's at 18 to 20c., and for really good '92's 14c. would be paid.

ONIONS—Quiet. Spanish are selling lower at 75 to 85c. per crate, and Canadian are unchanged at $1 to $1.10 per bag.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The tendency of the market for dressed hogs is still downward, $6 to $6.25 being the idea this week. There are not many offering, but holders are courting bids. An easier feeling is also apparent in meats, and we quote long clear and bellies practically lower.

BACON—Long clear, 9¼ to 9½c.; smoked backs, 11 to 11½c.; bellies, 12½ to 13c.; rolls, 9¾ to 10c.

HAMS—Unchanged, at 12 to 12½c. for smoked, and at 11c. for pickled.

LARD—Pure Canadian 11½c. in tubs, 11¾c. in pails and 11c. in tierces. Compound 8¾ to 9c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $18.50, Canadian short cut $19.50, shoulder mess $17.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores, 5c., hindquarters 6½ to 8c., mutton 5 to 6c., lamb, 6 to 8c., veal 7½ to 9c.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW

WOOL—Fleece wool, 17c., buying price for merchantable, and 18 to 18½c. selling price. Pulled wools, 18 to 21c. for super and 23 to 25c. for extra.

HIDES—Quiet and unchanged. Dealers are paying 3¾c. for No. 1 green, and are selling at 4¼c. for No. 1 cured.

SKINS—Sheepskins, 70 to 75c.; calfskins quiet, at 5 to 6c. for No. 1 green, and 7 to 8c. for No. 1 cured.

TALLOW—Dealers are paying 5½c. and are jobbing at 5¾ to 6c.

GREEN FRUIT.

FOREIGN—Further declines are announced this week in both oranges and lemons. Demand for oranges are seasonably active, and the grip has stimulated the demand for lemons. In bananas there is scarcily anything doing; and the same may be said of California fruit. Cranberries are selling freely for the holiday trade at unchanged prices. So are Malaga grapes.

DOMESTIC—A good many enquiries are heard for apples, but notwithstanding not much business has resulted therefrom yet.

We quote: Oranges—Floridas, $2.50 to $3. Lemons, Messinas, $4 to $4.50; Malagas, $3.25 to $4 per box, and half chests $7 to $7.50; Floridas, $4 to $4.50; bananas, $1.25 to $2; pears, 50 to $1 per basket; Catawba grapes, 3½ to 4c. per lb.; Malaga grapes, $4.50 to $6 per keg. Cranberries, Cape Cod, $6.50 to $7 per bbl.; boxes, $2.25 to $2.50; New Jersey, $6.50 to $7 per bbl.; Canadian, $5 to $6 per barrel; boxes, $2 to $2.15. Apples, $2.50 to $3.50 per bbl. California dried fruit—Apricots, 17½c. per lb.; peaches, 14c. per lb.; nectarines, 15c.

Dawson & Co. have inaugurated a series of auction sales. The first was held Tuesday. The attendance was satisfactory, and although the prices received were not high they were satisfactory considering the quality of the fruit offered, the sizes being irregular. The next sale will be held Wednesday, when the sizes will be better. Florida oranges sold at from $1.85 to $2.50, and lemons went at $2.85 to $3.50. Malaga grapes in kegs found purchasers at $4.85.

FISH.

There is an ample supply of fish on the market and an improved demand is reported. Digby herring are quoted 2c. higher on account of a scarcity. Eels, prepared frogs and dressed sturgeon are out of the market, while black bass, haddock, cod, steak cod, and chicken halibut are in. We quote: Fresh sea salmon, 17 to 19c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $4.50 per barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 13 to 15c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2.50 per hundred and 4c. per lb.; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7½c.; oysters in bulk, $1.50 for standard and $2 selected; kippered cisco, 2½ to 4c. each; ciscoes, $1.22 per 100; salt mackerel in bulk, 10c. per lb.; pike, 6 to 6½c. per lb.; blackbass, 10c. per lb.; haddock and cod, 6½c per lb.; steak cod, 7 to 8c.; chickeu halibut, 10 to 12c.

SALT.

Business has been middling and there is no change in prices. We quote: Coarse sacks, 60c.; Coarse barrel, 95c.; fine sacks, common, 70c.; dairy, in barrels, $1.25; American rock, $10 per ton.

SEEDS.

No material change has taken place since a week ago. There has been a fair movein Alsike at $4.50 to $6 for inferior to prime, and at $6.50 to $7 for choice to fancy. Red clover is quiet at $5.50 to $5 75, with $5.90 to $6 being occasionally paid for choice to fancy. Timothy is quoted at $1 to $1.25 for inferior and $1,50 to $1.60 for prime, while choice to fancy bring 15 to 20c. more.

MARKET NOTES.

The price of Brazil nuts is so high as to check the demand.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have their first direct importation of Eleme figs in stock.

Sloan & Crowther are in receipt of a direct shipment of Eleme figs and Sultana raisins.

Davidson & Hay are in receipt of their second shipment of Aunt Sally's pancake flour.

Smith & Keighley have in stock new dates and Marbot walnuts; also new figs in mats.

Sphink brand prunes arrived on the Toronto market last week. The quality is excellent.

Twenty or fifty bags of Denver onions are wanted by White & Co., 70 Colborne street, Toronto.

Davidson & Hay have in stock new Grenoble walnuts, Hallowee dates and Eleme figs in 10-lb. boxes.

Eby, Blain & Co. have in stock "7-crown," "7-star" and "7-crescent" brands of Eleme figs in 28's and 56's.

The first shipment of dates direct from London arrived in Toronto Monday. The quality is satisfactory.

The Toronto Salt Works have sold during the past week, 1 car of barrel salt at 95c. and 2 cars of sack at 60c.

Mr. Chas. H. Ross, representative for Messrs. Jas. Turner & Co., Hamilton, who has been confined to his bed for over a month, is doing well and is now expected to be on the road in a couple of weeks.

Eby, Blain & Co. have received a shipment of Crosse & Blackwell's candied orange, lemon and citron peels.

Sloan & Crowther are now able to fill small orders for "Sweet Home" soap, they having received a small shipment.

Another shipment of Rio coffee has arrived in New York for Warren Bros. & Boomer. It is due to arrive here in a few days.

The Toronto branch of Tetley's teas has been removed to 30 Front street east. The firm's add. will be found on another page.

P. L. Mason & Co. received a cable Tuesday from Denia stating that the market for Valencia raisins is now firm at unchanged prices.

Balfour & Co. draw special attention to the fine quality of their importation of Eleme figs for Xmas trade. They have them in all size boxes, and the quality is extra fine.

John Moule, one of the oldest grocers of London, is in difficulty, and the store is closed for stock taking. Messrs. Edward Adams & Co. are the principal parties concerned.

White & Co. of 70 Colborne street, Toronto, have a choice car load of winter apples for sale. They are also prepared for the Christmas trade with choice lines of seasonable goods.

The Brandon Boot and Shoe Company managed by J. Morris, has assigned. The total liabilities will amount to about $25,000. Several Winnipeg wholesale houses are interested in the failure.

"Mexican Fruit Chewing Gum." This consignment is said to be the largest importation of chicle ever brought into Canada.

The trade received first direct shipment of C. Whittall & Co.'s Eleme figs Monday. This shipment was delayed in Liverpool, but the second shipment will make better time and is expected to arrive here in about ten days.

W. H. Gillard & Co. have been advised by the packers' agents that their second shipment of Panariti currants may be expected in a few days. This grade of currants is the highest that is grown in Greece, and one hundred half-cases only lasted the above firm a day or two.

Balfour & Co., Hamilton, are agents for Canada for Lovejoy, Heinrich & Co.'s California Breakfast Flakes, and they report their sales of this article increasing very fast. They have just received a car load from Minneapolis, and make special price for this month $4 per case. Those using it say there is nothing finer of its kind, and it pays the retailer well.

W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, are offering what they claim is a particularly fine selection of high grade fruits this season, and ask the attention of the trade to their advertisement on the second page of THE GROCER. This firm reports having had splendid success with their sales of fruits this year and have never before experienced such a demand for high class goods.

R. Donald, retail grocer, King street east, Toronto, is nothing if not energetic. His latest display of this characteristic is seen in an eighty page catalogue for 1894. Typographically it is unique and hanndsome, and to the compilation of the price lists, recipes and other information of value to the consumer, there are evidences that Mr. Donald has devoted much time and patience. His customers will surely rise up and call him blessed whenever they have occasion to refer to its contents.

Arthur & Alfred Connor have opened up a grocery store at 751 Richmond street, London. Connor Bros. are young men in the prime of life and have had a thorough schooling in the grocery business. Arthur Connor clerked seven years in one of the leading grocery stores in London and Alfred Connor was in charge of the coffee department in the well known firm of C. H. Slack of Chicago, for some time past, and left that position to join his brother in a business of their own. They are well known London boys and will no doubt receive their portion of the trade of the city and surrounding country. The new firm has a fine store.

Ellis & Keighley, the well-known spice manufacturers, Toronto, have suspended payment. The principal cause of the failure is excessive competition, which has made spice manufacturing in Canada an unremunerative business. A statement of the firm's affairs has not yet been prepared, but it is thought that the assets will show a small surplus over the liabilities. The firm is still doing business locally, but the travelers have been taken off the road. Ellis & Keighley have the sympathy of the trade.

SAMPLE-ROOM TALK.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol : Rush of business continues; it will last for two weeks yet. Trust our friends will not wait until the last moment to send in orders. Yes, the better grades of currants and Valencias have the call. Sales of figs are large. We are oversupplied with all kinds.

W. H. Gillard & Co. : Our black teas, Dalukola, Congou, Imperial Congou and Russian Congou are meeting with more success than ever.

Pure Gold Manufacturing Co. : We are doing a rushing trade this week in powdered herbs. We have to run our mills up till 10 p.m. in order to keep up with the demand.

Balfour & Co., Hamilton : We have just received a shipment of the finest selected Valencias that could be bought on the London market. We had a similar invoice last year, which were the finest ever seen in Canada. We have also imported a lot of currants in small cases to match the famous Panaritis. The flavor of both the raisins and currants is delicious, and first-class retailers who want the best fruit should make a note of this and order early.

FLOUR AND FEED.

Every flour store should make a special effort to have some extra fine quality of pastry flour on hand for Christmas trade. Back up the efforts of the housekeeper to have the best pies, cakes and pudding for the season of good cheer, and you incidentally strengthen your own trade. Christmas comes but once a year. When it comes let us have the best we can get.

The capital of the Pittsburg-Washburn Flour Mills Co.—held mostly in England—is over $8,000,000. This year all this immense sum goes without dividend, the net earnings not being sufficient to pay the interest on debentures. Their innings will come when markets move up, instead of the continual decline of the past two years.

Cheap flour, cheap bread, and apparently nobody the better off for it. Too much of it, all the world over. An unfortunate speculator who bought 2,000 barrels of pork on margin in Chicago, and found the value declining, gave up eating any kind of meat but pork, thereby doing all in his power to diminish the quantity and so advance the price. On the same principle, producers of wheat and flour and bread in this country should test the efficacy of their greatest consumptive powers, as applied to reducing the visible supply.

A noticeable thing in the Wilson Bill now before the people of this continent is this, that while the Committee at Washington have made provisions for the admission of wheat and flour from Canada duty free, on conditions that their farmers and millers should have the Canadian market free for their wheat and flour, they have made no such provisions in the case of barley. The admission of barley free of duty to the American markets would benefit Canada, while the admission of wheat and flour free to the American markets would be of no value to this country, as there is no demand there for it, their own farmers and mills producing an enormous surplus.

Most countries are "cheap countries to live in," so far as breadstuffs go. If cheapness meant prosperity the present ought to be a highly prosperous time. It is a singular thing that the 10,000 hungry people of Detroit should have to exist on charity in a year when flour and many other articles of food are cheaper than ever before.

THE MARKETS

TORONTO.

There is an improved demand for most kinds of feed, but otherwise the markets remain much as before, with prices firm.

FLOUR—Manitoba patents, $3.70 to $3.80; strong bakers', $3.50; white wheat patents, $3 25 to $3.40 ; straight roller, $2.80 to $2.95; Ontario family, $2.85 to $3.10 ; low grades, $2 10 to $2.25. These prices are in large lots delivered here to the trade.

MEAL—Rolled oats, $3.80 to $3.85; granulated and standard oatmeal, $3.80 ; cornmeal, common, $3.15; gold dust, $3.40.

FEED—Bran still continues in good demand with a further advance this week, city mills now selling at $13.00 per ton ; delivered (on track) $12.50 per ton. Shorts steady, at $14 in ton lots ; delivered on track, $13.75. In oats the feeling has been easy all week, although at the close prices are stiffening up; 32½c. per bus. on track is about value. Market prices are 32½c. to 33½c. per bus.; feed corn, 53c. per bus.

HAY—Prices are steady. Pressed on track worth $9.50 to $9.75. Farmers' loads range from $7 to $9, according to quality.

STRAW—The demand is limited, with prices steady. Pressed on track, $5.50 to $6.00 per ton. Market prices are $7 to $8 for sheaf, with loose nominal at $4 per ton.

PEAS—Steady, with sales on the market at from 56 to 57c.

MONTREAL.

The flour market continues quiet. Manitoba brands are meeting with a fair local demand; but the market is on the whole dull. Winter wheat, $3 60 to $3 80 ; Manitoba patents, best brands, $3.70 to $3.80; straight rollers, $3 to $3.10; extra, $2.90 to $3; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.40 to $3.60; Manitoba strong bakers', best brands, $3.50 to $3.55.

A fair local demand is noted for oatmeal at steady prices, stocks being still small. Standard bags $1.90 to $2 ; do. brls., $3.80 to $4.10 ; granulated, bags, $2 to $2.05 ; do., brls., $4.20 to $4.30 ; rolled oats, bags, $2 ; do., brls., $4.15 to $4.25.

Feeding stuffs are moving freely at steady prices, choice samples making full figures. Bran, $15.50 to $16.50; shorts, $16 to $18 ; Mouille, $22.

ST. JOHN, N. B. .

In flour the market this week appears better, though demand is still light. Prices are a little firmer. Middlings and bran are firmer. Beans are easier. Hay is quiet. Prices are as follows : Manitoba, $4.50 to $5; high grade, $3 80 to $4 ; medium, $3.65 to $3.80 ; oatmeal, $4.30 to $4 40 ; cornmeal, $2.55 to $2.65; Middlings on track, $19 to $19.50 ; bran on track, $17 to $17.25; oats on track, local, 36 to 37c ; P. E. I., 38 to 40c ; Ontario, 40 to 41c.; beans, prime, $1.35 to $1.45 ; hand-picked, $1.45 to $1.50; hay, on track, $13 to $13.50.

en of in some staple lines, but the impression seems to prevail that there is more talk than actual cutting going on. It is possible, however, that sugar may have been sold in some isolated cases at refiners' prices from second hand, but in a general way the trading is at a fair margin. Raw sugar has been cabled somewhat easier in London. In consequence of the proposed amendment to the American tariff a less buoyant feeling is noticeable in dried fruit, but any change that may occur in this connection will hardly be in time to affect stock now held in jubbers' hands in this country, so that the fact is not likely to have appreciable effect on values in a regular jobbing way. Tea is moderately active, with no special feature, and coffees and spices are generally steady and unchanged. Stocks of molasses are not pressing and values in consequence are fairly steady for ordinary business, although concessions have to be made in the case of round lots. Canned goods furnish no new feature, and we hear of no further transactions in round lots.

DRIED FRUIT.

There is no genuine change in the dried fruit market on spot although the more theoretical traders have been talking cause and effect without end in relation to the proposed tariff changes in the United States. It may be remarked that these tariff changes are not an accomplished fact yet and that there is just the chance that the proposed bill will be sensibly changed before it is adopted. Besides, its passage through congress is not likely to be speedy, so that it is unlikely that it will be adopted in time to have appreciable effect on values of dried fruit for business in Canada. Business is quiet, however, with holders not disposed to concede anything, as stocks are not large by any means. In a regular jobbing way we quote as follows round lots entailing the usual reduction :— Ordinary Valencia off stock, 4½ to 5c., according to brand ; fine, 5¼c.; selected, very scarce at 6c., and layers at 6 to 6½c., according to quality.

The currant market continues steady and quiet. We quote :—Provincials at 3⅞ to 4¼c ; Filitrias, 4¾ to 5c., and Vostizzas, 6 to 7½c., according to quality.

Figs are moving quietly at steady prices, 9½ to 12c., and dates 6 to 6½c. for the jobbing trade, with sales of round lots at 5c. Prunes remain quiet at 5¾ to 6c.

NUTS.

Business is picking up a trifle in nuts in consequence of the approach of the holidays. New walnuts have been moved at 11½ to 12c., and Tarragona almonds at 11 to 12c., while filberts have sold to move via New York during the week at 9c. We quote French walnuts, 9½c.; Grenoble walnuts, 11 to 12c. ; pecans, 8½ to 12c.; peanuts, 8 to 11c. per lb.; and cocoanuts, $3.75 to $4 per 100 ; Terragona almonds, 11½ to 12c.; and shelled almonds 23 to 45c. according to grade.

GREEN FRUIT.

Apples are still scarce with receipts small, car lots moving at $3 25 to $4 for choice and medium $2 to $3 ; jobbing parcels 25 to 50c. advance on these figures. Oranges are in fair demand, Florida selling from $2.75 to $3 and Jamaica $4 per barrel. Lemons are steady and quiet at $2 to $3.

SUGAR.

The sugar market is quiet at the moment in consequence of the unsettled feeling regarding values. Jobbers are not disposed to take any large parcels, and the same disposition is shown by retail buyers throughout the country, who are only buying what is positively demanded for actual requirements. Refiners' prices are unchanged at 4½c. for granulated and yellows 3⅜ to 4¼c. In the majority of cases the jobbing range is an ⅛ to ¼c. advance on this, but we understand that in some isolated cases the staple is sold at cost when the order is for an assorted lot of groceries.

MOLASSES.

The molasses market is quiet, a few sales of wholesale lots occurring during the week at 30c. Stocks are small however, and jobbers in the majority of cases demand the standard price for small parcels—viz., 33c.

SYRUPS.

In syrups there have been sales of Canadian in the wood at 1⅝ to 2c., one lot selling at 1½c. which was a little off quality. American stock has been moved at 18½ to 26c. as to quality.

TEA.

The tea market is quiet at the moment. Grocers appear to have all the tea they want, and as a consequence while there is a large supply of both Japans and blacks on hand, there is practically little demand. Some Japan has changed hands at 12 to 13c. for common and 15 to 18½c. for better grades in 200 package lots. We quote Japans : Common, 12 to 13c., medium, 15 to 17c., fine, 18 to 21c., and finest 23 to 32c.

COFFEES.

There is only a limited quantity of coffee offering, and the market remains steady for business in a wholesale way as follows. We quote: Jamaica, 16 to 18c.; Maracaibo, 19½ to 21c.; Porto Cobello, 19 to 20c.; Rio, 17½ to 19.; Java, 24 to 28c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

SPICES.

The spice market is steady with a moderate movement. We quote : Jamaica ginger, 15 to 16c. for common, and 18 to 20c. for finer qualities ; black pepper, 6 to 7c. ; pimento, 6c.; and nutmegs, 60 to 65c. to $1.

RICE.

There is a fair demand for rice at steady prices. Anticipations are for higher prices in new Japan rice, as advices say there is a shortage owing to damage to the new crops by tornadoes. We quote : Japan standard, $3.75 ; standard B, $3.40 ; English style, $3.20 ; choice Burmah, $3.85 ; Japan crystal, $4.25 ; Patna, $4.25 to $5 ; Carolina, $6.50 to $7.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods market is quiet, and we do not hear of any further speculative operations in tomatoes or other vegetables. Values generally are steady. We quote tomatoes $1.72½ to $1.80, corn 75 to 80c., peas 90 to 95c , strawberries $2.75 per doz., raspberries $1.80, salmon $1.25 to $1.27½ for best brands and $1.05 to $1.10 for cohoes, lobsters $1.60 to $1.75, mackerel $1 to $1.05.

FISH.

The fish market is in good condition with a satisfactory trade passing in dry and pickled fish. There has been some speculation in dry and green cod at $4.50 to $4 75, sales being made in a small way at 5 to 5½c. per lb. Round lots of cod have been picked up during the week, but advices state that the catch may be larger than expected during to the milder weather on the coast. We quote : No. 1 C. B. herring, $5.50; No. 1 Newfoundland do., $5; No. 1 green cod, $5 to $5.25; Labrador salmon, $14 to $15 per bbl. ; B. C. do., $12.50 to $13; No. 2 mackerel, $12; finnan haddies, 7 to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1 to $1.75 per box; kippered herring, $1.50 per box; haddock, 3½ to 4c. ; cod, 4 to 4½c. ; boneless cod, 6½ to 7c.; hand picked malpecque oysters, $5 to $6.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

A good steady demand is noted for eggs at unchanged prices. We quote 15 to 20c. according to quality and freshness. Mild weather operated against dressed poultry but the weeks snow has stiffened the market again. Turkeys sold at 10c. and geese 6½ to 7c., while chickens and ducks have changed hands at 7c. and 9 to 10c. respectively. Comb honey is quiet and has sold at 10½ to 13½c. for white clover buckwheat stock fetching 10 to 11c. Extracted is quiet at 7 to 8c., for new, and 5 to 6c. for old. Hops are quiet and unchanged at 17 to 21c. as to quality. Beans are still easy in tone, round lots of Western hand picked changing hands at $1.25 per bushel, smaller lots $1.30 to $1.50 as to quality and other grades, $1 to $1.10. Maple syrup is quiet at 4½ to 5c. in the wood and 50 to 60c. in tins and sugar is dull at 6 to 7c. per lb. Onions are weak, red stock selling at $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel. Potatoes are in good demand with prices steady. Round lots on track have changed hands at 60 to 65c. and smaller lots mean 10c. advance on this.

PROVISIONS.

There is a good local movement in provisions. Pork is steady at quotations, and no change is noted in lard or smoked meats. Canadian short cut, per brl., $21 to $21.50 ; mess pork, western, new, per brl., $20.50 to $21.50 ; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13c. ; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12¼c.; bacon, per lb., 11½ to 12½c. ; lard, com. refined, per lb. 8¼ to 9¼c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market fails to show any change of importance. Neither sellers or buyers exhibit any marked disposition toward business, but it is possible that there will be some enquiry on account of holiday wants shortly. The tone is firm on the whole. We quote :—Finest Ontario fall cheese 11 to 11⅛c.; finest Townships fall cheese 10¾ to 10⅞c.; finest Quebec fall cheese 10⅝ to 10¾c.; medium grades 10½c.; cable 54s.

BUTTER.

Butter manifests no particular change, the market ruling firm with business of moderate proportions, as supplies are not pressing. A shipper who tried to buy some goods the other day found this out. It is understood, however, that he picked up a couple of hundred tubs late made creamery at 23c., and that he also did some picking up in the country at about an equivalent basis Finest fall creamery, 23 to 23½c.; Finest Townships dairy, 21 to 22c.; Finest Western dairy, 19½ to 20.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

There is a marked scarcity of ten lb. boxes of figs on this market.

Canned corn is not plentiful in first hands here at present, and is firmly held at 80c. as the inside price.

There has been considerable speculation in dry cod by operators on this market on the basis of $4.50 to $4.75.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. 7.

Business here is not as good as last year at this time. Cold weather is here and with it snow. If we would continue to have cold weather and snow enough for good sleighing from now till Christmas it would be a great aid to business.

CANNED GOODS—The market continues firm with good demand. The number of canned goods used is astonishing and is on the increase. Prices are: Corn 90c.; peas, 90c.; tomatoes, 95 to $1; lobsters, $1.75 to $2 05; salmon $1.40 to $1.45; oysters, 2's, $2.15 to $2.35; corned beef, Canadian, 2's, $2.60; American, 2's, $2.70.

DRIED FRUITS AND NUTS—Prices are easier and goods are being sold low; in fact are being sold below outside prices and prices at which goods can be replaced. This seems to be an outcome of the increasing desire to do business made necessary by the fact that the number to do the same amount of business is always on the increase. Malaga fruit is scarce, but California fruit at a low figure of extra quality is coming in freely to take its place. Cleaned currants, both in 1 lb cartoons and bulk, are finding a ready sale this season, and from the satisfaction they are giving it looks as though they had come to stay. We quote: Raisins, Valencia, 4½ to 4¾c.; layers, 5½ to 5¾c.; London layers, $2 to $2.25, currants, bbls., 3½ to 4c.; cases, 4 to 4½c.; cleaned, bulk, 7 to 7½c.; 1 lb. cartoons, 8 to 8½c.; prunes, 6¾ to 7c.; dates, 5½ to 6½c.; figs, 10 to 12c.; filberts, 10 to 12c.; Grenoble walnuts, 13 to 14c.; French walnuts, 11 to 12c.; almonds, 13 to 14c.; Brazil, 13 to 14c.; peacans, 12 to 13c.; peanuts 10 to 11c.

SUGAR—Prices are low, but buyers do not feel at all sure that bottom has been reached. Granulated, 4¾ to 5c.; Yellows, 4 to 4¼c.; Barbadoes, 4 to 4⅛c.; Paris Lump, 6½ to 6¾c.; Pulverized, 6½ to 6¾c.

MOLASSES—Market is firm; some are begining to think, however, that the great decline in sugar must also effect this article. The American market would, however, hardly go to prove this. There seems to be a good deal of second grade Barbadoes in the market. There is a large demand for a good Porto Rico, which is being offered at from 30 to 31c. We quote Barbadoes, best, 31 to 32c.; second, 29 to 30c.; Porto Rico, best, 35 to 36c.; second, 30 to 31c.; Antiqua, 28 to 29c.; Syrup, 35c. per gal.

DAIRY PRODUCTS.—The supply of butter during the past week has been good. Prices remain firm. Eggs are quiet, the supply being larger than the demand. If they can be guaranteed fresh they are all right. Cheese continues firm, with prospects of higher prices. We quote: Creamery butter, 25 to 28c.; dairy, 20 to 22c.; store packed, 18 to 21c.; eggs, 18 to 19c.; cheese, 11c.

FRUIT—The large supply of West Indian oranges has forced down the price; Floridas are also coming in at a low figure. Apples keep high, with good demand for Bishop Pippens and Baldwins. Cranberries have advanced for best quality about $1. We quote: Apples, $2.25 to $3.25; oranges, West India, $4.50 to $5 per brl.; Florida, $3 50 per box; lemons, $4.50 to $5; cranberries, $6 50 to $7; grapes, per keg, $4 50 to $5.50; cider, 25c. per gal.

PROVISIONS—Pork is off, demand for hogs being ½c. lower at 7c., while clear is lower by $1 to $1.50; Prince Edward Island, $1.50 to $2; lard is off ¼c.; plate beef is higher. We quote: Clear mess pork, $21 to $22; P. E. I. mess, $20 to $20.50; extra plate, $14 50 to $14 75; pure lard, 11¾ to 12½c., compound 9¾ to 10½c; hams, 14c.; bacon, rolls, 11½ to 12c.

FISH—Pickled herring are scarce. Bay herring in barrels and No. 2 Shelburne, and shad are about out of the market. It is very seldom at this season that the market is so bare. All kinds of pickled fish would find a good market at the present time. Dried fish are firm and smoked herring are as last week. The dealers are looking forward to the busy time of the frozen fish trade. We quote: Codfish, large, $4.10 to $4.25; medium, $3.40 to $3.50; haddock, $1 80 to $2; pollock, $1.90 to $2; bay herring, barrels, $3 to $3.25; half-brls., $1.60 to $1.75; Canso herring, barrels, $5 to $5.25; half-brls., $2.50 to $2.75; Shelburne herring, barrels, $4 to $4.25; half-brls., $2 25 to $2.50; herring, medium, 10 to 11c.; lengthwise, 9 to 10c.; salt, fine, $1.10; coarse, 50c.

A BIT OF TEA HISTORY.

The use of tea did not make such rapid progress upon the continent of Europe as it made in England, but it is interesting to notice that the first reference to tea by a European is contained in a book written by an Italian. In the year 1590 Giiovanni Botero published a small treatise "Of the Causes of the Magnificence and Greatness of Cities" (translated into English in 1606) in which he says the Chinese have "an herb, out of which they press a delicate juice, which serves them for drink instead of wine. It also preserves their health and frees them from all those evils that the immoderate use of wine does breed in use." It is to be regretted however, that his fellow countrymen did not adopt the excellent advice given by this learned doctor, as the consumption of tea is less in Italy than in any other European country except Turkey and Greece. In the year 1886 only 6,2000 pounds was consumed throughout the whole peninsula, or an average of .01 pound per head of the population. Nor can it be said that this small consumption is due to any heavy tax laid on by the Government, as the duty is only 8 3-4d., or 17 1-2 cents per pound.

In 1610 tea from India was used in Holland. In 1664 the Dutch East India Company brought out two pounds of India tea as a present to his majesty Charles II.

Holland was the first continental nation to import tea, obtaining it from Japan early in the 17th century. The new beverage seems to have met with a somewhat unfavorable reception, the Dutch describing it as hay-water, and as a speculation the experiment did not succeed. But in 1641, Tulpuis, a celebrated doctor of Amsterdam, wrote in praise of tea, and the result was that among certain classes the beverage came into regular use, and by the end of the eighteenth century the Dutch had become almost as confirmed tea consumers as the English. During the nineteenth century the progress in Holland has not been so uniform nor so rapid as in England. Most of the supplies come from the island of Java.

Russia ranks next to Holland among the tea consuming countries of Europe. The annual consumption averages .7 pounds per head of the population, but owing to the great extent of the country and the large number of people, this moderate percentage means a consumption of 75,000,000 pounds per annum. Russian tea comes almost exclusively from China, and is imported by overland route. It is said that this method of transit greatly improves the quality of the tea, and Russian tea has obtained a high and perhaps somewhat fictitious reputation. A good deal of brick tea is used, especially along the Volga, and in the mining districts of the Urals.

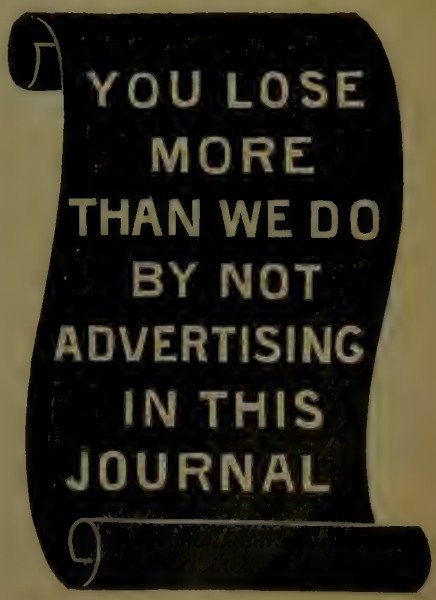
The Russian people understand how to make tea. In his work on "Russia," Mr. Wallace writes, "When the toilet operations are completed, and you order tea—one always orders tea in Russia—you will be asked whether you have your own tea and sugar with you. If you are an experienced traveler you will be able to answer in the affirmative, for good tea can be bought only in certain well-known shops, and can never be found in hotels. A huge steaming tea-urn, called a 'samovar,' will be brought in and you can make your own tea according to your taste. The tumbler, you know, of course, is to be used as a cup, and when filled may be conveniently employed for cauterizing the points of your fingers.

"The twenty or twenty-five kopeks you pay for the 'samovar'—teapot tumbler, saucer, spoon and slop-basin being included under the general term pribot—frees you from all corkage and other dues."

That much of the tea consumed in Russia is no better than that imported into London is shown by the fact that a considerable quantity sold every year on the London market is exported to Russia. During the year 1888, owing to an increase in the quantity of corn received from the Russian sea-ports, the exports of tea being unusually large, a story is told of an English traveler in Russia, who, on having some tea there, expressed his delight in its quality,and said that he wished he could get such a beverage in England. His host replied that he should have no difficulty in doing so, as that had just come from a well-known retail shopkeeper in London, whose name and address he gave.

In 1678, Bontkoe, the Elector of Bradenburgs' madical attendant, delivered an oration upon the virtues of tea, which produced a great sensation and greatly encouraged its consumption in Germany. Count Belchigen, physician to Maria Theresa, ascribed the increase of new diseases to the weakness and debility caused by daily drinking tea, but nevertheless, allowed it to be a sovereign remedy for excessive fatigue, pleurisy, vapors, weak lungs, jaundice, scurvy, leprosy, consumption and yellow fever. Still its progress in public favor must have been very irregular, for up to the present day it is only used in Austria to a small extent. The housewife measures it out with scrupulous care, and the knowing stranger who makes an infusion from a spoonful or so of leaves is regarded as being at once very extravagant with goods and prodigal of health. Except in houses where wealth has bred a demon of extravagance the small quantity of leaves put into the pot is always used twice. After the morning repast the tea pot is neither emptied nor cleaned, but in the afternoon merely filled afresh with boiling water.



Along the Rhine, and generally in Southern Germany, tea is unknown to the bulk of the people—the wine of the country being, no doubt, a satisfactory stimulant. In the Northern provinces during recent years a little progress has been made in the quantity used, and shops for the sale of tea have been established in Berlin and a few of the other larger cities, where it may also be bought from the grocers, who will, no doubt, pay but small heed to the opinion which their countryman, Hannemann, pronounced upon tea dealers: "Immoral members of society, lying in wait for mens' purses and lives." The quantity consumed in 1886, throughout Germany, was 4,000,000 pounds, or .09 per head of the population, and the duty is 5 1-2d. or 11 cents per pound.

During the seventeenth century the tea plant considerably interested the learned in France. Patin wrote furiously against the use of tea, which he called "l' impertenent nouveaute' du siecle." On the other hand, Souquet, a doctor of some celebrity, wrote in its praise, what his arguments were cannot now be ascertained, but in the "Historia Plantarium" (Rains 1686), under the heading "Thee, or Tea Plant," is to be found a labored eulogy, which probably represents the favorable opinion of the times. "It purifies the blood, it drives away horrid sleepliness, it expels malignant vapors from the brain, it mitigates grievous giddiness of the head, especially that which is the consequence of intoxication." The author also states that its use prevents renal calculus; and this is not unworthy of note, as certain French doctors of our day have declared that tea produces this terrible disease, in spite of the fact that tea-drinking England shows no greater percentage of cases than coffee-drinking France. Considerable demand must have sprung up for the beverage during the eighteenth century, as attempts were made at Paris, Lyons, Marseilles, Montpellier and Corsica, in 1763, and subsequently to acclimatize the tea shrub. The experiment at first promised success. The plants throve and the seeds ripened, but it was found, after a time, that their leaf-producing power was not great enough to prove remunerative, and the experiments were abandoned. Previous to the revolution tea was much appreciated by the aristocracy, and the custom of drinking it in the afternoon in these circles was pretty general. In the beginning of the present century the use of tea came once more into vogue amongst fashionable people. It was served as an afternoon meal with delicate pastries and confections, which were, perhaps, more appreciated than the beverage which accompanied them, and which certainly tend to enhance its flavor. But the cost was so great that it could only be indulged in as a luxury by the rich. In 1841, the annual consumption in France was about 340,000 pounds, and this had increased in 1886 to 1,220,000 Neither Indian or Ceylon teas are much used in France, and scarcely any effort has been made to introduce them. The duty ranges from 9d. or 18 cents, to 11 1-2d. or 23 cents.

Spain, Belgium, Austro-Hungary and Sweeden take about the same quantity of tea annually, in proportion to their population, as France does. In Portugal, Norway, and Switzerland, the consumption is slightly larger, but as the populations are small the whole quantity required is comparatively insignificant.

In Denmark, 728,000 pounds are consumed annually—an average of .37 per head of the population, and the duty levied by the government is at the rate of 3d. or 6 cents on the pound.

From this brief review it will be seen that the great tea-drinking communities are not on the continent of Europe. China, with its population of 300,000,000, heads the list. There, in every sense tea is the national beverage, at least five pounds must be taken each year per head of the population, so that the quantity used must amount to 1,500,000,000 pounds. In the Australian colonies the consumption averages seven pounds, and in Canada four pounds per head per annum. It is estimated that the annual consumption of tea on the globe reaches the remarkable total of 2,500,000,000 pounds.—Henry Smith in Interstate Grocer.

Great is the Province of Ontario as a fruit-growing centre. Few people there are, however, who have anything but a general idea of what this really means. The display which she made at the World's Fair opened their eyes a good deal, but still not sufficiently so to enable a full understanding as to the extent and value of the fruit crop in Ontario. Last week the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association held its annual meeting in Peterboro', and there the particular information was forthcoming. It was furnished by the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, and must have created no small amount of surprise to those who perused the figures adduced. A good many people at a haphazard guess would probably tell you, if queried on the matter, that the cheese product of the province exceeded in value that of fruit, while as to wheat and fruit, if a comparison was made, ninety-nine per cent. would give their verdict in favor of the former. But taking the figures of last year as a basis, it will be seen that in both instances would the guesses have been wrong. Turning to the figures submitted at the Peterboro' meeting, it is found that there were 7,000,000 bearing apple trees in Ontario, 2,000,000 grape vines, 700,000 plums, and 500,000 each of cherries, pears and peaches; while the approximate value of these trees was placed at $20,000,000. How this compares in value with the wheat crop and the cheese product of the province may be gathered from the fact that the former was worth $15,000,000 and the latter between $9,000,000 and $10,000,000.

These figures should give fresh stimulus to the industry, particularly in regard to the cultivation of apples, for which the Canadian climate is so admirably suited. There are some States in the American Union that can raise large apples, but when it comes to a comparison of quality Canada takes the palm. That Canada can achieve greater success in this respect there is no reason for doubt. There is plenty of land, and much of that which is not adapted for profitable cereal or vegetable cultivation is well suited for the growth of apple trees. Another particular in which further improvement may be made in apple growing is in regard to variety. As Mr. W. Boulter, the well-known canner, pointed out at the Peterboro meeting last week, it was a mistake to plant so many varieties. Everybody who has had anything to do with apples will tell you that there are varieties of apples on the market that are neither "fish, flesh nor good red herring," as the saying runs. As in almost everything else, it is the better class of apples that the market will the most readily absorb, and we have been getting a good illustration of that this fall and winter.

"It may be law but it is not justice," This is a saying one often hears; and it may be repeated again in regard to the judgment handed down a few days ago in the proceedings instituted to restrain the sheriff from selling the goods found on the premises of Oliver, Coate & Co. to satisfy a claim of the city of Toronto for taxes. These particular goods were placed with Oliver, Coate & Co. to be sold by auction. Some of the people were in straightened circumstances and wanted money to relieve their necessities. When the sheriff was put in to satisfy the claim for taxes these goods were appropriated along with those of Oliver, Coate & Co. To restrain the authorities from disposing of their property the owners, through a solicitor, issued an injunction, but beyond securing a temporary stay of proceedings it had no effect, for the judge before whom the case was argued, has decided that according to the assessment law the goods must be sacrificed to satisfiy the claim the city has against Oliver, Coate & Co., a claim which in equity they are no more liable for than the child unborn. Some effort should certainly be made to compensate these people who have been made the victims of such unfortunate circumstances, while the legislators should get their knives ready to prune the the law of this most unjust power at the next session.

Anything affecting the Canadian live stock industry is a matter of concern to everybody. When the British and United States governments placed extreme restrictions on the importation of Canadian cattle —the one because of the alleged presence of pleuro-pneumonia and the other for political purposes—it was felt that a serious blow, in the former instance particularly, had been aimed at the stock-raising industry of this country. But now a greater danger is menacing us. We have reference to tuberculosis. During the last two or three years a few isolated cases of this terrible disease have been announced, but they did not create any wide-spread alarm. The cattle found to be affected were slaughtered; and there the matter ended as far as the general public was concerned. Now, however, there is a suspicion that the germs of the disease have been more widely diffused than was at first supposed. Only last week the alarming fact was announced that several of the cattle in the dairy at the Agricultural College, Guelph, were affected, and had been for some months, with tuberculosis; and furthermore, that calves from afflicted heifers had been put up by auction and sold.

We cover the ground from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and have double the circulation of any other journal in Canada.

Since the facts have leaked out regarding the prevalence of tuberculosis at the Ontario Agricultural College, several other cases in different parts of the province have come to our knowledge. One particular case was near a town east of Toronto. One of the cows in a valuable herd was taken sick and died. An examination showed that the animal died of tuberculosis. If our memory serves us right, one or more cows followed in the same way. Alarmed least he was going to lose the whole herd, the owner shipped the remaining animals off to the United States, where he sold them. These animals may not have been afflicted, but to dispose of them as he did was most reprehensible. Another case was where the tuberculosis had been conveyed to a mare and her colt by their being placed in a stall where there had previously been tethered a cow that had succumbed to the disease. After the cow died the stall was fumigated and whitewashed, but the mare and colt caught the disease and death notwithstanding. Another case we heard of was where several animals on a farm near Stouffville were attacked. The owner immediately slaughtered all the afflicted animals. His fear is now that the disease may develop in the spring in the other cows on his farm.

In the stamping out of tuberculosis we are all more or less interested in a double sense. There is what may be termed the general one: A desire to see everything removed that may be inimical to the development of one of Canada's most promising industries. And then there is the natural one of self-protection. Milk from a cow afflicted with tuberculosis is likely to impart the disease to the person drinking it. There is a danger even, although probably one of lesser degree, through eating the meat of a diseased animal unless it be thoroughly cooked. "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure;" and it is obvious that those who desire to run the least risk should boil their milk before drinking and well cook their beef before eating it. That the disease has assumed proportions large enough to be serious is evident; as it is equally so that active and radical remedial means should be adopted to stamp it out. The proper and only competent authority to undertake this is the Government; and its first duty in the premises seems to be to order an enquiry to be made forthwith.

INSOLVENCY LAW OBJECTIONS.

It is hardly to be expected that such an important measure as an insolvency bill will be allowed to be placed on the statute book without opposition of some kind.

The bill, which has been drafted by the different Boards of Trade in Canada, and which was submitted to the Minister of Finance some days since, is intended to apply to traders, trade co-partnerships, and all trading companies whether incorporated or not, except incorporated banks, insurance, railway, and telegraph companies.

This bill has already come in for some adverse criticism. In general the fault with it is that it savors of class legislation, and in particular that it does not take the farmer under its wing. When the bill, or that which is being prepared from it, is presented to Parliament, some imperfections may be discovered in it. This is to be expected. But this must be said: the draft bill is the best that has ever yet been drawn up in this country. As for the objections cited to the bill, the more they are analyzed the weaker do they seem to become.

Class legislation in its generally accepted term is to be deprecated; but there is class legislation and class legislation. If a law was enacted to regulate lawyers, it is not likely the doctors would object, or vice versa. And for the simple reason that the one was uninterested in the legislation that was being enacted regarding the other. The situation regarding the proposed Insolvency bill is much the same: It is in the interest of traders and incorporated and unincorporated bodies, but practically it concerns none outside these.

There is no attempt to tamper with the consumer or with any of the professions. The object of the bill is to remedy an evil; and that evil is the want of a uniform law that will afford the British Columbia merchant the same protection against fraud and dishonesty if he is doing business in Prince Edward Island as if he was confining his energies to his own province. Prince Edward Island is as much a part of the Dominion as is British Columbia; and the merchant who sells goods to customers in any of the provinces outside his own should not run any greater risk for the payment of the same than he would at home. Yet this is in some instances what he does.

But this is not the only premise upon which the need of a Dominion insolvency measure can be urged. Under the existing condition of affairs a premium is put upon dishonest, or, as a wholesale man was heard to remark the other day, "honest men are made dishonest," on account of the loop holes that are kept open for them by the law as it now stands. And the best efforts of the Provincial Legislatures to close up these holes have proved ineffectual, because in their attempts to do so they have exceeded their constitutional powers. As the law —or rather want of it—is at present, a merchant who is in the last stages of insolvency can go on doing business, not infrequently selling goods at prices away below his competitors, almost as long as he choses. When a merchant like that develops in a community he is obviously injuring it, and it is in the interests of the local merchants that something should be done to prevent a continuance of the evil that is being wrought. This is one of the things the proposed bill aims at. But, as was pointed out in a previous issue, every precaution needs to be taken that the liberty of no merchant are unduly interfered with.

The proposed bill stipulates that a creditor or creditors with claims aggregating at least $500 may demand an assignment if a debtor ceases to meet his liabilities generally. This does not seem to be unduly harsh, but of course it is in regard to what scope may be given the word "generally" that will require careful interpretation.

As far as the farmers are concerned there is little to say. While in one sense they are producers, in another they are consumers. What they have to sell they get cash for. In a word, the farmer does not belong to the creditor class. Therefore he has no more interest in an insolvency bill than has the mechanic or the laborer.

PERSONAL MENTION.

J. J. Rae, general merchant, of Stouffville, was in Toronto Friday last. He reports trade fairly good.

W. W. Carter, mill owner and general merchant, Fesserton, made a business trip to Toronto Saturday.

James A. Blain, general merchant, Gilford, was in Toronto Saturday doing a little sorting up for the Christmas trade.

John Hiles, general mercoant, Dungannon, paid THE GROCER a visit last week. Mr. Hiles does a cash business, and so satisfied is he with it that he avows he would rather close up his store than go back to the old system. Mr. Hiles is a great admirer of THE GROCER, and yearly subscribes for three copies—one each for himself, his clerk and the manager of his branch store at Armow.

GROCERS WORK AND FEAST.

President—R. Donald.
Vice-President—F. S. Roberts.
Treasurer—Martin McMillan.
Directors—R. Mills, J. S. Bond, H. W. McCulloch, H. Tolchard.
Trustees—R. Mills, A. R. Williamson, F. S. Roberts.
Inside Guard—J. Marshall.

These are the officers elect of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association. They were elected Monday night. The meeting was held at Webb's, and was probably the most interesting annual or any other meeting in the history of the association. There were between forty and fifty members present, a remarkably good attendance considering the fact that street car traffic was blocked by the heavy snow storm. The contest for some of the offices was keener than usual, particularly for the presidency. But it was not around the election that was centered the greatest interest. In Webb's big upper dining room were spread tables for a banquet, at which the members were to sit, feast, sing, orate, crack jokes and have a good time generally.

President Clark presided, and among those present were : Vice-President Gibson, Secretary Corrie, Treasurer McMillan, Robert Mills, H. W. McCulloch, W. J. Sykes, A. G. Marmion, F. W. Johnston, A. G. Booth, A. White, J. Marshall, J. S. Bond, F. S. Roberts, R. Donald, W. Thompson, W. H. Marmion, John Butcher, A. R. Williamson, P. J. Mulqueen, H. Tolchard, J. Morrish, J. Bond, T. Babe, T. Clarke, J. Davidson, W. G. Walker, D. McCrae.

Secretary Corrie presented the report of the Executive Committee. It stated that a firm of solicitors had been appointed to look after the collection of accounts of members of the Association; recommended that an At Home be held at Webb's January 23 ; that no presents be given at Christmas ; that an excursion be held to Niagara Falls July 18 ; that the proposed new by-law in regard to the regulation of the weight and quality of fruit on the Toronto market be discussed at the January meeting, and that a petition be submitted to Mr. Clarke Wallace, Controller of Customs, and that the co-operation of sister societies be solicited regarding thereto.

The report was read clause by clause and adopted, and that portion of it referring to Christmas presents was carried with cheers.

The election of officers was the next order of business. The candidates for the presidency were : F. S. Roberts, D. W. Clark, R. Donald, J. S. Bond, M. McMillan. J. G. Gibson and John Butcher were nominated, but they refused to stand.

The contest was keen and it required four ballots to elect Mr. R. Donald, the successful candidate.

Then to make up for the time taken up in the election of president, the election of vice-president and treasurer respectively went by acclamation, Mr. Roberts being elected vice-president, while Mr. McMillan was re-elected treasurer.

One ballot sufficed to elect the directors, and these were the successful candidates : R. Mills, J S. Bond, H. W. McCulloch, H. Tolchard.

The honor of guarding the inside door fell to James Marshall.

The old trustees, R. Mills, A. R. Williamson and F. S. Roberts were re-elected by acclamation.

The appointment of secretary was left in the hands of the Executive Committee.

By this time it was getting near 10 o'clock, and just as the members were about to adjourn to the banqueting hall, Mr. Gibson rose in his place and gravely remarked : Mr. President and gentlemen,—It is seldom that a member of the Grocers' Association has courage enough to run for aldermanic honors. We have one with us to-night who has that courage. I refer to Mr. A. R. Williamson. He is out for Ward 4, and I hope the members of this Association will do all in their power to secure his election. (Cheers.) It is time we had some one down at the City Hall who will look after our interests. (Hear, hear.)

J. S. Bond : Come down in No. 2 and we'll elect you sure. (Laughter.)

Then the members filed into the dining hall, where President Clark again took command, being supported on his right and left by the officers of the Association.

Recherche was the menu, in high spirits the company, brief and to the point the speeches. All this was interlarded liberally with comic songs, by T. H. Baker and Frank Wright, and selections by the Toronto Mandolin and Guitar Club. And it is no matter for surprise that a right royally good time was had.

The hour was hovering near 11 o'clock when President Clark took up the thread of the toast-list. After "The Queen" had been duly honored, "Our Association" was proposed, coupled with the names of A. G. Booth and A. White.

Mr. Booth spoke briefly, well and to the point. He was glad, as an old member, to see so many young members present, and he hoped they would during the ensuing year assist the officers in making the Association more useful to the trade than ever. "And see," he continuad amid applause, "if we can't do something for ourselves. We have been doing something for the public long enough. It is now time we did something for ourselves."

Mr. White spoke as a three-year-old member who had done his best to promote the interests of the Association. The coming year he hoped to see the Association achieve greater success than ever before. From the enthusiastic applause that greeted the latter remark it was evident that the members were going to try to put into practice his advice.

"I have now," said the president, with a peculiar expression on his face, "great pleasure in asking Mr. Mills to give us a recitation." Mr. Mills hurriedly retired, and a moment later returned unrolling a piece of parchment, from which he proceeded to read as follows :

J. G. GIBSON, ESQ.:

DEAR SIR,—The members of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association deem the present occasion a most fitting one to express to you their appreciation of the many services you have rendered it since you became one of its members. In all matters of business your counsel and advice have been always found of the greatest value. In the several entertainments undertaken by the Association has your untiring energy been especially displayed, the result being that these meetings have not only been exceedingly enjoyable but also financially successful. As an Association we regret your unwillingness to take higher office for the ensuing year, but we are happy to know you will still give it all the assistance in your power, as you have hitherto done. The Association has much pleasure in presenting you with the two accompanying pictures as a slight token of esteem, and at the same time tendering you and your family its earnest wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

D. W. CLARK, President.
R. M CORRIE, Secretary.

Toronto, Dec. 11, 1893.

The pictures, two handsome English water colors, elegantly framed, were handed to Mr. Gibson by Mr. McMillan.

Mr. Gibson tried by vigorously puffing at a cigar to control his feelings, but he tried ineffectually. "Mr. President, and brother grocers, you have taken me by surprise," he began in reply. "It is a thing I never dreamed of. I appreciate it. It is the first time I have been out of harness in the Association, yet in the future, as in the past, I shall do all I can for the Association. Some of you may wonder why it is that I have not taken office this year. But the fact is I have some business interests which will call me away a good deal, sometimes at nights, and I will never hold an office to which I cannot attend as I ought. Nothing gives me so much pleasure as when associated with members of the trade. There is no more respectable body or men than the grocers of Toronto." (Hear, hear.) In concluding, Mr. Gibson urged the members to take more interest in the Association and attend its meetings more regularly.

Loud was the applause that greeted Mr. Gibson as he took his seat.

"Officers Elect" was the next toast.

President-elect Donald was the first to respond. He did not propose to make a speech, but at the next meeting would probably deliver an inaugural address. He, however, gave some advice. He did not see why the retail grocers of Toronto could not find more time to attend the meetings of the Association, where they were able to glean ideas that would well reward them for the time they spent away from business.

Vice-President-elect Roberts followed, and he urged fealty to the new president and more concern about the interests of the society.

Treasurer McMillan thanked the members for the renewed confidence placed in him, and remarked: "We have still got the boodle in Yonge street." (Laughter.)

Robert Mills said he had been a member of the Association since it was started, and he intended in the future, as in the past, to do his best in furthering its interests.

J. S. Bond thanked the members for giving him a place on the executive. "I have attended the meetings of the Association as often as possible, and have always been benefitted by so doing," he concluded.

H. W. McCulloch said he had been an active member of the Association ever since it started, and meant to so continue.

H. Tolchard: I shall endeavor during the coming year to try more than ever to carry out the wishes of the Association.

Then Mr. Mills rose and moved a vote of thanks to retiring President Clark, and in doing so paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Clark's many qualities, and particularly to his indefatgible efforts in promoting the welfare of the Association. "I hope for his assistance in the future as in the past, for I feel that if we lose his services it will be a great loss to the Association." (Applause.)

A. R. Williamson, in seconding the resolution, said he had always found Mr. Clark at the post of duty.

The resolution was carried amid much enthusiasm.

Mr. Clark, in reply, feelingly thanked the members for the manner in which they expressed their application of his services. "I am," he said, "a charter member of the Association, having joined when it was formed in 1885. During that time I have not missed half a dozen meetings, and have held every office, expect carry the bag. (Laughter.) You have elected good officers, and I hope this year will be a successful one. I hope too that it will be a more fraternal one than in the past. (Hear, hear.) Before the Association was formed grocers would hardly speak to each other. They scarcely ever thought of going into one another's stores. They might take a quick glance at each others windows to see how they were dressed or if there were any customers in the store. (Laughter.) The more meetings we have the more friendly will we become and more firmly will the footing of the Association get. (Applause.)

"The Ladies" brought P. J. Mulqueen to his feet. Eloquently did he dwell upon the importance of ladies in society, and the influence they had upon the men. Although he was a bachelor, he did not purpose remaining so always. He was willing at any time to forsake his present condition. "But what I want," he added amid much laughter, "is a woman that will be able to take my place behind the counter and let me take a night off now and then. I also want one that will not give eighteen ounces to the pound. If she gives fifteen, I won't object."

The clock was fifteen minutes past the midnight hour when the meeting broke up with the customary cheers.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

There is in a northern town a merchant who recently failed, but who, it is hinted, got his stock back again through a little alleged underhanded work on the part of a certain Toronto wholesale house. He is now doing business as if nothing had happened, the only difference being that the old firm name has now "& Co." tacked on after it. As he was what was termed a "cutter," the other merchants in the town are not at all pleased at the turn affairs have taken. One of them, who for convenience I will call Smith, felt particularly annoyed, and he issued a dodger reflecting somewhat upon the late insolvent, whom I will call Jones. The next issue of the local paper contained a retort from Jones, the concluding paragraph of which read: "Blessed are the people who mind their own business." Next week Mr. Smith replied, and his concluding sentence was: "Blessed are the peopie who have a business of their own to mind." This did not squelch Mr. Jones, for the following issue of the local paper he quietly asked Mr. Smith if he had ever read the little story entitled "The Curviture of the Spine." Last week Mr. Smith retorted that he had not, but he "had read of the man who blowed so much that he busted." "This little wordy warfare is the sensation of the town," said a merchant from that particular place, "and it is affording us lots of ammusement."

"The town of North Bay is very quiet at present," said a traveler to me Saturday. "The Canadian Pacific having reduced their staff more than one half. When the shops there were running full blast the C. P. R. people paid out $30,000 monthly in wages; now they are paying less than half that amount. This of course naturally makes the Bay very quiet. But the shops at Chapleau have been served still worse, the works in that place having been closed altogether."

* * *

"Taking it all through, this is the best year for business we have had for a long time," said the accountant of a large Toronto boot and shoe manufacturing firm. It eased off quite a bit during the mild and dry weather we had a few weeks ago, but the wet weather that followed again stimulated trade and this cold weather is of course good for the trade in rubbers and overshoes."

* * *

A broker was dilating the other day upon what he considered would be the relative conditions of brokers and wholesale merchants in the future. "They must decrease," he summed up, "while we must increase." And then when I smiled he added: "Would you believe it? There isn't a wholesale house in Paris, France." Then he sought the seclusion of his sanctum.

BYSTANDER.

DOMINION COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS.

If the last annual meeting of the Dominion Commercial Travelers Association at Montreal was a stormy one, that held on Saturday evening, the 9th, was even more so. The cause of all the excitement was the contest for the presidency, and over it the members who assembled in the rooms of the Natural History Museum had perhaps as stormy a time as at any meeting that has been held in Montreal for some time. The contest between Messrs. Watson and Wilson, the two candidates, has been going on for the past three weeks or so, and the canvass since the nomination has certainly been one of the most exciting in the history of the association. Last Saturday's meeting was the culmination of all this, and when the retiring president, Mr. Geo. Cains, had announced the following result the fun commenced in earnest:—

President—D. Watson, 1,085; L. A. Wilson, 530. Majority for Watson, 555.

Vice-President—William McNally, 826; Alfred Elliott, 725. Majority for McNally, 101.

Directors—T. L. Paton, 1,041; John Hughes, 944; E. D. Marceau, 748; George H. Bishop, 744; James L. Gardner, 644; S. W. Ewing, 650; F. S. Foster, 647; W. Gosling, 374; I. Friedman, 360.

This announcement was kept back until late in the evening, as the discussion of the annual report, which was submitted first, was heated and bitter, there being, perhaps, a larger attendance of members than at any previous annual meeting in the history of the association.

The report, which referred to the fact that there was not so large an increase in numbers as in former years, which was attributed to the stringent rules enforced by the railways, went on:—By referring to the subjoined financial statement it will be seen that the total income for the year is $30,326.08, and the expenditure, including insurance indemnity, $17,804.04, leaving a net gain of $12,370.33 carried to capital account, which now reaches $129,999.02. While the number of new members admitted during the year is 46 short of last year, a fewer number of old members have dropped out, leaving a net gain of 44, making our total membership 2,394. The number of members transferred to the retired list exceeds that of any former year. The associate members now number 192, against 92 last year, showing that great care has been exercised in the issuing of certificates. In regard to the policies issued by the London Guarantee and Accident Company, all claims for weekly indemnity were reported paid, and one claim for $5,000 was settled in full. The Mutual Benefit Society in connection with the association continued in a prosperous condition. Without anticipating their annual report, the roll of membership had considerably increased, five death claims having been paid and the surplus for the year over $4,000.

The financial statement of Mr. Fred Birks, treasurer, audited by Messrs. Riddell and Common, showed total assets of $129,999.02, made up of, cash, $5,031.10; investments, $122,770; accrued interest, $997.92; and furniture, $1,200.

The President made a few remarks in reference to the report, which he considered a good one in the face of the very bad financial year, especially as they had the pleasure of carrying over the largest surplus on record in the history of the association, with the exception of one year. They had to record the loss of many old members, and of course the benefit funds had been called on on this account.

With the close of the president's remarks, the rising of Mr. Geo. Forbes was the signal for the preliminary canter, so to speak, of the lively proceedings. Mr. Forbes' face and voice are familiar to everyone who has ever attended a Commercial Travelers' meeting, and it is on the question of the association's financial policy that he is especially strong. He criticized some of the items in the report severely, after which Mr. Hutchinson moved its adoption.

This was met by an amendment from Mr. W. Callahan that it be laid on the table for discussion, and it carried. Yet, despite a very uproarious time, the report did not come in for much serious discussion. It was simply a case of accusation and counter-accusation until the least excited portion of the gathering got visibly tired.

Mr. Woods opened fire with a complaint that the report should be in the hands of the members sooner than it was.

Mr. Cains replied to this that each member had got the report with his ballot papers.

Mr. Woods demanded what was the balance.

Mr. Cains finally replied that it was $224, but pointed out that it was difficult to give a definite statement, as the expenses were still running.

Then Mr. Galbraith went even further than Mr. Woods, moving that the report be not adopted. He moved instead that in the opinion of this meeting the president and other members of the society had been guilty of conduct subversive of its best interests and lowering to the dignity of the office of president.

The president said that this was out of order, and amid a regular babel of sounds Mr. Galbraith rose, every individual hair of his handsome whiskers bristling with wrath, announcing his determination of standing there to the "wee sma hours" to have his rights. Amid a lull in the noise he was heard to remark that it was alleged over the signature of several members that the president and Mr. Hughes had waited on Mr. Wilson and asked him to withdraw, promising him a seat on the board and an election as president next year.

This was greeted with a regular chorus of requests to "sit down" and also that it had nothing to do with the report, the chair declaring Mr. Galbraith out of order.

Eventually the report was declared carried by the chair, which was the commencement of another bitter dispute. Mr. F. Younghart and Mr. D. L. Lockerby stoutly declared that it was not carried, and the discussion broke out afresh; with considerable recrimination.

Finally Mr. Galbraith put in a requisition signed by five members asking that the "ayes" and "nays" be counted, but after a lot of more talk the chairman declared that he would not go back on his ruling. Galbraith withdrew his request and the adoption of the report was confirmed.

Then a few remarks from the president-elect, Mr. D. Watson, followed. Mr. Watson spoke very pleasantly, and so did Mr. Wm. McNally, the vice-president, and Mr. Gurd, after which Mr F. Birks moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Geo. Cains, the retiring president, which carried.

The educational report, which was submitted by Mr. Copeland, stated that progress had been made in every branch. A statement of the fund in this connection showed receipts of $217.94 and disbursements of $174.98. It was adopted.

The following notice of motion, by Mr. F. Potts, to amend the by-laws governing weekly indemnity for accident insurance was voted on:—

"In order to secure benefits all injuries must be of such a nature as to prove conclusively total disability and loss of time. Where a portion of business or occupation is attended to, the claim shall be decided by the board upon its merits. All claims must be made within thirty days of recovery."

Mr. Copeland suggested that a committee comprising G. Piche, Geo. Sumner, F. Hughes, F. Birks, and two others be appointed to incorporate the by-law amendment, all discretionary power of certificates to be left with the directorate.

The amendment was carried.

NOT WHAT IS PUT IN BUT WHAT IS KEPT OUT

A prominent grocer in St. John, N. B., who was examining a bar of SUNLIGHT SOAP, made this remark to a "Sunlight" representative:—"One doesn't need to be a professional judge of soap to know that when he takes up a piece of SUNLIGHT he is not handling a common soap. Now, Mr. —— what do you put in SUNLIGHT SOAP that makes it so different from other soaps?"

The reply was: "It is not so much what is put in, as what is kept out!"

There is a whole volume of meaning in the reply. It means just the difference between an absolutely pure soap like SUNLIGHT, and those that have no honest or truthful claim to purity.

FOOLISH people buy soaps which they can get the most of for the least money.

WISE people buy a soap with the highest record for Purity and general Excellence, known and used all over the world, and happily named—

The first shipment of butter ever made to the Japanese Empire from Manitoba left recently for Yokohama via Vancouver and the Canadian Pacific Steamship Co. It consisted of ten cases of fancy creamery.

Mrs. Julia Sandberg reported to the police that her grocery store on West avenue, Hamilton, was broken into the other night and the thieves went off with several bottles of pickles, preserves and other toothsome delicacies.

The complimentary concert to be given by the members of the Commercial Travelers' Association in Horticultural Pavilion Saturday night in behalf of R. B. Linton, a fellow-traveler who recently lost his eyesight, promises to be a success, a large number of tickets being already sold.

Lubec (Me.) boasts of eighteen sardine factories whose average output amounts to 15,000 cases, and whose total output would aggregate 270,000 cases. With two dozen cans to a case this would make 6,480,000 cans of sardines. It is an industry which has brought not a little money to Eastern Maine and still seems capable of a profitable enlargement.

The Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association has elected the following officers for next year: President, A. Ballentine; vice-president, J. Main; second vice-president, E. Hazell; secretary, W. R. Harvey; treasurer, C. Bremner; auditors, C. Holt, G. Powell; Executive Committee, J. O. Carpenter, C. H. Peebles, T. Hazell, J. Ronan and J. C. Boligan.

During the past week Inspector Bell and Assistant Inspector Lutman have been making a quiet call on the many bakers' delivery wagons that abound on the streets of London, and as a result many of London's poor left the inspector's office carrying a parcel and a broad smile. The inspectors do not care to say who they caught, but as only 51 loaves were confiscated, and 29 of these seized from one party, the bakers as a whole must be giving good weight.

The premises of the Anglo-British Columbia Packing Co., formerly in Bell-Irving and Patterson's office, at the corner of Cordova and Richards streets, have been removed into the offices next door, where Mr. H. O. Bell-Irving, the agent, will henceforth conduct his own and the company's business.—News, Vancouver, B.C.

mother, en route to their native land. He intends returning in a few months, and will open an agency in Winnipeg. Ching Foo is the merchant's name, and his business last year exceeded $40,000.—Free Press, Winnipeg.

The Hamilton Vinegar Company have appealed from an assessment of $40,000. In the course of the evidence it was stated that the cost of maturing the vinegar now in process of manufacture was $283,000. The company contend that the whole of this amount, with the exception of about $35,000, was advanced by a bank, and they claim they should not be assessed for this amount when the bank has already been assessed for it.

G. A. Curtis's grocery store, Simcoe, came very near being laid in ashes recently. Sometime during the forenoon a lamp, which was used in the cellar, was, they supposed, knocked over by the cat which is always around. The errand boy happening to go in the rear part of the store, where the stairway leads into the cellar, discovered the smoke, and by prompt action the blaze was extinguished, but had it not been discovered when it was, in five minutes more it would have been past control and caused a very heavy loss.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

The cold weather of the early portion of last week had a sensible effect on business in dry goods on this market, and as it has been followed up by further cold weather this week a good jobbing trade in seasonable goods has been the result. Orders for spring goods are still coming in, covering lines of brown sheetings, bleached cottons and colored cottons, such as denims, cottonades, ticks, plaids, etc. Print cloths have also met with a fair enquiry. Most of the houses are through with their stock-taking, and those who are not expected to be through by the present week at the very latest.

Thouret, Fitzgibbon & Co. have been placing some good orders of their line of Bavarian felt slippers in the Northwest.

Wm. Agnew & Co. cleared off during the week quite a lot of ladies cloakings in beaver, etc. They have had quite a few sorting orders for these goods.

S. Greenshields, Son & Co. say that they have received quite a lot of spring orders during the week, which keep coming in fully as well as they expected.

J. G. McKenzie & Co. state that it is a satisfactory sign that the city retail trade have been larger buyers this week than last.

TORONTO MARKET.

Sorting trade continues, but shows no extravagant increase despite the cold weather, which has been so universal and so intense. Still travelers are sending in more hopeful letters, if not much larger orders. They find the retail trade considerably brisker and retailers in a better buying mood. This has considerably increased the buying on spring account, which was previously somewhat discouraging.

Letter orders have increased very much during the past two weeks, and this shows that the retail houses are busy. Flannelettes, blankets, heavy underwear, hosiery, neckwear, gloves, holiday goods, etc., have all been in demand in small quantities, but totalling up to a very fair amount of trade.

Travelers are out with spring samples, but are also watching for sorting orders. Stock-taking is over, but full results will not be known for a few days.

A specially cheap line offered by Gordon, Mackay & Co. is a white honeycomb towel at 60 cents per dozen; size, 17 x 36.

W. R. Brock & Co. have just passed into stock cable repeats of black and blue beavers. These overcoatings are scarce on this market.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling report a strong inquiry for flannelettes, grey flannels, union and all-wool, and blankets. Two special lines of flannelettes are being offered by them with a considerable measure of success. They can be retailed at 8 and 10 cents, and although last season's goods, are good in point of pattern.

W. R. Brock & Co. are keeping their stock of wool, hosiery, underwear, gloves, knitted woolens, and other seasonable goods well assorted, and are prepared to execute all orders promptly.

Handkerchiefs are in great demand for the Christmas trade. One lot of about 2,000 dozens has been on sale by Gordon, Mackay & Co. this week at 45 cents per dozen. This makes a capital five-cent leader. Ten dozen is the smallest quantity sold at the price.

W. R. Brock & Co. have passed into stock six cases of latest novelties in men's neckwear, suitable for the Christmas and holiday trade, comprising light, medium, and dark effects in knot, graduated Derby, and other new shapes.

Though booking orders and doing a large business on spring account, Gordon, Mackay & Co. do not look on the winter trade as by any means over. They have passed into stock this week (the result of recent purchases) grey flannels, blankets and heavy ribbed shirts and drawers, making their stock in these lines complete.

W. R. Brock & Co. have passed into stock three cases of ladies' and men's silk umbrellas. These have been specially imported for the holiday trade, and are mostly put up one in a neat box, and have fancy handles of various taking designs in celluloid, horn, metal, and natural woods. An article of this kind makes a sensible, acceptable, and useful present.

HIS EXPERIENCE IN CHICAGO.

THE GROCER got a glimpse the other day of a letter that was written by H. T. Barker, general merchant, Stratford, to a friend in San Francisco. It consisted largely of a recital of what Mr. Barker had seen and heard at the World's Fair and his own impressions thereof. Amusingly he relates bits of conversation he had with some Americans whose knowledge of Canada was about as dark as was their financial condition a few months ago. Toronto Industrial and other Canadian exhibition associations might, he thinks, follow the example of the World's Fair people and keep the fakirs and dime shows away from the exhibition buildings, allocating them to some remote spot. Referring to business methods in Chicago, he writes: "I found that the system of doing business is detrimental to the farmer and retail merchant alike. Middlemen and capitalists are formed into combines. Take the meat business. While the farmer gets about $3.50 for his pork, it is retailed at $15 and $16, and if a new man should start a butcher's shop and attempt to sell cheaper the combine would start a shop alongside him and run him out, even if they sold at a loss. The vegetables are handled in the same way, leaving the producer with small profits and the consumer to pay high prices."

NEWFOUNDLAND'S BONELESS COD

The following from the pen of a gentleman who a short time ago visited John Munn & Co.'s boneless fish and glue factory, Grace Harbor, Nfld., appeared recently in the local paper there:

For centuries the fish of Newfoundland waters have been the food of European nations whose religious observances ordained abstinence from animal food at certain prescribed times. The Spanish and Portuguese have furnished records of past commercial activity in this branch of commerce, by the names bestowed on certain places on the Newfoundland coast, such as Baccalieu Island, etc., "baccalao" being the Spanish designation for codfish.

Like many other staple industries, the matchless Newfoundland fisheries have long been conducted on the old lines and with the old-fashioned ideas. The admirable climate of the Newfoundland coast for drying the fish—not "burning" it, as on the mainland of North America—has enabled the Newfoundland cure to hold its own against English, Norwegian, and French products, until, by enormous bounties, the last named power gave its southern neighbors in Europe low-priced fish—and at the expense, let it be borne in mind, of the French taxpayer! The dried codfish in its old form has long been associated in the minds of middle-class consumers as being redolent of peasants' huts and the forecastles of small sea-going vessels, and only to be consumed by persons having rough and vigorous appetites. That this error is gradually dying out is proved by the frequency with which dried codfish is now used in most of the large restaurants and hotel kitchens of European and American towns, in the preparation of "fish-balls," "fish-cakes," and other like edible condiments.

Nor is the new form in which a few intelligent firms in Newfoundland are attracting the attention of housekeepers of other countries, unknown in Asia. Fish "curries," and other tropical dishes, made of the new article known commercially as "boneless fish," are found in the bungalows and clubhouses of the Anglo-Indian communities of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and the far-away Himalaya mountains. Nor are shipments of the edible condiment unknown, via Canadian Pacific road, to Japan and Hong Kong.

This article has also been made in the seaside towns of the State of Massachusetts and Maine; but as the shore fishery of these States is a thing of the past, owing to reckless and wasteful methods of capture, the fish used for this purpose is either the oily menhaden or the codfish caught on the banks of Newfoundland, but undergoing a voyage of 1500 miles, in the hold of a fishing-vessel, subject to various atmospheric conditions, and preserved in twice or thrice used salt, or tainted with bilge-water, from the ice sometimes used.

The "boneless fish," largely manufactured in Harbor Grace, the second town in the Island and a seaport on the eastern shore of Newfoundland, is taken from the pure phosphorsescent waters of the Atlantic.

From the depths of the ocean to the spotlessly clean factory, few operations intervene, so that the food and health-giving qualities of phosphorus, ozone, and all the invigorating forces of the sea are largely preserved in the flesh of the fish, which is gradually but rapidly finding a market in the saltless and dry atmosphere of the mainland, giving in large measure the qualities so greatly needed, and practically unobtainable by the dwellers in districts remote from the sea.

In England, although the large towns are well supplied with fresh fish, a proverbial scarcity exists in the country districts, and "boneless fish," neatly arranged in paper packages, is rapidly finding its way into the best houses, as well as the cottages of the artisan or agricultural laborer.

The Gala Bank, Uttoxeter and Forest cheese factories, belonging to the estate of the late Wm. Symington, of Sarnia, formerly of Plympton, have been purchased by a company composed of Robert Jardine, Jas. W. Symington, Fergus Kennedy, Wm. Douglas and L. A. Duncan. The new firm will be known as the Plympton Cheese Manufacturing Company. Mr. Duncan made the cheese that captured first prize at the World's Fair this year.

PROTECTION TO RETAILERS.

It is surprising to find, as the trade newspaper man does occasionally find, a manufacturer or jobber at this late day, who is opposed to the existence of any means of communication between him and the retailer as to prices. We are not prepared to go quite as far as the American Grocer, which, in commenting on this subject, says: "Those in favor of the abolishment of trade news and information, whether conveyed through exchanges, price lists, trade journals or market reports, are generally dealers who seek profits by taking an unfair advantage of the buyer." We do not think this is always the case, though we must confess to pretty strong suspicions whenever we meet this kind of dealer. They are not met very often, or if the dealer feels that way, he is too politic to make his feelings known. On the other hand, we question whether the average retailer has any idea whatever of the amount saved to him on any one purchase by the existence of the trade journal. If it were not for the trade journal, and kindred publications, he would be compelled to accept the price any irresponsible salesman might quote him, or go to a great deal of trouble and perhaps expense to get a fair price. Whatever has been done in the past, few salesman dare quote now—even if they were so inclined—anything above the fair market price. To do so he would run the risk of losing a customer who regularly reads his trade paper. We have been told of some salesman, representing inferior houses as a rule, who invariable ask the merchant whether he takes a trade journal. We would be glad to know for purposes of comparison, what prices the merchant pays who does not take any paper.

The best houses, nowadays, encourage the merchants to read trade journals. This is especially true of the largest houses in their line in this city. Their theory, as we understand it, is that the reading merchant makes the best customer.—Northwest Trade.

LONDON'S CONSUMPTION OF FISH.

Statistics recently compiled go to show that the consumption of fish within the city of London, Eng., is something enormous being almost as great as that of fresh meat. From these statistics it is learned that 160,000 tons were consumed within the past year and it is further asserted the amount would have been increased had the city better wharfage and storage conveniences than it at present enjoys. Herring is the fish of largest consumption, plaice, cod, soles and mackeral following in their respective order. Nothwithstanding this enormous amount which is annually consumed, fish is dear in London and difficult to obtain in good condition. One of the principal reasons for this is the scarcity and high price of ice owing to the fact that a majority of that used is imported from Norway. Moreover, the English have not adopted the American system of refrigeration to any great extent, the commodious cold-storage warehouses and improved refrigerator cars giving American dealers far better facilities for handling the immense quantities of perishable food. From the Pacific carloads of fresh salmon are dispatched to New York, and the contents, after a journey of over 3,000 miles, are marketed in perfect condition. In like manner pompano and red snapper from the Gulf of Mexico, smelt, muskallonge, and salmon from Canada and Maine, and whitefish from the great lakes are sold in large quantities.—Ex.

GUARDING AGAINST DEAD BEATS.

Hereafter the dead beats and slow-paying people of Minneapolis will have a hard time of it, so far as the grocery trade is concerned, unless they change their ways, as the Retail Grocers' Association of the city has decided to adopt what promises to prove a very effective system for the prevention of losses by bad debts. Notices requiring immediate payment of accounts will be sent to the debtors of members by the agent of the association, and if no response is made, the names of the delinquents will then be read out in open meeting. As the grocers of the city will in this manner be placed on their guard, it will be almost impossible for the delinquents to obtain credit thereafter.—Ex.

THE PAW PAW FRUIT.

The paw paw is a wild fruit not much known to Eastern readers. A very interesting description of it and the methods of using it we quote from T. D. Beck of Brilliant, Ohio, in the Orange County Farmer: The paw paw more nearly resembles the banana than any other fruit, in flavor, although it has a peculiar flavor all its own. The fruit is about five or six inches, some shorter in length, and is much thicker in proportion to the length than the banana. When fully ripe the flesh is a rich, golden yellow, soft and pulpy. It is covered by a skin no thicker than that covering an apple. Before ripening the fruit is a pale green; after falling to the ground, and lying for a time, as it should be at its best, it turns black Bananas are "not in it" when they reach this stage of ripeness. They must be touched by the frost before they are fit for use.

I have eaten a very rich and palatable butter made from them, but never learned the modus operandi of making it. We make "paw paw fritters" that are very fine; they are made something in the same way as you make pumpkin fritters, substituting the paw paw for the pumpkin. By far the largest number are eaten raw, as you eat an apple, and like the city street car that always has room for one more passenger, you can always find room to hold one more paw paw. No matter what other blessings you may possess, you are losing many of the pleasures of living if you don't have your annual paw paw feast.

They should be cultivated as we cultivate other fruits, but so long as they are so abundant, growing wild, as they are with us, we will not for years have to resort to cultivation.

Some of your orchardists should give them a trial. I believe if cultivated that the fruit would be larger, and perhaps a variety containing less seed could be originated. The large number of seed is the greatest objection to them; no fear, though, of swallowing the seed unknowingly, as they are nearly as large as a Lima bean.—Ex.

"Can't you wait upon me?" said the impatient customer. "Two pounds of liver, I'm in a hurry." "Sorry," said the butcher, "but there are two or three ahead of you. Surely you would not want your liver out of order!"

"There are geniuses in trade, as well as in war or the state, or letters; and the reason why this or that man is fortunate is not to be told. It lies in the man."—EMERSON.

[As there is often inequality in the prices of the various sellers on this market, owing to differences in buying conditions and other circumstances, and as prices are modified by both quantity and quality, the quotations given below, and our Prices Current, necessarily take a wide range.]

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Dec. 14, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Granulated sugar is fractionally lower than at time of last review. The volume of business is fair for the season, and compared with last year is larger. Dried fruits are still of course the most favored commodity, and Christmas goods generally are in fair request. Common off-stalk and Valencia raisins are getting scarce, while it is anticipated that Malaga raisins will soon be exhausted. Some houses have received further shipments of Valencias this week. "Six" and "Seven" Crown Eleme figs are cleared out, but further shipments are due here in a few days. New filberts arrived the latter part of last week, and they were distributed to the trade the early part of this week. The market is now well supplied with all kinds of nuts. Teas are receiving fair attention, and a good many spices are still selling. There is a brisk demand for coffee and Rio is quoted ½c. higher. A further shipment of this coffee arrived in Toronto this week. Canned goods, except it be the fancy kinds for holiday trade, are as uninteresting as ever. Payments are much about as before.

CANNED GOODS.

Trade in this line remains in much the same condition as it has for some weeks. Fancy brands are receiving a little more attention probably than a week ago, but outside these dullness is the rule. Tomatoes, peas and corn are selling at 80 to 85c. There have been some offerings on the part of packers, but at prices that jobbers would not entertain, while the former just as firmly reject the bids of the latter. There is not, however, any disposition to do business on the part of either sellers or buyers. For salmon there is the usual quite seasonable demand. The idea as to price is still $1.25 to $1.35 for red fish in tall tins and $1.50 in flats. Cohoes are unchanged at $1.05 to $1.10. Lobsters of the better brands continue in fair demand, but generally speaking trade in this line is quiet. Ruling prices are $1.85 to $2.10 for talls and $2 40 to $2.50 for flats. There is a little demand for fancy fruits for the holiday trade. We quote: Peaches, $3 to $3.25 for 3's, $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's; raspberries and strawberries, $2 to $2.10.

COFFEES.

Another shipment of Rio coffee has arrived on this market. It came in time to replenish almost exhausted stocks. but as a good deal of it was sold to arrive stocks here are still small. Advices of further shipments have, however. been received. The New York market is higher on some grades of Rio coffee, and sales there have been larger than for the corresponding time a year ago. We quote: Rio, 22 to 23c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

NUTS.

Trade continues brisk, particularly for almonds, filberts, and walnuts. New filberts are on the market this week, and the second shipment of Grenoble walnuts are on the way between here and Boston. Stocks of Tarragona almonds are very much reduced on both sides of the Atlantic in consequence of the large consumption induced by the low prices. We quote:—Brazil nuts 13 to 15c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 28 to 32c. a pound; Tarragona almonds, 12½ to 14c.; peanuts, 11 to 12c. for roasted and 8 to 10c. for green; cocoa nuts, $4.50 to $5 per sack; Grenoble walnuts, 12½ to 15c.; Marbot walnuts 12 to 13c.; Bordeaux walnuts 11½ to 12½c.; filberts, 9¾ to 10¼c.; pecans 13½ to 15c.; chestnuts, $4 per bushel; hickory, $2.

RICE.

Rice remains unchanged both in regard to price and volume of business; ordinary sells at 3⅝ to 3¾c., Montreal Japan at 5 to 5¼c., and imported Japan at 5¾ to 6c.

SPICES.

The market is active, particularly in pastry spices. We quote: Pure black pepper at 13 to 15c.; pure white at 20 to 28c.; pure Jamaica ginger, 25 to 27c.; cloves, 14 to 25c.; pure mixed spice, 30 to 35c.

SUGAR.

The reason for the decline of 1-16c. in the price of granulated which took place last week sees to be a mystery to the trade here, wholesalers remarking that they see no reason why the refineries should have ordered such a step. There is a fairly good demand for granulated in small lots at from 4⅝ to 4 65c. per lb., while occasionally 4¾c. is obtained. Yellows are dull at from 3.40. up.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are in fairly active demand without any change in prices, the better quality selling at 2 to 3¼c. and low grade at 1¾c. up. A fair trade is still reported in molasses at 30 to 35c. per gallon in barrels and 32½ to 37c. in half barrels.

TEAS.

There is probably a little better demand for teas, a good movement being reported in Japans at from 14 to 38c. and in Indians, Ceylons and Assams at from 18 to 45c. In Young Hysons there is not much doing; 35 to 40c. is the idea as to price.

DRIED FRUIT.

This market continues to be the most interesting feature in the grocery trade. Valencia raisins are still going out briskly. Common off-stalk and selected are scarce here and jobbers have been supplying each other. The idea as to price is unchanged, and we quote: Off-stalk, 4½ to 4¾c.; fine off-stalk, 5 to 5½c.; selected, 6 to 6½c.; layers, selected, 6¾c. Shipments of new Sultana raisins have been received, and they are going out well at 5½ to 6½c. Sultana raisins are quiet and unchanged at 6½ to 8c. Malaga raisins are unchanged, with stocks almost exhausted. We quote as before: London layers, $2.25; connoisseur clusters, $3; dessert clusters, $3.75 to $4; quarter flats Dehesas, $1.50; Bordeaux prunes, 5 to 5¾c. Bosnia prunes are going out freely at 5½c. up for U's and 7½ to 8c. for B's. Atlas brand prunes are in stock this week. The quality is good and they are going out at 5½ to 7c. Currants are still in good demand, particularly the cheap and the better qualities. Vostizzas are nearly all cleared out. Figs are in active request, and 6-crown and 7-crown are cleaned out of the market, although fresh direct shipments are due here next week. The idea as to price is 9½ to 10c. for 14-oz. and $1 to $1.10 per 10-lb. boz.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

There has not been much change in the butter market since last week. If anything really first-class butter is a little more wanted; of seconds there is a plentiful supply. For the good article the market is firm. There is a good deal of held butter of July and August make offering, but as some of it has not been well taken care of it cannot always fetch a a good price. Deliveries of large rolls have not been so large as usual. Prices are unchanged. Jobbers are taking choice dairy at 18 to 19c. and disposing of it to retailers at 20 to 21c. Bakers' butter sells at 16 to 17., large rolls 19 to 20c., and farmers' pound rolls at 22 to 25c. Creamery butter is quiet and unchanged. Jobbers are paying 22 to 23c. for tubs and selling at 24 to 25c. Creamery pound prints sell at about 24 to 26c.

Cheese remains firm and unchanged with demand fair. Stocks are decreasing and the Old Country is reported to be away short. The idea as to price is 11 to 11½c. and there is not much going below these figures.

GREEN FRUIT.

A good seasonable trade generally is being done. Oranges, however, do not seem to be moving as briskly as some would desire, and there is good supply arriving. Lemons are in good demand and firmer. Bananas show no improvement, and those and some of the shipments have been found to be badly frozen on arriving here. Cranberries are in good demand and firmer. Retailers have got their stocks of Malaga grapes pretty well in, and requirements are in consequence largely confined to single kegs. California dried fruits are not exhibiting any activity yet, but the market is firm and higher prices are looked for. We quote: Oranges—Floridas, $2.50 to $3. Mandarines and Tangarines, $2 to $2.25 half box. Lemons, Messinas, $4 to $5 for 300's, 4 to 4½c. for 360's; Floridas, $4 to $4.50; bananas, $1.25 to $2; pears, 50 to $1 per basket; Catawba grapes, 3½ to 4c. per lb.; Malaga grapes, $4.50 to $6 per keg. Cranberries, Cape Cod, $7 per bbl.; boxes, $2.25 to $2 50; New Jersey, $7 per bbl.; Canadian, $5 to $6 per barrel; boxes, $2 to $2.15. Apples, $2.50 to $3.50 per bbl. California dried fruit—Apricots, 17½c. per lb.; peaches, 14c. per lb.; nectarines, 15c.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

There is a little firmer feeling in dressed hogs, and packers are a little more anxious as buyers than they were. As high as $6.30 has been paid for carlots of choice hogs.

COOK'S FRIEND BAKING POWDER

The Best Grocers Make a point of Keeping it always in Stock.

MARKETS—Continued

The range is from $6 to $6.30. Demand for hog products is high, and in some instances we quote lower prices.

BACON—Long clear, 9¼ to 9½c.; smoked backs, 11 to 11½c.; bellies, 12½ to 13c.; rolls, 9¾ to 10c.

HAMS—Unchanged, at 12 to 12½c. for smoked, and at 11c. for pickled.

LARD—Pure Canadian 11¼c. in tubs, 11¼c. in pails and 10 to 10¼c. in tierces. Compound 8½ to 8¾c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $17 to $17.50, Canadian short cut $18 to $18.50, shoulder mess $16.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores, 5c., hindquarters 6½ to 8c., mutton 5 to 6c., lamb, 6 to 8c., veal 7½ to 9c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Quiet and a little easier. Jobbers are getting $1.35 to $1.40 for sacks and barrels and $1.50 for single bushels of choice hand-picked.

DRIED APPLES—Small lots have been taken at 5c. f.o.b. Demand is light; jobbers are ordinarily getting 5¾c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—There is practically nothing doing. Holders are asking 9½ to 9¾c. and jobbers quote 10¼ to 10½c.

EGGS—Demand fair and prices steady. Fresh are quoted at 17c. and limed at 15 to 16c.

POULTRY—Receipts have been light this week, although there has been quite enough for the demand. Shipments will be free enough next week. We quote: Turkeys, 8 to 9c. per lb.; geese, 5 to 6c.; chickens, 30 to 45c. per pair; ducks, 40 to 65c. per pair.

POTATOES—The market is unchanged. Some car lots have changed hands on track at 50c., and out of store 55 to 60c. is quoted.

HONEY—Dull at 8 to 9c. for extracted white clover in 10-lb. tins and upwards, and 14 to 15c. for sections.

HOPS—There have been some sales of small lots of new hops at 18c.

ONIONS — There is an easier feeling. Spanish onions 75 to 85c. per crate, and Canadian $1 per bag.

SEEDS.

Chief interest this week is centred in alsike and red clover. Alsike has been going out freely at $6.50 to $7 for prime to choice, and at $7.20 to $7.30 for extra choice to fancy. A few parcels of red clover are going out, but this article is not receiving much attention yet. Prices are unchanged at $5.50 to $5.75 ordinarily, and $5.90 to $6 for choice to fancy. Timothy is quoted at $1 to $1.25 for inferior and $1,50 to $1.60 for prime, while choice to fancy bring 15 to 20c. more.

SALT.

Trade is fair both in car and jobbing lots. Prices unchanged. We quote: Coarse sacks, 60c.; fine sacks, common, 70c.; dairy, in barrels, $1.25; Coarse barrel salt, 95c.: American rock, $10 per ton.

FISH.

Trade is brisk and supply fair. Oysters are 25 to 30c. lower. We quote: Fresh sea salmon, 17 to 19c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $4.50 per barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 13 to 15c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2.50 per hundred and 4c. per lb.; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7½c.; oysters in bulk, $1.20 to $1.25 for standard and $1.75 selected; kippered cisco, 2½ to 4c. each; ciscoes, $1.22 per 100; salt mackerel in bulk, 10c. per lb.; pike, 6 to 6½c. per lb.; black bass, 10c. per lb.; haddock and cod, 5½c per lb; steak cod, 7 to 8c.; chicken halibut, 10 to 12c.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW

WOOL—The local demand for wool is slow and dragging, although some of the manufacturers are beginning to think that wool has about touched the lowest possible point. Some sales, large for this season of the year, have however been made, especially in choice lots, at ½c. advance on the standard price of pulled wools. It is reported by some dealers that the large importations of pulled wool from the States has had a disastrous effect on our own market, as it can be pulled at much lower rates there than in Canada.

HIDES—Remain quiet, and they are accumulating all over the country. The tanners who bought hides some ten or twelve weeks ago are now completely stocked and the demand is quiet and prices low. Dealers are buying pure hides from 3 to 3¾c., and 3c. for No. 3.

SHEEPSKINS—Are quiet and large stocks are being held by country dealers. Dealers are offering for fresh slaughtered skins 70 to 75c. Country stock is fetching from 25 to 50c.

TALLOW—Continues in brisk demand and dealers are paying from 5 to 5¼c. and selling at ¼c advance. Culled tallow 4½c.; rough tallow 2c.

PETROLEUM.

Business on the Toronto market continues brisk at unchanged prices. We quote Canadian at 11¼c. in shed in Montreal for round lots, and 12c. for small quantities. American petroleum, 16½c. in car lots, 17c. in 10 barrel lots, 17¼c. in 5 barrel lots, and 17¾c. for single barrels, net cash; American benzine, 23 to 25c.; Canadian benzine, 10¾c. Petrolea, 12½c. Montreal.

The Petrolea Advertiser, in its weekly review, says there is no change in either refined or crude, and it gives these quotations: Crude, $1 to $1.03 delivered; refined, 6 to 6½c. in bulk, or 8¾ to 9½c. in barrels in car lots f.o.b, Petrolea.

MARKET NOTES.

The Montreal, Toronto, Ontario, and Eastern business of the St. Croix Soap Manufacturing Co., makers of the well known article "Surprise," shows a constantly increasing volume of trade. There is scarcely a grocery store from one end of Canada to the other that does not display Surprise Soap for sale, and nothing but words of approval are heard regarding it.

W. H. Gillard & Co. report the arrival of some choice Eleme figs, prime layers, superior layers, and London layers; the first two in twenty-lb. boxes and the latter in ten-lb. boxes; also a consignment of Commadre figs in tops, which are above the ordinary. Malaga figs in taps, boxes, etc., are on the market for some time, but in quality they are not in the same class with Commadre, being thick-skinned, small, hard, and of poor quality generally.

SAMPLE-ROOM TALK.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol of Hamilton: Holiday trade this season has been so far satisfactory. The demand for fancy goods has not increased much with us, but we find no sale or demand for cheap stuff, the trade are going in for better class groceries, especially fruits, all the time. At this season it is a great pity merchants delay ordering goods until the last minute.

Mr. Strowger, manager of the Ireland National Food Co., Toronto: "We have been very busy the past few months and demand for cereal goods still continue brisk, although prices are cut close on bulk goods. We are particularly well pleased with sales of our dessicated rolled wheat in packages. We have never had so much persistent competition from American goods as the past year, and yet output has steadily increased. Our American friends will have to considerably improve the quality of their rolled goods before they can secure any steady trade here."

W. H. Gillard & Co.: A prominent Toronto banker, while visiting in Kingston a week or so ago, was delighted with a cup of tea he enjoyed at a friend's house, and bought fifty pounds from a prominent retailer handling it, ordering it sent to Toronto for his own use. This tea was Imperial Congou, one of our special brands.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Dec. 14, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The grocery market does not furnish much change this week, there being no feature in any of the leading lines. Business with outside points is not of large volume, but is fair on the whole, while the demand from the city retailers shows a disposition to pick up materially. In fact many of the houses state that they have been remarkably busy on this account since last Saturday. Of course the enquiry runs to Xmas lines such as fancy fruit, nuts, layer raisins, currant, figs, etc. Tea, coffees and spices have also attracted a fair seasonable enquiry and prices have remained steady. Sugar has shown somewhat more activity since the decline of 1-16c. which took place on Thursday, but buyers are still disposed to exercise caution on this staple. Canned goods have shown a fair degree of activity in both vegetables and fruit.

DRIED FRUIT.

The dried fruit market continues unsatisfactory and irregular in tone owing to the cutting that is still going on in some cheap lines of fruit. In fact it is said that 4c. has been shaded on ordinary grades for round lots, and we know of transactions on spot at 4 to 4¼c. for ordinary and 4½ to 5c. for prime in round lots. In a regular jobbing way however dealers protest that prices are steady especially as prime fruit is not in large supply. In fact a decided scarcity of selected grades of off-stalk is one of the features of the market. Layers are steady at 5¼ to 5¾c. in round lots and there has on the whole been a fair volume of trade both in off-stalk and layers during the week. For jobbing business we quote: Ordinary Valencia off-stalk, 4½ to 5c., according to brand; fine, 5¼c.; selected, very scarce at 6c., and layers at 6 to 6½c.. according to quality. The currant market is steady with a fair volume of business moving. We quote:—Provincials at 3⅞ to 4¼c; Filiatras, 4¾ to 5c., and Vostizzas 6 to 7½c., according to quality. The demand for figs has been quite active, a scarcity of ten-lb. boxes continuing one of the features of the market.

FLOUR AND FEED.

The following gentlemen met in Montreal last week for the purpose of fixing the standard of flour for the ensuing year. Messrs. O. M. Gould, chairman, A. McFall and I. L. Spink, Toronto; I. D. Saunby, London; Robert Noble, Norval, Ont.; C. R. Smith, Hamilton; William Brodie and Gaspard Lemoine, Quebec; A. F. Gagnon, W. A. Hastings, and W. W. Ogilvie, Montreal, the two last named being the representatives of Manitoba. Complaint was made that owing to the very short notice of the meeting given by the department at Ottawa—only three days—there was a shortage of samples from which to select standards. The setting of the standard for "straight roller" was the most important matter, almost the only important matter indeed, as this is the only flour that is sold largely by inspection—the higher grades going chiefly on the established merit of the brand—which is much the best security to the regular buyer.

The paper sack holds its own as the best package for flour. No other package, not even the barrel is so cleanly as the paper sack. No dust escapes from it, and nothing else costs as little. Small cotton sacks were used to a considerable extent years ago, and some are to be found in the trade yet, but the fact that every time they are moved their is a waste of flour, and a mess prevents their becoming popular with the tidy housekeeper, or the tidy flour dealer.

There is some complaint of flour from the present crop of Ontario wheat being less strong than that from the crop grown in 1892. The flour dealer who is grumbled at because his customers cannot get as large a loaf as a year ago may as well make it known at once that though the present crop is a good sample it is not equal in strength, at least to that of the previous year, and so help his customers to make the best of it. The crop is not, however, a weak one, only by comparison with the extra strong one of last year.

In many places in Toronto a sign is to be seen at grocery doors "Bread 6 cents the large loaf." Any one who is qualified to figure on the subject can show that a "large loaf" of bread cannot be made from good flour—or even moderately good flour—at 6 cents without entailing a considerable loss on someone. A subscriber who has given some attention to the matter claim to find in the "large loaf for 6 cents" a large amount of indigestion.

The cold weather is in, and with it one trouble for the flour dealer, that does not harass him in more equitable temperature—to wit, the trouble arising from his customers trying to bake bread out of cold flour. If every flour dealer would, when practicable, advise his customers to thoroughly warm their flour, say by standing it for a couple of hours on the back of the stove prior to baking it, he would avoid the cussedness of complaints that he had sent out bad flour.

How many flour dealers in Canada advertise their wares? In the Maritime Provinces, a good many, but in Ontario—say here in Toronto—how few. Few indeed; and yet it seems that if a flour dealer would fix on a really first-class flour, tidy up his shop, so as to make it inviting, and then judiciously announce in the advertising columns of some well read journal that he has flour that can be depended on to give satisfaction, he would work into a good trade, and when he gets a good trade it is no easy task for any rival to take it from him.

A flour and feed dealer should be able to "take stock" once a month. A little study will put him on to the way of doing it with very little labor. Nothing helps a man's business more than to know just where he stands, and what progress he is making. An experienced accountant—a gentleman who had given much time to the winding up of estates—once gave it as his opinion that nobody who kept correct books and "took stock" frequently could fail. Possibly like other rules, there may be exceptions to this one, but whoever observes closely the condition of bankrupt concerns will be strongly disposed to give a liberal measure of endorsement to the accountant's opinion.

News from Manitoba this week reports an advance of 3c. a bushel on wheat (equal to nearly 15c. on flour), with a further advance looked for. Prices are low enough to warrant some improvement, though Manitoba alone cannot sustain an advance; it must be general.

THE MARKETS.

TORONTO.

The weeks changes are insignificant. A better demand for bran and shorts has caused a slight advance, prices in local mills being $13.50 and $15 respectively. Flour is neither higher nor lower than a week ago. It keeps on the same dead level as wheat. Two or three years ago the present prices would have been thought impossible. Hetofore, when prices got into a hole, they took a turn for the better and ascended. This never failed. Just now few in the trade have backbone enovgh to voice the possibflity of history repeating itself.

FLOUR—Manitoba patents, $3.70 to $3.80; strong bakers', $3.50; white wheat patents, $3.25 to $3.40; straight roller, $2.80 to $2.95; Ontario family, $2.85 to $3.10; low grades, $2 10 to $2.25. These prices are in large lots delivered here to the trade.

MEAL—Rolled oats, $3.80 to $3.85; granulated and standard oatmeal, $3.80; cornmeal, common, $3.15; gold dust, $3.40.

FEED—Bran still continues in good demand with a further advance this week, city mills now selling at $13.00 per ton; delivered (on track) $12.50 per ton. Shorts steady, at $14 in ton lots; delivered on track, $13.75. In oats the feeling has been easy all week, although at the close prices are stiffening up; 32½c. per bus. on track is about value. Market prices are 32½c. to 33½c. per bus.; feed corn, 53c. per bus.

HAY—Prices are steady. Pressed on track worth $9 50 to $9.75. Farmers' loads range from $7 to $9, according to quality.

STRAW—The demand is limited, with prices steady. Pressed on track, $5.50 to $6.00 per ton. Market prices are $7 to $8 for sheaf, with loose nominal at $4 per ton.

PEAS—Steady, with sales on the market at from 56 to 57c.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

The market in flour is firmer, though there has been no marked advance, except in a very few brands, where price is up. There are large stocks here, but trade is quiet. Bran and middlings are both firmer, bran being about $1 higher. Hay is quiet, and prospects for export are not bright. Prices are as follows: Manitoba flour, $4.50 to $4.60; best Ontario, $3.70 to $3.90; medium, $3.6 to $3.70; oatmeal, $4.30 to $4.35; cornmeal, $2.55 to $2.65; granulated, $3 50 to $3 60; middlings on track, $19 to $19.50; bran on track, $18; oats on track, local, 36 to 37c; P. E. I., 38 to 40c; Ontario, 40½ to 41c.; small lots, 38 to 45c.; beans, handpicked, $1.45 to $1.50; prime, $1.35 to $1.45; split peas, $3.75 to $3 85: barley, $3.75 to $3.85; hay, on track, $13 to $13.50, in small lots $14 to $15.

Fancy stock have been moved at 11 to 12c., ordinary to good 8 to 10c., and mat figs 4¾ to 5c. Dates are selling well at 4¾ to 5c., and new prunes are offering both on spot and to arrive during next week at 5 to 5¼c.

NUTS.

There is a good seasonable trade doing in nuts, the volume of trade especially on city account having sensibly increased this week. Grenoble walnuts have changed hands at 11 to 13c., and Chile at 6½ to 7½c. Sicily filberts range from 9½ to 10c., and Terragona almonds 11½ to 13c. We quote Grenoble walnuts, 11 to 13c.; pecans, 8½ to 12c.; peanuts, 8 to 11c. per lb., and cocoanuts, $3.75 to $4 per 100; Terragona almonds, 11½ to 12c.; and shelled almonds 23 to 45c.; filberts, 9½ to 10c.; walnuts, 12 to 12c.

SUGARS.

The sugar market is steady at the decline of 1-16c., which was decided on by the refiners on Thursday last. Wholesalers say that stocks are light all over, and that if buyers were only assured that there would be no further decline in values there would be a material expansion in the volume of business. We quote refiners' prices here as follows:—Granulated, 4 7-16c. and yellows 3¼ to 4⅛c.

MOLASSES.

Barbados molasses has sold during the week at 30c. in round lots, but we still quote 33 to 34c. in a jobbing way. The tone is easy, however, and shading results in the case of every offer for a round lot.

SYRUPS.

The syrup market is dull and quiet, 1⅜ to 2c. being still the range for Canadian. American is quiet at 18½ to 25c. per gallon as to quality.

TEA.

The tea market continues dull and uninteresting. Brokers say that the wholesale houses are not showing the least disposition to do business, being satisfied with picking up desirable lots here and there. The only round lots that have been moved during the week have been Japans on the basis of 16½ to 18c. We quote Japans: Common, 12 to 13c.; medium, 15 to 17c.; fine, 18 to 21c.; and finest 23 to 32c.

COFFEES.

The coffee market is quiet, but steady, light offerings of Maracaibo stock being the feature. Rio is firm and there is very little of it offering. We quote: Jamaica, 16 to 18c.; Maracaibo, 19½ to 21c.; Porto Cobello, 19 to 20c.; Rio, 17½ to 19.; Java, 24 to 30c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

SPICES.

Enquiry for spices has picked up materially this week, especially for nutmegs, pimento, etc., and prices rule firmer. We quote: Jamaica ginger, 16 to 18c. for common, and 18 to 20c. for finer qualities; black pepper, 6 to 7c.; pimento, 6 to 7c.; and nutmegs, 65 to 70c. to $1.

RICE.

The demand for rice during the past week has been slow, dealers generally having stocked up before the close of navigation. We quote: Japan standard, $3.75; standard B, $3.40; English style, $3.20; choice Burmah, $3 85; Japan crystal, $4.25; Patna, $4.25 to $5; Carolina, $6.50 to $7.

CANNED GOODS.

Under a fair demand canned goods are generally about as last quoted. A round lot of canned corn, some 1,000 dozen, was auctioned off at 57c. It was a forced sale on account of the liquidation of an estate which was sold in the Fruit Exchange on McGill street. It is the intention of the Exchange to hold reguler auctiou sales of canned fruit and vegetables during the season in addition ordinary green fruit, which will make matters more interesting. We quote tomatoes 75 to 80c., corn 75 to 80c., peas 90 to 95c, strawberries $2.75 per doz., raspberries $1.80, salmon $1.25 to $1.27½ for best brands and $1.05 to $1.10 for cohoes, lobsters $1.60 to $1.75, mackerel $1 to $1.05.

GREEN FRUIT.

The apple market is firm, No 1 selling at $3.50 to $4 and No. 2 $2.50 to $3. Malaga grapes are in brisk demand this week at $4 to $6 per keg, and Catawbas 22 to 25c. per basket. There is a good demand for Florida oranges and prices are firm, car lots selling at $3 per box. Lemons are in great deal better shape than last week, and move well at $3.50 to $5 per box.

FISH.

There is a good demand for fish, both fresh and pickled. In reference to the speculation in green cod noted last week we learn that there are about 2,000 barrels held here on this account, and it is predicted by some that the deal may not be as successful as expected, as fresh caught fish have been arriving freely, causing the older fish to be neglected. Fresh lake trout are moving freely at 7 to 7½c., and No. 1 lake trout in kegs are quoted at $4.50, and whitefish in kegs $6. Haddock rules strong. We quote: No. 1 C. B. herring, $5.50; No. 1 Newfoundland do., $5 to $6; No. 1 green cod, $4.75 to $5; Labrador salmon, $14 to $15 per bbl.; B. C. do., $12 to $12.50; No. 2 mackerel, $12; finnan haddies, 7 to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1 to $1.75 per box; haddock, 4 to 4½c.; cod, 4 to 4½c.; boneless cod, 6½ to 7c.; hand picked malpecque oysters, $5 to $6.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

Eggs are in fair demand. Receipts are moderate and prices are unchanged. We quote: Fresh boiling 20 to 22c., candled 16 to 18c., Montreal limed 16 to 17c. and Western limed 15 to 16c. Good fresh properly dressed poultry is in good demand. Turkeys are in more liberal receipt, but the demand keeps the market well cleaned up at 10 to 10½c. Chickens are scarce, selling at 7½ to 8c. Geese are in ample supply and easy at 6c. Ducks are quoted at 8 to 9c. Onions are firmer with a moderate demand at $1.90 to $2.25 per bbl. Demand for potatoes is equal to the supply, and we quote 60 to 65c per bag in round lots and 5 to 10c. per bag more for small lots. Maple syrup is a slow sale at 50 to 65c. per can and sugar 6 to 7c. per lb. Beans are steady at $1.35 to $1.50 for hand picked aad lower grades $1 to $1.25. Hops are quiet. We quote 17 to 19c. for fair to good 1893 growth, yearlings 14 to 15c. and old stock 7 to 10c. There is a fair demand for heavy choice comb stock at 12 to 13½c., and dark buckwheat comb at 10 to 12c. Extracted is a slow sale at 7 to 8½c. for new and 5 to 6c. for old.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is quiet. Pork packers are rather easier in their views, but quotations are unchanged. Lard and smoked meats are in fair enquiry. Canadian short cut, per brl., $17.25 to $18.25; mess pork, western, new, per brl., $17.50 to $18; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11¼ to 12c¼.; bacon, per lb., 11½ to 12½c.; lard, com. refined, per lb. 8¼ to 8½c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The cheese market is very quiet at the moment. There is practically nothing doing and prices are unchanged. We quote: Finest Ontario fall cheese, 11 to 11⅛c.; finest Townships fall cheese, 10¾ to 10⅞c.; finest Quebec fall cheese, 10⅝ to 10¾c.; medium grades, 10½c.; cable 55s.

A fair local jobbing movement is noted in butter, but the market is on the whole quiet. We quote as follows:—Finest fall creamery, 23 to 23½c.; Finest Townships dairy, 21 to 22c.; Finest Western dairy, 19½ to 20.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

A New York firm were offering a round lot of black teas here this week at 12c.

Round lots of nutmegs have brought as high as 70c. from brokers' hands here during the week.

J. A. Gillespie of Gillespie & Co. is compelled to remain at home this week, being seriously indisposed.

Sugar refiners marked down their prices last Thursday 1-16c., but the fact has not induced much improvement in the demand.

W. T. Costigan of W. T. Costigan & Co. is still in New York. He writes that the New York market is rather easier in dried fruit.

Layer raisins which have been held in bond in New York for over a year are offering very low on this market, but buyers don't appear to want them very badly.

Vipond, McBride & Co. have now on the way from New York 800 boxes of prunes. They turned over a large consignment of Florida oranges at the top price of $3 this week.

Between Saturday and Tuesday Caverhill, Hughes & Co. report that business was as brisk with them as at the same time in any previous year. This they consider an encouraging sign.

L. H. Dobbin, the Montreal representative of N. A. Taussig & Co., New York, reports a good demand for Barbadoes molasses. He reports that he has recently closed out several round lots.

Messrs. Frank Magor & Co. are offering just now some attractive lines of spices, etc., which are just the thing for the Christmas trade, as they are put up in a handy shape in one-ounce tins. They call attention to their advertisement in this respect, especially in the west.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. 14.

As the Christmas season approaches the streets of our city take on a look of business. Stores are full of people. There is not, however, the money to be spent there was last year. There is, however, a good healthy feeling all round. There are but few changes to be reported.

CANNED GOODS.—In this there is nothing new. Prices are lower than if goods had to be rebought at present prices west, as held to by packers. We quote: Corn, 90c.; peas, 90c.; tomatoes, 95 to $1; lobsters, $1.60 to $2 05. The only goods which bring the last price are Hoegg's. Salmon $1.40 to $1.45; oysters, 2's, $2.15 to $2.35; corned beef, Canadian, $2 to $2.60; American, $2.70.

DRIED FRUIT AND NUTS.—Trade in nuts this fall has been large. Peanuts, walnuts and filberts have been bought at low prices. Brazils have been high and are getting more so. New peanuts are being offered from Norfolk very low. London's Malagas are rather scarce, but Californias are coming in freely at low figures and the want of the other is not felt. California raisins are extra good this season. A few new French prunes have been offered. Off stalk Valencias, 4½ to 4¾c.; Valencia layers, 5½ to 5¾c.; London layers, $2 to $2.25; currants, bbls., 3½ to 4c.; cases, 4 to 4½c.; cleaned, currants, in 1 lb. cartoons, 8 to 8½c.; dates, 5½ to 6½c.; prunes, 6¾ to 7c.; dried apples, 6½ to 6¾c.; evaporated apples, 11 to 11½c.; French walnuts, 11 to 12c.; Grenobles, 13 to 14c.; almonds, 13 to 14c.; Brazil, 13 to 14c.; filberts, 10 to 11c.; pecans, 12 to 13c.; peanuts, roasted, 10 to 11c.

SUGAR—Is off another ⅛c. since last report. Prices on the other side of the Atlantic are very low, and at present the market is in a very unsatisfactory shape. Granulated, 4⅜ to 4⅞c.; Yellows, 3¾ to 4⅛c.; Barbadoes, 4 to 4⅛c.; Paris Lump, 6 to 6¼c.; Pulverized, 6¼c.

MOLASSES AND SYRUP—The market is firm and demand is good. Good Barbadoes is hard to get. Barbadoes, best, 31 to 32c.; second, 29 to 30c.; Porto Rico, best, 35 to 36c.; second, 30 to 31c.; Porto Rico, in 45 gal. packages, 31 to 32c.; Antiqua, 28 to 29c.; Sugar Syrup, 35c.

DAIRY PRODUCTS—Good butter is scarce and finds a ready sale, but the article is not yet scarce enough to make it easy to sell poor quality. Eggs are hard to give away except it is a sure thing that they are fresh. Cheese, though quiet at present, shows signs of advance, prices in England being higher, and prospects are for a good demand. Eggs, 18 to 20c.; butter, creamery, 23 to 25c.; dairy, 20 to 23c; store packed, 18 to 20c.; cheese, 11c.

FRUIT—Apples are quiet, and on account of the fact that they are keeping so poorly the sale is being forced. Oranges are lower, both West India's and Florida's arriving in large numbers, though not in the best of order. Apples, $2.00 to $3.25; West India oranges, $4 per brl.; Florida's, $3 per box; lemons, $4.50 to $5; grapes, $4.75 to $5 per keg; cranberries, $6 25 to $6.75; cider, 25c. per gal.

PROVISIONS—The feeling in pork is easier, and round hogs are off. Demand is light. Clear mess pork, $20 to $21; P. E. I. mess, $18 to $19; plate beef, $14.25 to $14.50; extra plate, $14.50 to $14.75; pure lard, 11¾ to 12½c., compound 9¾ to 10c.

FISH—Dry fish are a little off ex vessel, though on account of the fact that there are not many to come forward. The price ex warehouse remains firm. Pickled fish are still scarce and prices firm. Smoked herring are a little easier. Large codfish, $4 to $4.20; medium, $3.40 to $3.50; haddock, $1.80 to $2; pollock, $1.90 to $2; herring, bay, barrels, $3 to $3.25; half-brls., $1.60 to $1.75; shad, half-brls., $6; Wolf Island herring, half-brls., $1.70; Canso herring, barrels, $5 to $5.25; half-brls., $2.50 to $2.75; Shelburne herring, barrels, $4 to $4.25; half-brls., $2 25 to $2.50; medium smoked herring, 11c.; lengthwise, 10c.

OILS—American (brls., $1.50), 15½ to 16½c.; Canadian (brls. free), 18 to 18¾c.; second, 12½ to 13c.; turpentine, 46c.; cod oil, 30 to 32c.

BREAD A LUXURY ONCE.

Among the Greek aristocrats bread was not, as with us, simply an adjunct to, but an essential portion of the principal meal of the day. The chiefs of the so-called heroic period lived almost exclusively on two dishes: roast meat over which a little flour was sprinkled and wheaten bread.

The flour was ground in a hand-mill by the female servant; it was then made into dough, a proportion of salt added and baked (as it appears from the information handed down to us) in a special part of the kitchen.

Wheaten bread enjoyed a great reputation. Homer calls it the strength of man. Bread was the first thing set before a guest. It represented civilization, whereas meat was representative of the old style.

When Odysseua fled for refuge to the palace of Alkinoos, bread is specially mentioned among the "dishes" set before him.

In the historical Hellas, bread played a similar part; it was one of the principal foods of the people, was regarded as indispensable by the better classes, and certain kinds of it were even looked upon in the light of luxuries.

The place most celebrated for bakeries—the Vienna of the time—was Athens, but we really know very little about the method of making bread there. It is characteristic of the position which bread occupies as an article of food that the Spartans, at their midday meal, only had wheaten bread on special occasions as a particular luxury. Solon also ordered that those citizens who were fed at the expense of the state in the Pryihaneion should only have white bread on extra-special occasions. In republican Rome it was the custom for each household to bake enough bread for its requirements, and not to purchase; and even under the Cæsars, when there was a goodly number of bakers in Rome, the better class families adhered to the old style of baking at home.

Such houses possessed a separate room for baking, situated next to the kitchen; this room was called pistoria (mill), for it embraced the place where the corn, etc., was ground. Bakers were called pistores (miller) until the fall of Rome although the two branches had been separated long before.

In Imperial Rome the bakers were divided into three classes: white bakers, milk bakers, and sweet bakers.

The white or wheat bakers were the chief, because they produced food, a means of nourishment; the milk bakers made buns and cakes; the third class were noted for their skill in the baking of tarts and all kinds of sweet confectionery eaten for dissert.

When we remember how closely butter is connected with bread at the present day, it is strange to read of the antipathy which existed against it in those times.

Butter was never used as a food either in Greece or Rome; it was employed chiefly as a medicament (externally in plasters and bandages, internally much as we take cod-liver oil); had pastry been made with it, the Greeks and Romans would have rejected the confectionery just as we should turn up our noses at a tart made with train oil. It is true that the Thracirns ate it, but they were only half Greeks.

In Imperial Rome there were, in addition to bakeries conducted by private people, spacious State bakeries, which played an important part in providing for the wants of the people.

The Roman ovens were just like ours. A well preserved specimen was discovered some years ago during the excavations at Pompeii; it contained several charred loaves, on which the baker's name could be plainly seen, showing of what flour they had been made.

The loaves of Pompeii weighed about two pounds; they were round and indented to admit of breaking them into eight equal parts. Similar loaves are made even now in Calabria and Sicily.—N. E. Grocer.

That we used to tap for Chewing Gum is a thing of the past.

The manufacture of Chewing Gum to-day is a science.

It requires the most expensive machinery and the most expensive and skilled labor.

People chew gum to-day for health, and if it combines business with pleasure so much the better.

It is this combination that makes SOMERVILLE'S MEDICINAL CHEWING GUMS so popular.

COUGH CHEWING GUM.

This line is specially prepared for this season of Colds and Grippe.

It will be found equal to any cough or cold Remedy in the market. Put up 20 bars (five cents each) on a handsome standing card. Place it on your show case and it sells itself. Be sure and ask for SOMERVILLE'S COUGH CHEWING GUMS, as imitations are already being offered.

BUSINESS CHANGES.

DIFFICULTIES, COMPROMISES, ASSIGNMENTS.

C. Crevier, grocer, St. Jerome, Que., has assigned.

Demand of assignment on Henri Deguire, grocer, Montreal, is being contested.

J. P. Mechand, general merchant, St. Hilaire, N. B., is asking an extension.

A demand of assignment has been made on Joseph Rasconi, trader, Pierreville, Que.

James Hopkins & Son, general merchants, Hartney, Man., have been granted an extension.

Stock of Thompson & Co., general agents, Fredericton, N.B., has been taken under bill of sale.

Marcotte & Freres, 89 St. James, have assigned on demand of A. Courval. Liabilities about $40,000.

McLean & Irwin, general merchants, Kingston, Que., have assigned, and a meeting of creditors will be held 20th inst.

P. Brownlaw & Co., general merchants, Elora, have assigned to John Ferguson, Toronto, and a meeting of creditors will be held December 20.

Leopold Denis, wine merchant and trader, Montreal, under the name of L. Denis & Fils, has assigned at the Demand of Arthur Desjardins, law student, with liabilities of about $8000.

John P. McLeod, general dealer, Baddeck, has assigned to William McLeod. The liabilities are between $8,000 and $10,000 and the only preference is Messrs. A. & W. Smith, for $800.

Sutherland Bros., general storekeepers, Newmarket, who recently asked for an extension from their creditors, have assigned to W. A. Campbell, Toronto. Their liabilities are about $6,000, and their assets nominally $7,000.

The liabilities of T. & W. Murray, the Pembroke merchants who secured a compromise the other day at 50c. on the dollar were $291,774.98. The assets consisted of stock, $97,510; book debts, $60,459.70, and real estate, $81,322.98, a total of $239,292.68, showing an apparent deficiency of $52,482.30.

SALES MADE OR PENDING.

The stock of the estate of R. Jameson, general merchant, Petrolia, has been sold.

Stock of Mrs. B. Slater, grocer and confectioner, London, has been sold by auction.

The boot and shoe stock of T. Naud & Co., Montreal, has been sold at 55c. on the dollar.

Stock, etc., of the estate of J. W. Clark, general merchant, Norwood, is advertised for sale 19th inst.

The Empire tea store, Woodstock, was sold under mortgage last week to E. J. Coles at 61c. on the dollar.

The stock of D. K. Weber, general merchant, Hawkesville, is advertised to be sold by auction by sheriff 18th inst. The general stock of W. Willard, Port Perry, is advertised for sale the following day.

PARTNERSHIPS FORMED AND DISSOLVED

Langman & Stills, general merchants, Vernon, Man., have dissolved.

Law & Richardson, flour, feed and grocers, Carleton Place, have dissolved.

James E. Price, general merchant, Norton, N.B., has admitted Samuel Allison as partner. Price & Allison is the style of the new firm.

A co-partnership has been registered in Halifax by Nelson B. Smith and R. P. Proctor to carry on business as dealers in cheese, butter, etc., under the style of Smith & Proctor.

CHANGES.

H. P. Jacobson, grocer, Victoria, B.C., has been succeeded by Armasty & Howell.

F. Richardson, general merchant, Nanaimo, B.C., has sold out to W. H. S. Perkins.

John N. Knechtel, grocer, boots and shoes, Killarney, Man., is selling out and giving up business.

J. B. Henderson, general merchant, Carberry, is opening a branch store at Portage la Prairie.

FIRES.

R. A. Whilman, general merchant, Emerson, Man., has been burned out; reported loss $15,000, insurance $5,000.

A. A. Decado, general merchant, St. Johns, Nfld., has been partially burned out.

DEATHS.

Michael Neville, lobsters, etc., Halifax, N. S., is dead.

Charles J. Smith of Smith & Brigham, grist mill, Moosomin, Man., is dead.

THE WAY THEY DO IT.

DEAR GROCER,—Your remarks re wholesalers figures being so prominently brought out by some houses in special advertisements in daily papers are quite in order and should be much appreciated by the retail trade. Competition is now so keen and so many men on the road there is no necessity for this cheap advertising at others' expense. Many trade items are read by the public and in the majority of cases misinterpreted by them, how could it be otherwise. The grocer has a hard road to travel nowadays and this unjust information is very fully taken advantage of. The retail trade have it in their own hands to remedy this evil.

POETS may sing of Christmas in peons of heavenly inspiration; but after all there is nothing that wears so well as the good old homely Anglo-Saxon greeting—"A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year." There is no superfluity of adjectives in that sentence. Every word carries weight, and every word is understood by the ignorant as well as the educated, by the poor as well as the rich. "I wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year." What is their more pleasant to receive than such words as these falling from lips which are moved by the impulses of a warm and generous heart! Nothing. One may be the recipient of valuable presents; but presents in themselves are less to be sought after than the good wishes of fellow man. "I wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year" is a prayer that blesses both him who utters it and him who is the object for whose welfare it seeks. Kind words, we are told, never die; neither do the well-wishes embodied in the Christmas greeting. We are each one of us only so many atoms in the sea of humanity, and what touches one, be it evil or good, touches all.

To its readers THE GROCER wishes the enlarged form of greeting: "A Merry Christmas and a Prosperous and Happy New Year" say we. So far the holiday trade has not opened out as auspiciously as some would desire. The periodical cloud of depression that is sweeping over the world is casting some of its shadows over the Dominion, and the spirits of some merchants are dampened thereby. Where these conditions obtain merriment and happiness can scarcely be unalloyed. And yet there is no reason why all should be alloy. There are some grains of gold in every man's experience. In order to see them, all he has to do is to open his eyes and look around. He will be sure to see something in his surroundings that will help to wipe dull care away; something that he can throw into the scales and balance up things a little. The Canadian merchant can, for instance, thank his stars that his store is not in the United States, where such a large number of consumers are out of employment. In Canada we are by no means experiencing a boom. Nor are we without our quota of idle workingmen. But the great mass of our working people — in whose weal or woe the retailer is so wrapped up — exhibit no such deplorable condition. On the contrary, some classes of skilled mechanics are unusually busy for this time of year. Of course, generally speaking trade and commerce is quiet. It would be absurd to assert anything to the contrary. The fact is only too plain. But that the condition of trade is congested and alarming we do deny, and that most emphatically.

The world is passing through one of its transformation periods. The day for high prices of grain has gone. So has the value of other staples; and the price of labor is tending in the same direction. All this means that we have got to cut our garments according to the cloth. In other words, all hands have got to economise. And it is while conforming ourselves to the new conditions that we feel a little inconvenienced or hurt occasionally. But conceding that the proportion of pleasure a merchant takes out of Christmastide is dependent upon the volume of business he transacts and the profits that accrue thereto, it is obvious that he can of his own evolution do much toward securing the desideratum. The Christmas holiday trade is different from that of any other time of the year. The merchant needs to keep this in mind. In a word, it is a time when novelties for a brief season are king. Novelties, too, yield, as a rule, better profits than staples. It is obvious what it is most advisable for the merchant to do in the premises. Then a little more discrimination in regard to accounts will by no means be amiss. But there is one thing wherein much can be done towards providing the profits which some may deem necessary to a merry Christmas, and that is — stop cutting prices, stop selling at or below cost. Cutting prices is one of the greatest evils in the trade to-day, and as a cause of failures has been one of the most prolific, while as a creator of ill-feeling between merchant and merchant there is none so potent. Quit cutting; and it will not only enable you to earn proportionately higher profits, but to spend a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, which THE GROCER wishes all its readers may experience. But if we want a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year we must seek them. Pleasure does not come unsolicited. Like a coy maiden, it must be sought.

We cover the ground from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and have double the circulation of any other journal in Canada.

AN ILLEGITIMATE COMPETITOR.

THE world seems made up of contrarieties. And we find not infrequently that those things we naturally expect to derive benefit from are injuriously affecting us.

The newspaper — whether it be trade, daily, or ordinary weekly — is in its generally accepted sense, one of the greatest, if not the greatest, factors in business building that the merchant possesses. If he is a wholesaler there is no medium through which he can so well get access to the retailer as the reputable and widely-circulated trade journal. If he be a retailer there is no medium through which he can so well acquaint the great mass of consumers with the character of the goods he has in stock for their inspection as the daily or weekly newspaper. But at the same time the good that some of them do is counteracted by the injury they effect as well. There are some so-called trade papers that are also culpable in this respect. But fortunately they are trade papers only in name. The classes under which they should be designated are either blackmailing or advertising sheets. These are soon known by their works.

The ways in which the interests of merchants have been injuriously affected by the daily and weekly newspaper are many and varied. Of the injury worked by the daily press we have had more than one instance lately. One has been in regard to wholesale quotations, which, published in ex tenso, have naturally gone into the hands of consumers, who knowing nothing about what they read, have readily jumped to the conclusion that the retailer was a leach living in ease and luxury on the exorbitant profits he is sucking out of them. Other instances have been from time to time cited of late, one, it will be remembered, only a few weeks ago, when one of the leading daily papers of Toronto allowed itself to be used by a gang of advertising fakirs as a medium for bleeding the merchants and manufacturers of the city of, in the aggregate, large sums of money.

A way in which some of the daily and weekly newspapers, indiscreetly at least, injure instead of benefit the merchants, is in the premiums that some of them give. Most people who have glanced over the list of premiums that some of the papers offer to subscribers, must, it seems to us, have been repeatedly struck with this fact. The moment the newspaper begins to offer as premiums the goods you are selling that moment does it become your competitor. The publisher, ninety-nine chances to one, never intended that he should assume that position towards you. But that does not, all the same, alter the fact that he is a competitor with you. Look in his paper and the chances are that he is offering as premiums the very same commodities or articles which you or somebody else are advertising in an adjoining column. If somebody were to suggest that you contribute towards buying the goods with which your neighbor was to compete with you in securing the patronage of the consumers in your locality you would naturally refuse. Then no more should the retailer advertise in the paper that so far steps out of its sphere as to trespass upon the domain of the legitimate merchant. It is scarcely likely that the merchant would have to go to the extreme of taking out his advertisement. As already stated, the publisher has probably no intention of competing with his patrons, and, therefore, all that would be necessary in the premises would be to intimate that he was trespassing upon your trade. Of course, if he refuses to move off, there is no other alternative for you but to seek some other advertising medium. But advertise somewhere or somehow.

DISHONEST EMPLOYEES.

"HONESTY is the best policy" is a proverb that nearly every man and woman of to-day has had drummed into them to a more or less extent.

But into some people it does not seem to have been drummed enough ; and one does not need to go into the by-ways and alleyways where crime is supposed to reek to discover that fact either.

A glance at the daily papers of the last few weeks demonstrates that there is room for the old proverb being at least practiced, if not taught, in many business places.

Of late dishonesty seems to be almost verging on an epidemic among clerks and persons holding responsible positions ; and it is feared that the cases given publicity through their ventilation in the police courts are but a small proportion of the thieving which is being practiced or the frauds perpetrated from time to time.

As far as Toronto is concerned we know the whole has not been told. In one warehouse alone there was only the other day a chief of a department and several clerks discharged because of dishonesty. While in some of the larger retail stores employees have been caught red-handed, but against whom their employers took no criminal action, merely discharging them on the spot.

Whether to allow dishonest employees to escape without instituting criminal proceedings is the proper course to purpose is questionable. In the first place the employee who steels money or goods from his employer is guilty of an infraction of the law of the country, and to that law is he amenable. Therefore the employer who allows a dishonest employe to go free is in reality compounding a felony. Of course there are instances where leniency may be shown, and that is where a young man or woman who has previously borne a good character has, on the impulse of the moment, or under unusual temptation, taken the first false step. But in cases where it has been discovered that dishonesty has been carried on systematically it is a positive injustice to the community to allow the perpetrator to escape the consequences of his misdeeds, as he has more than once been allowed to do of late.

So numerous of late have these petty cases of thieving become that merchants who employ large numbers of hands are beginning to get serious over the matter ; and well they might. We know of a case the other day where, while there was known to be extravagance and neglect of business on the part of the employer, there was well-grounded suspicion that his failure was caused in part at least by systematic thieving on the part of employees.

"Honesty is the best policy," let people say what they will. In the rush for existence and in the keenness of competition there are often strong temptations on the part of merchants as well as clerks to swerve when the occasion, as they think, demands it, from the path of integrity. Indeed, there are some, and among them merchants, who hold that a man cannot remain in business and be strictly honest. They never made a greater mistake in their lives. "Honesty is the best policy."

As to the dishonesty of employes, it is just a question whether, in some instances, the employer himself is not responsible to some extent for its existence. If he pays salaries to the young men or the young women in his establishment which he knows is not sufficient to keep body and soul together, no matter how frugal they may be, and dress as respectably as the character of his business demands, he cannot but expect that some of them will be led to acts that are dishonest. Of course there is a difference between low wages and starvation wages. The law of supply and demand regulates the price of labor as well as the price of commodities, but the employer knows when the limit of the one is below the living stage as well as if an article offered him is below the price which it could be honestly produced. Then if a merchant allows a clerk to palm off on a customer goods that are not what they are represented to be, he can hardly be said to be setting a good example for his emplayees. It is to be feared that there are some employers as well as some employees who need to remember the old proverb a little better.

A Minnesota merchant, who was compelled to go into bankruptcy, issues the following manly statement : "It has been the greatest sorrow of my life to know that through my misfortunes others have suffered, but I trust that I may yet be of service in assisting the closing up of matters to the benefit of my creditors. It is my purpose to devote the balance of my life to the task of making good the losses of those who have suffered through my business reverses.'

HINTS FOR CHRISTMAS TRADE.

BY H. E. WILTON, SPRINGFIELD.

AT this season of the year, and as Christmas is close at hand, every merchant is looking forward to an an increase of business, and as the summer months are the harvest for the farmer, so are the present days the harvest for the grocer. In expectation of a larger trade, stocks are being increased and every imaginable scheme worked out to catch customers, some of which are good and some bad indeed. One bad habit of many merchants at this season of the year is in cutting prices. Go where you will, you will find circulars, posters, etc., announcing great cuts in groceries for the Xmas trade. Why should this be? This is the time when every merchant should not only do a larger trade, but also maintain the regular prices, which, by the way, are already fine enough. Instead of this, however, many will resort to the system of "cut and slash." Then after the Christmas and New Year trade is over, and they figure up the amount of business done, they will find that although a large trade may have been done, the profits are all gone, and they are just exactly where they were before the Christmas trade commenced, minus their own time and labor and the profits which could just as well been made as lost. There is no advantage in doing a large trade unless something is made, and why so many groceries will persist in this cutting of prices at the very time when they should not is a mystery to me.

There are times in the year when a reduction of prices on certain articles may be an advantage, take for example the dull midsummer season, when farmers are all busy and trade in general quiet. At this season, when cash is also scarce it is sometimes a good plan to force business by a few cuts in prices on lines of goods not then staple stock. And while even in the busy season it is always best to keep your business well before the public by good newspaper advertising, the time for increased advertising and special effort in promoting trade is in the dull season, when, too often, many merchants sit quietly down, and while waiting for better times, wonder how it is that trade continues to be so quiet. Keep at all times your business well before the public, but by no means do not reduce your advertising account in the dull season. In my estimation, the main qualifications for a successful business is a neat, clean and attractive store; buy often and keep fresh goods; do a cash business and sell your goods at a fair living profit; have one price only, and that marked in plain figures on all goods so that the customer may see it; have your window dressed neatly and change it often; build up your business on the principle of quality, not quantity, and patronize liberally your local paper; see that clerks are at all times neat in their appearance, obliging and polite, and look well after that class of customers who buy in small quantities and come often, as in nine cases out of ten they will, in the course of a year, leave you more cash than your wealthy customer. Clerks are often inclined to slight the customer who buys in small quantities. This should not be allowed. Where goods are delivered, do so with as much haste as possible. I know of two cases where good customers were lost by neglect in this matter. Let the public once learn that the quality of your goods are excelsior, that your store is always neat and clean, that both your word and that of the clerks can be relied on as truthful, and even though your prices were higher than those of your neighbor, I will guarantee that you will do a paying business. The most profitable and direct way of letting the people know these things is through the newspaper—and then do as you advertise.

W. L. Hunter.

W. L. HUNTER.

OF the many well known travelers going out of Toronto few are better known than W. L. Hunter. He first saw the light of day in London, England, and came to Toronto some 35 years ago. Since that time with the exception of three years spent in the Western Sates, he has been a resident of the "Queen City of the West." During the three years he was in the West he passed through the great Chicago fire of 1871. His connection with the grocery trade dates back to 1880, when he became assistant bookkeeper for J. C. Fitch, since retired. In 1885 he resigned, to accept an opening with J. W. Lang & Co., and with that firm he is still connected, having since he first entered its employ covered the greater part of Ontario from Renfrew, Carleton Place and Belleville to Chatham and Sarnia. His present territory covers the Midland districts and the Niagara Peninsula. Mr. Hunter was liberally educated in his youth, and since he came to manhood has had ample opportunity for acquiring a thorough knowledge of the grocery trade and its requirements, while in ambition and enthusiasm he lacks nothing. These qualifications are all more or less essential to a sucessful traveler. In Mr. Hunter's territory are included such towns as Peterboro', Lindsay, Uxbridge, Cannington, Beaverton, etc. In addition to doing service for the grocery trade, Mr. Hunter has done service for the country, having, while a member of the Queen's Own, taken part in the engagement at Ridgeway, June 2, 1866.

WE KEEP THEM OUT OF BED O' NIGHTS.

TILSONBURG, Dec. 14, '93.

DEAR SIR,—I have started business in Tilsonburg and must have THE GROCER sent to me, as it is a welcome source of information to all grocers who wish to keep up with the times.

Yours, etc.,

H. P. OSTROSSER,

(late of Port Rowan.

SALMON CANNING ON THE FRASER.

THE British Columbia salmon-canning industry is yearly growing in importance. The pack last season was enormous, particularly on the Fraser River, which is the most important centre of the industry. In the December issue of The Canadian Magazine appears an article on salmon fishing and canning on this particular river.

It will be remembered that during the last season extraordinary reports were sent across the continent by wire and mail regarding the run of salmon on the Fraser. Reports stating that the river was almost choked wich the heavy run of fish were common, but one went so far as to chronicle a party of men in a boat poleing themselves across the river on the backs of the salmon which were in a solid mass beneath. The writer in The Canadian Magazine also touches upon this peculiar feature of the annual fish runs. What he says, to some extent at least, bears out previous reports regarding the extraordinary character of the run; and what he says cannot be doubted, for he has reverend prefixed to his name — Rev. Herbert H. Gowen. "One sees," he notes, "the river in some places and at certain times almost choked with the salmon forcing their way to the upper waters for the purpose of depositing their spawn — so numerous that, as the popular saying has it, you can almost walk across the river on their backs."

During the course of the season there are several runs. In the spring there is the spring salmon, "a fine, delicious fish, but not sufficiently numerous for the canner to use." Then in July, and until the end of August, comes the great run of the year, that of the sockeye salmon, a fish smaller than the spring salmon, but more remunerative for canning. It is for this kind that the cannery is prepared, and when the sockeyes depart the cannery is shut down. Following the sockeyes, come the humpbacks, ill-shaped and deemed unfit for food. Then come the steelheads, "a beautiful fish, canned sometimes with sockeyes, but not numerous enough to be sought for their own account." Lastly come the cohoes, which run till the end of October, "and are kindly welcomed on all sides and universally esteemed."

The canning season is of but short duration. It begins about the middle of June and ends with August. The majority of the fishermen are Indians. There are also white men in plenty—English, French, Italian, Scandinavian, and a considerable number of Japanese. The most successful fishermen are those who can endure the longest hours on the water, "and in this respect the palm may almost certainly be given to the Newfoundlanders, of whom there are quite a number on the Fraser. Each boat is manned by two men, or, in some instances, by a man and his wife. One manages the boat and the other the net—no light matter when it is remembered that a salmon net is 300 yards long, and that the work of hauling includes the killing of each salmon by striking it a sharp blow on the head with a stick." This sort of work goes on all through the long night watches. What the fisherman accounts a good night depends on a variety of circumstances. In what he terms the good year the fisherman can catch during a run more than the canneries have capacity to deal with, and, therefore, a limit of perhaps three hundred fish a night is set to the exertions of each boat.

There is one particular in which the canner must be prepared before the season opens; and that is in regard to cans. "Nothing could be more interesting than this," says the writer, "and it is here that the Chinaman's share of the work comes in. Making the cans is an operation involving about fourteen several processes, from the time the boxes of tin are unshipped, piled, and counted, to the time that the traysful of cans stand ready to receive their dainty contents.

Turning to the fish again the writer says: "Here, again, time would fail to tell of the many hands employed before the perfect result is attained—certainly forty, and none of these superflous, The fish is cleaned, and it is no uncommon thing for a Chinaman to clean as many as a thousand fish a day, working like a machine, without haste and without rest. Then they pass into the hands of the Kloochmen, who wash the fish and prepare them for a sort of guillotine arrangement by which they are cut up into the requisite lengths. There is a certain amount of waste, but on an average, about thirteen fish go to a case of forty-eight cans." After the fish are cut into lengths the cans are filled and carried to the scales and weighed. Then they are taken, and by successive stages wiped, topped, crimped, soldered, piled in coolers, tested to find out whether they are air tight, and put into the boiling kettles. After a sufficient time has elapsed they are taken out and tested a second time, then placed in a retort for cooking. Next they are washed with caustic soda, after which they are wheeled to the packing room, tested with a nail, piled in trays, taken to the lacquering table, lacquered, labelled, boxed, piled and shipped. A good cannery can turn out from 1000 to 2000 cases of 48 cans per day.

It is at the close of the fishing, says the writer, that the good results of a successful season become most apparent, and perhaps the busiest time for the canner is when the pack of fish has been completed and he has to discharge his men and sell his fish. The latter process is sometimes simplified by a buyer coming along and purchasing as many as 40,000 cases at one transaction. But the work of "paying off the men is a sore vexation and trial of patience." All want to be off at once, "and to make up their individual accounts and settle disputed claims is not done most conveniently with a horde of Indians, Chinamen and white men pressing eagerly into the sacred precincts of the office and each vociferously demanding attention before the other. . . . And it is no inconsiderable amount that the fishermen have at their disposal at such a time. Of course prices vary from year to year, but the fisherman never gets less than six cents for a fish, and occasionally as much as fifteen cents, so that it is quite possible for a man to earn $100 in a night, and stories are told of men earning over $1,000 in a season." That money is plentiful is soon noticeable in the towns, where the banks are paying out at the rate of $60,000 per day. The money once in their possession, the Indians wander curiously from store to store, heaping together goods wherewith to fill their canoes for the return voayage northward." They are not particular as to what they buy; indeed, their chief anxiety is lest they should have money left on their hands." They buy flour and clothing, saddles and bridles, guns and ploughs, even coffins and gravestones. "However," concludes the writer, "as a good deal of money is left to circulate in our midst, and the Indians go home well satisfied, it is not for us to grumble. Indeed, grumbling is at a discount after the fishing, or should be, for it is the harvest of the year — a blessing to the fishermen, a blessing to the canners, a blessing to the tradespeople in our cities, and, let us hope, a blessing to the world at large which tastes our Fraser River salmon, as fresh a year hence as on the day they are caught."

STORY RE BLENDED TEA.

"JUST taste that tea and tell us if that suits your palate," said Mr. Hustwitt, who is now with Eby, Blain & Co., to me the other day as he smacked his lips and poised the spoon he held, as if he knew what he was talking about. "Yes, that is considered with many city grocers the best blended tea ever offered in Toronto. I'll tell you how I came to make up that blend of tea. It is rather interesting. About two and a half years ago the wife of one of my city customers took a trip over to Ireland to visit the old folks at their homestead near Belfast. While there she drank what they called the Belfast blended tea. She got to like it so much that on her leaving for Toronto she had to get some of this wonderful tea to surprise the folks with at home. She went to Foster, Green & Co.'s, Belfast, where she purchased two packages of the tea, paying 4s. 2d. per pound sterling for it, and brought it out as a surprise for her friends in Canada. I happened to call at her store, which is situated on Queen street west, just the day after she had ar-

Oh no, we never advertised; we thought we knew it all,
Till biz'ness took a sudden slump an' pushed us to the wall;
An' now we're knockin' 'round the world, our hopes unrealized,
An' all because we knew so much, we never advertised.

rived home. She told me that Toronto tea was only rubbish; that she had been to Ireland and had there drank the loveliest tea in the world; that her daughter had made her a cup of tea on her arrival home last night, and it was simply rubbish. 'Oh, how I long for a cup of Belfast tea,' she said. I smiled at what she said and replied, 'Why did you not bring some of the tea with you?' With that a thought seemed to strike her, for she immediately left the store, and returning in a few minutes holding a package of tea in her hand, and patting it lovingly, exclaimed, "Oh, this is the Irish tea for you!' Of course I became much interested, and asked permission to look at it, which I did very carefully, asking if I might take a little with me so that I might test it at the office. She reluctantly gave me permission to do so, I promising to see if I could possibly match it, and I would let her know in a few days. Well, like the doctors, I had to make a diagnosis of the case, the outcome of which was that I succeeded in making a fac simile tea. I then took her a large sample and told her to try it at the table at meals, and I would call again in a few days for her verdict and respective orders, which I got, and she is using the same tea to this day with surprising success. Well, sir, that lady thinks I am a phenomenon on tea. She even wanted to claim me as an Irishman, and she seemed surprised and somewhat disappointed when I told her I never made a practice of deceiving ladies, and that I unfortunately came from the next furthest sister isle, called England, and that I had never seen nor kissed the blarney stone. She said, 'Then you must have been in company with someone that had.' And now she sells and continues to drink Irish tea from Belfast without having to go there to buy it. So you see we know a little about tea after all in Toronto, and if could but get our Canadian cows to give us as good milk and cream as they get around Belfast we could beat them badly in a cup of blended tea at considerably less prices than 4s. 2d. a pound sterling retail."

Politeness, like beefsteak, had better be a little underdone than overdone.—Galveston News.

AMERICAN TARIFF AND DRIED FRUIT.

There is considerable discussion among Montreal wholesale grocers and traders generally as to the possible effect on prices of foreign dried fruit in case there is any reduction in the American duty on it.

Theories vary as to the influence it will have on the market for dried fruit in Canada. The majority seem to think that it will tend to lessen the influence that stocks of fruit in New York frequently have on prices in Montreal.

It is often the case—these people say—that a line of dried fruit, which has been held in bond for over a year at the former port is offered to Montreal buyers at almost anything it will bring. The New Yorkers do this owing to some deterioration in the goods or because stock that has been held over a year cannot compete with new fruit, and naturally so. It does not profit them therefore to pay a duty of 2½c. per lb. in New York if they can sell it in Canada and only pay a duty of about 1½c. If the duty is removed there will be no reason to do this, and besides it will tend also to increase the consumption of foreign dried fruit across the lines. This result will of course relieve the New Yorkers of the necessity of finding a market elsewhere for such lots of goods as the ones referred to above.

In this connection a well known Montreal broker cited a case in point. He said that a line of layers which had been held in bond in New York for over a year had been put into the hands with authority for him to sell it at anything he could get. This tends to illustrate the position above outlined, and in the case in question it was only the poor quality of the lot which prevented it being sold, and so competing with higher priced stock already on Montreal wholesalers' shelves.

The majority of the Montreal traders hold, however, that the possibility of any reduction in the American duty on foreign dried fruit is very remote. They say that the interest of the Pacific coast growers will be sufficiently strong to upset any effort in this direction being carried to an ultimate conclusion. In any event they hold that it can hardly have effect on prices on fruit at present in Canadian sellers' hands, for the reason that the provisions of the Wilson Bill itself enact that it does not come into force until June next.

CONCERNING RETAILERS.

C. WILSON, formerly of Wilson & Young, Seaforth, has started into business in the same place.

Harry Scully of 430 Yonge street, Toronto, has sold out, so has J. A. Fish of Spadina avenue.

Barnes & Padget, Toronto Junction, have an extra fine holiday window display. The same may be said of their stock generally.

Hutchinson & Hill, general merchants, Weston, have got an excellent stock for the Christmas trade.

D Rountree of Weston is one of the general merchants of the country who is making more than usually extensive preparations for the Christmas trade.

H. Wilson of Oakville has recovered from an attack of the grip just in time to prepare for the holiday business.

R. A. Smith, of Newmarket, is said to be showing an unusually fine display of fine groceries for the Christmas trade.

George Little, formerly with Brunlon Bros., of Newmarket, has begun business for himself in that place with a nice stock of groceries and confectionery.

Pollock Bros., formerly of Linwood, have opened up a grocery store at Wellesley and Ontario streets, Toronto.

Brown & Maxwell, grocers, Queen street west, Toronto, have about one of the best dressed windows in the Toronto grocery trade. Christmas delicacies and novelties and evergreens have beea turned to excellent advance, and the window is one of the cynosures on the street.

A number of the employees of Acton Tanning Company were "laid off" on Monday until after New Years.

NOTE BOOK GLEANINGS OF THE FAIR.

"DON'T miss it." "It's the opportunity of a life time." "As an educator it is invaluable." "It beats anything of the kind that the world has ever seen." It was these and sundry similar remarks dropped by friends of mine that induced me to spend a week in the White City towards the close of the Columbia Exhibition. All that I had previously read and heard about this, the greatest triumph of modern civilization, were as feeble in comparison as would be the attempts of a five-year-old child to describe the majesty and beauty of the great Niagara cataract. In the week I was there I saw much and yet comparatively little. I have put in many a hard week's work in my life, but yet the week I spent wending my way, twelve and fourteen hours on a stretch per day, was the hardest I ever put in. But it was a labor of love, but if an inviting seat did occasionally tempt me to rest my tired limbs, my interest flagged not.

And then an occasional rest like this gave me an opportunity to study the conglomerate mass of humanity that was ever sweeping by or to fall into conversation with some other fellow-tired sight-seer. One peculiarity which I always noticed during such moments of ease was the large nunber of country people that were ever floating along in the tide of humanity sweeping by. In appearance they looked much the same as those we see at our own Industrial Fair. The men wore the same identical clothes, carried the same identical air, wore the same identical soft-felt hats, with the rim turned down in front, and moved along with the same identical gait. The women were dressed in just the same style, and their hats were trimmed with the same variety of colors; they wore the same identical care-worn expression as do so many of their Canadian sisters, and carried around in their arms the same identical infants in long clothes, and had tugging along at their heels the same identical chubby, candy be-smeared-faced,tired-limbed youngsters. The young men—that is the single men—were usually in groups of half a dozen. Almost invariably dangling at a waistcoat button by a piece of pink tape was a small card-board box of lunch, which was sold outside the fair grounds by innumerable hucksters.

I never had to sit down long before I fell into conversation with some one. And I did not have to "break the ice" either. It did not matter whether my next neighbor was a New Englander, a Westerner or a Southerner—I cannot say so much for a New Yorker, as I did not happen to fall in with one—he would talk. He might begin by passing a remark about the delightful nature of the weather. I am not so sure about that, however. But I do know that the first question he would put as he would turn toward me, throwing one leg over the other as he did so, would be: "What State are you from?"

When this question was put to me on the the first day I was on the grounds I would answer somewhat meekly, "Canada," but after I had caught a few of the glories of my own country, as reflected at the fair, I would swell out with pride and answer with all the emphasis at my command, "Canada, sir."

I do not know whether it was because I was a white man, or because I was not clad in furs, or whether it was because I spoke English, or whether it was that a Canadian should venture so far away from home—perhaps it was all these—but whatever was the cause, they would stare at me in blank amazement and remarked in effect, when they had recovered themselves: "From Canada! Who'd thought it! Why, isn't that a long way?"

"No, Toronto, where I came from,is only a little over 500 miles from Chicago."

One man I fell into conversation with was a farmer from near Nashville, Tenn. I was seated one night in a chair in one of the main avenues in the Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts' building. He was a long, lank, cadaverous individual, but with a face honest and simple-looking, but a face upon which was implanted much determination. First he shuffled himself up near me. The next thing he did of course was to ask me from what State I hailed. And when I told him I was from Toronto, Canada, he, like every other American with whom I had had any conversation, gave vent to the usual exclamations of surprise,although in his case they were a little more pronounced. Next he wanted to know what the farmers down down "our way mostly raised." I told him; and then I seized the opportunity to boast of the fruit, vegetables, live stock cheese and other exhibits made at the Fair by Canada, taking particular pains to dwell on those which had proved superior to those from his own country. He had seen some of the exhibits in question, and like a wise man, to use a slang phrase, "acknowledged the corn." Then I took a turn at question plying. First, I "wanted to know" something regarding the condition of the farmers in his part of the country, and fortunately I was not enquiring at the Circumlocution office. "It's bad; very bad," he said as he rested his cadaverous jaw in the palm of his hand. "Darn it, you see we ain't getting nothing for the stuff. And as for raising mules, I'm out of it. I believe in figgering out everything; and I've figgered out that to raise a mule at the prices going now—$80 to $100—I'm actually out of pocket; I might say the same thing of horses." Then I undertook to fathom him on the currency question. "What we want," he replied as he gave his knee a thump, "is more money. Yes sir, more money. With that things will improve; and until we have they won't."

"You want free silver, then?" I ventured.

"I don't care what it is, so long as it's got the Government's stamp upon it," he rejoined. "They can put it on a piece of paste board and I'll be satisfied. But I tell you we want more money. Wall street has been running this country too long." Then his wife, a big bouncing woman,came and towed him away.

One day I was leaning over a display of mica in the Mining building, when, "Mica!" I heard in a shrill voice close to my ear. Turning quickly around I encountered the gage of a woman's dark eyes. Then pointing to a large sheet of the mineral resting against which was a card with the word "Mica" printed in large letters, she said, addressing herself to me: "We always called that ising-glass."

"Yes, I know some people do," I replied, "but the proper name is mica; we call it such and as such you see it is labelled."

"Young man, where are you from?" she queried, looking me straight in the eyes.

"From Canada," I quickly replied.

"O, I thought," she rejoined as she tossed her head, "that you were a different countryman. I'm from America."

And before I could reply that I too was from America, and from the greater half to boot, she had grabbed her husband's arm and vanished in the crowd.

Another American woman—lady I should say—displayed her native egotistical characteristics when viewing the exhibit of the Manitoba Indian Industrial School. "O, what are these," she queried, addressing an Indian maiden. But the child was not conversant with what we call on this side of the line the English language, and replied in French, which her questioner could not understand, who remarked with a lofty air: "Oh, can't you speak United States?"

If there was one class of people at the Fair to whom I became partial, it was the New Englanders. They have good honest faces, and have little or none of the boastful characteristics that have some of their fellow countrymen hailing from other parts of the Union. One afternoon I was inspecting an old plough shown in the New Hampshire exhibit in the agricultural building. What interested me more than its quaintness and vastness was that it was "made by Daniel Webster and used by him on his Marsfield estate."

"Daniel Webster's plough! "Well, now, I would so like to know how long it is," said a pleasant-faced woman, who had probably seen half a century of life, as she held pencil to note book.

"I can tell you within a few inches," I ventured.

"Well, could you?" she rejoined. "I wish you'd try." I did, and told her that the plough was about fourteen feet long.

"Goodness me, it's that long, is it? What a length! Well, I'd like to see the man who could handle it now," she said with a laugh.

"Yes, particularly if he struck a rock," remarked a companion.

Then it came my turn to be curious. "What are these?" I asked, pointing to a group of ancient-looking wooden tools.

"Oh, this is the flax-break," she explained as she lifted the old wooden hammer that in the early days of the country had been used to crush the flax seed. "And this," she continued, as she picked up a long wooden knife that was suspended to a post, whose head was sharpened to a point like the blade of an axe, and began to wield it, "is the swinging-board, with which they used to cut off the seeds from the flax. Then they took the flax and heckled it over these sharp teeth"—placing her hand on the iron teeth through which the flax was drawn—"and then it was put over this spinning-wheel. What is this?" she said, repeating the query of one of the party, who wanted to know what a short post was with a top dug out like a mortar. "Oh, that is a mortar for crushing mush," she explained as she picked up the big wooden pestle that was standing in it, "which your forefathers and mine used. Oh, I can remember seeing my dear old grandmother use it down in my dear old New Hampshire home, for I'm a New Hampshire woman born and bred," she concluded as her face assumed a more thoughtful expression.

"How, then, did they grind their flour?" queried a by-stander.

"They didn't have any flour," she quickly replied with a laugh.

"Well, I believe they'd go hungry now if they had to eat such stuff," ventured another female spectator.

"Yes, indeed they would," chimed in a jolly, nautical looking man, who had charge of the exhibit. And then I moved on to other exhibits, sorry to part with one of the nicest motherly women I had met in Chicago.

I had a pleasant fifteen minutes' talk with the gentleman in charge of the Bulgarian exhibit in the Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts' building. He was a pleasant fellow, willing to be communicative, and from him I picked up a good deal of information about the little Balkan state which has occupied so much attention during the last fifteen years. To be brief I learned from him that wheat was the principal product of the farms; that their chief manufacturers were woolens and silks; that the schools are compulsory and that a child must attend at least six years; that the dwelling houses are not higher than two stories—"none of the 22 stories like you have in Chicago"; that they are following the European plan in regard to building cities and that the Government furnishes the plans for new building to be erected; that they have little or no literature; that they have three industrial schools in the country. "We are now," he said, "engaged in building railways; in fact we may be said to be in a railway age. Before we had railways we did not know what the people in the next village were doing. As a consequence there were no uniformity of custom or of dress. Now this is gradually being done away with and we're becoming an united and progressive people." And his dark eyes shone with pride.

* * *

Of course I went around to see the big Canadian cheese. I had heard about it before I left Toronto, and I knew of its presence before I saw it. When I got a view of the big iron sheathing in which it was encased I saw many people trying to ascend the half-dozen steps leading to the platform on which it was standing, but the proportion that traveled the whole distance and peered over the iron casing was small. All had handkerchiefs to their nose, and by the time I had drawn up along side I was glad to swathe my nasal organ in linen. Among those who were determined to see the cheese was a middle-aged man, who, by the aid of a pair of crutches, could hardly hobble along on the level, much more climb steps. "Smell or no smell, I'm going to see that cheese, Maria," he said as he began the ascent.

"O, he'll get up all right," said an old woman. "The smell will help him."

And when every body got through laughing a young urchin remarked: "You bet it will. There wus a feller here t'other day who tried to steal the cheese, and the smell was so strong that it held him fast until a cop arrived and arrested him."

"O, go along with you," said the old lady as she made a half playful whack at him with her gingham umbrella.

On my way from the Fair grounds to catch the train for Toronto I dropped into one of the many little stores where souvenir knick-knacks could be purchased. I went in more with the object of getting rid of the Yankee silver I had in my pocket. I made some purchases, and still having a dollar's worth left asked the man behind the counter if he would give me a bill for it, I remarking that I did not want to take silver back to Canada with me. "Parlez vous Francais," he eagerly asked, while his eyes sparkled with as much pleasure as if he had met with a long-lost friend. When I told him that we did not all speak French in Canada he looked surprised, and when I ventured the further information that in the part I came from nothing scarcely but English was spoken he looked sad as well as surprised.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"I AM glad to see THE GROCER has undertaken to point out the evil results of wholesalers furnishing extended prices to the daily papers," said a traveler from the north to me a few days ago. "Why, do you know any amount of injury is being done to the retail trade by those quotations that are every week appearing in the Mail. Up in my part of the country every old woman thereabout is coming into town with the Mail in her hand dictating to the country merchant the price at which he shall sell them this and that that commodity, claiming that they know what the goods cost him. One merchant in Barrie, complaining about the matter, asked me how the house would like some one to publish the prices it pays for the goods it sells wholesale so that the retailer might know. I think it is a big mistake to give the daily papers quotations which go into the hands of consumers." Continued the traveler, "The proper place for these quotations is the trade papers. I'm going to speak to the boss about it, and see if the Guild can't be persuaded to take the matter up and put a stop to it. Ah, here he comes now and I'll collar him straight.

I had a brief conversation with Mr. W. Boulter of the Bay of Quinte Canning Factories, when he was in Toronto last week. He told me that he was never sold so low before at this time of the year, while of tomatoes, all he had left was some 200 cases. The especial object of Mr. Boulter's visit was to advance arrangements for the new canning factory which he is to open in the old Jacques & Hay building on the Esplanade here next spring.

I fell in with a group of grocers the other night. They were talking about dried fruit. The subject was broached by a gentleman who was praising the virtues of a certain currant cleaner which he was handling.

"Well," remarked one as he tilted back his chair, "I've come to the conclusion that the best plan is to buy first-class fruit that will not require cleaning."

"So do I," said another, "and what is more I've come to the conclusion that people are more and more turning their attention to the better class of dried fruits of all kinds. I for one have quit handling off-stalk raisins."

All agreed that the public taste was drifting toward the better class of fruit, but all were not convinced that it had gone far enough in that direction to warrant them either getting currants that needed not to be cleaned or to warrant them discontinuing the sale of off-stalk Valencias.

"There is quite a scarcity of oats and potatoes around Bracebridge," said a traveler, who had recently returned from that part of the country. "Potatoes, I know, they are getting from the neighborhood of Barrie, but from where they are getting their oats I can't say."

EDWARD ADAMS & CO.'S GRIP MEN.

ONE of the best known wholesale grocery houses is the west is that of Edward Adams & Co. of London. And one of the chief factors in bringing about this desired condition has been that their representatives upon the road have been live, energetic men, whose first concern was the interests of the firm. The accompanying cut is taken from a photographic group of the firm's present staff of travelers, and a brighter and more intellectual, looking aggregation of "Knights of the Grip" no wholesale house in the country could probably produce.

S. Metcalfe. A. T. Cleghorn. H. V. Taylor. R. G. Lind. W. J. Boyd. R. G. Moore. Wm. Turnbull.

William Turnbull has been with Edward Adams & Co. for ten years. His trip lies along the M. C. R. and Air line, taking in such towns as St. Thomas, Essex, Amherstburg, Aylmer, Tilsonburg, Simcoe, etc., where he is well and favorably known by all his numerous customers. His home is in St. Thomas.

Hedley V. Taylor has been with the firm some fifteen years. His trip lies on the G. T. R. west of London, taking in Windsor, Chatham, Sarnia, Petrolia, etc., where he does a large business.

Robert G. B. Moore has been with the firm for about fifteen years. He goés on the L. H. & B., and W. G. & B., route north, taking in Wingham, Exeter, Kincardine, Goderich, Clinton, etc, Every grocer in these towns knows Bert Moore and all can rely upon him for good goods and right prices.

William J. Boyd has been about nine years with the firm of Edward Adams & Co. His route lies on the G. T. R. east and Wiarton branch. Woodstock, Ingersoll, Stratford, St. Mary's, Durham, Wiarton, etc., are towns visited by Mr. Boyd. He is well up in the grocery business, having been several years behind the counter, and consequently knows what is best suited for his customers, with whom he is a great favorite.

Robert Lind is also an old employee, having been eight years with Edward Adams & Co. He devotes his time to the city and towns in immediate vicinity. Bob is well up in the business and a hustler.

Andrew T. Cleghorn devotes his time to the city customers, by whom he is well and favorably known. He is a member of the firm of Edward Adams & Co.

Simon Metcalfe is known by the trade in Western Ontario as a thorough tea salesman, as he devotes most of his time and energy to pushing the Fan brand of teas. His judgment is taken as correct by the many customers he has on his list. He makes Galt his headquarters.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

SORTING trade keeps up fairly brisk, on account of the demand for Christmas novelties and the fact that the continued cold weather stimulates inquiry for heavy goods.

At the present time of writing many of the travelers are in off the road and the balance will report at headquarters in the course of a week or so, the most of them remaining in town until the turn of the year. In fact, some of the houses are already engaged in getting up their complete lines of samples for the spring placing trip. In this connection it may be noted that orders for several spring lines of which the travelers carried samples have been coming in pretty freely; lines of brown sheetings, bleached cottons, colored cottons, cottonades, ticks, etc., and print cloths, have also been in request.

Remittances have been fair under all circumstances since our last report, and the trade seems to be fairly well satisfied in this respect.

J. G. McKenzie & Co. report that the cold weather has had an appreciable effect on their remaining stock of overcoatings and rough goods. Since the first of the month the sorting trade in these was remarkably good with them.

Wm. Agnew & Co. thank the cold snap for clearing off several lines of ladies' cloakings in German beaver, etc., during the past fortnight.

Mr. Laurencelle, the manager of Perrin, Feres & Co.'s Canadian business, says that the firm's travelers are through with their placing trip on spring account, and that the aggregate is fully up to that of last year. They note also a disposition among buyers to go in for smaller orders of one particular line, but a greater assortment and variety of the firm's famous gloves.

Mr. F. Fisher, the manager for John Fisher & Sons' (Huddersfield) Canadian branch here, notes that his advices from the other side indicate more of a disposition on the part of English manufacturers of fabrics in Manchester, Huddersfield, etc., to cater to the Canadian trade. With the exception of the home market, the Canadian one has been of late the most profitable for them, as the Australian markets were dead and American buyers did not know what to do.

Thouret, Fitzgibbon & Co.'s travelers are winding up their placing trips for spring supplies of Jammet's French kid gloves, and state that the volume of orders on this account is fully up to if not in excess of last season's.

TORONTO MARKET.

Collections show a large improvement ever since the first of the month, showing that retailers are selling their goods, and general stocks in their hands have been lowered. The demand for holiday goods has kept up remarkably well, and the total volume of trade is satisfactory. The selling to city retailers has been much slower than usual, showing a somewhat unsatisfactory state of trade and heavy stocks. Travelers are returning for their Christmas vacation at home, and will take only spring goods when they go out again.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. report their 1894 novelties as having fairly caught buyers in every section of the country. Winsome is the word that best describes their beauty.

Alexander & Anderson announce that their travelers will be on their respective routes on or about the 1st of January with a magnificent collection of new spring and summer samples. Their dress goods as usual will be found splendidly attractive. Their collection embraces all the newest and most fashionable fabrics produced for the approaching season.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have already received for Xmas trade a large assortment of novelties in neckwear, and expect in a few days to reinforce their stock with another shipment of nobby and desirable goods. They have a shipment of two-inch Grandees, which are now stocked in all sizes. Their new collars are stamped "Wyld's Grandee" and "Wyld's Glendowe."

Alexander & Anderson have been busy for the past month or more getting up their new spring styles of jackets, capes, etc. This firm is showing some stylish creations in this line for which they are sure to find a large and ready sale. Samples of these goods will be in the hands of their special mantle travelers in a few days, and all merchants interested in this line ought to see their collection.

Printed Swiss spot muslins promise well for the coming season. Gordon, Mackay & Co. have made liberal preparations in anticipation. Besides white grounds, delicate shades of light blue, straw, salmon, nile and mauve are shown.

It gives retailers bad habits for the wholesaler to offer seasonable goods much under value, still Gordon, Mackay & Co. claim to be showing in their silk department black Peau de Soie, new, perfect goods, 25 per cent. under the prices of last season, and they also state they cannot repeat the goods at anything like the price.

For the holiday trade John Macdonald & Co. have some English smoking coats of the best quality; all kinds of fancy handkerchiefs, including cream brocades, some novelties in men's umbrellas, and several extra lines of fancy neckwear. Some unique shades in cashmere shawls, embroidered in silk, are shown for holiday buyers, while fancy frillings and ladies' fancy parasols have been re-stocked in anticipation of holiday demands. Their holiday stock of German fancy goods has been well picked up, and only a few clearances are left.

LONDON GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

At the regular meeting of the London Retail Grocers' Association, President W. H. Ferguson in the chair.

Connor Bros. and Chas. Stubbs were admitted to membership.

Under the head of report of committees it was announced that the committee on market by-law had carried out the resolution of last meeting and that some two or three hucksters had been convicted and fines imposed for violating the market by-law.

This question was asked: "Are the means adopted having the desired effect, viz., abating huckstering, or buying on the market for the purpose of selling on the market again?"

The committee said they had not sufficient time since last meeting to test the effect of the action taken, but no doubt a few fines will have the desired effect. There are now only two or three parties in the huckster business. The committee was empowered to continue with the means now being used until next meeting.

The question of the retail grocers of the city adopting a cash business was opened for discussion.

J. L. Fitzgerald said that the retail grocers have to enter into some definite understanding with the wholesale grocer as to when payment for goods bought are to be made—10 days, 15 days, 30 days, etc. While we sell those goods over the counter on indefinite periods of time, the accounts in many cases run on until it is the pleasure of the customer to pay. The retail grocers should have a definite understanding with their customers as to how long the account is to run, and if for one week or one month. The grocer should insist on the account being paid at that date. There would be very much less trouble if accounts were settled up in full on dates or time agreed on than on running accounts when a balance is carried over from time to time. He would like to see the grocers do a cash business or get as near to it as possible.

W. H. Ferguson said that, while in favor of cash business, he felt that there were difficulties to overeome. Many of the grocers of this city have been doing a credit business for many years and have customers who are perfectly good, and while they could pay cash if they choose to do so, they would feel it quite a hardship if informed by their grocer that they must pay cash; in fact in many cases no doubt they would feel quite insulted. Nothing would please him better than a strictly cash business, and he would like to hear the question fully discussed.

W. Sharpe thought the cash system might be adopted by degrees, one of which would be to try and induce the employers of labor to give their employees to understand that they were not in good standing with them while in debt. They could even go further and insist that they pay off a portion of their indebtedness each pay-day until clear of debt. Many an employee would not like to know that he was not in good standing with the firm employing him while in debt, and would make an effort to pay his account, and once out of debt, try to keep out.

It was remarked that some firms will not keep an employee if they know him to be in debt, unless he make an effort to pay it off.

The discussion drifted to the civil service employees' act, and it was moved and seconded that the secretary open up communication again with other retail grocers' associations requesting united action in bringing influence to bear with Parliament at the coming session to amend the act relating to the exemption of salaries of civil service employees from garnishee.

R. A. Jones thought that the Association might take up the question of trying to induce manufacturers and all employers of labor to pay wages on some other day than Saturday, for when paid on Saturday night it made it late before the employees could get to the grocery store and settle up their accounts and order groceries, thus making it very late before the grocer could get his store closed, sometimes encroaching very closely on Sunday morning.

Moved by R. A. Jones and seconded by J. L. Fitzgerald, that the question of cash business be taken up for discussion at next meeting. Carried.

Meeting closed at 5.10 p.m. Next meeting will be held on Wednesday, January 3rd, 1894.

MONTREAL WHOLESALERS.

The Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Guild at the annual meeting held last Friday in the Board of Trade rooms in that city, elected the following officers:—President, Geo. Childs, Sr. (re-elected); vice-president, C. P. Hebert (re-elected); treasurer, W. W. Lockerby; Directors, C. C. Chapot, H. H. F. Hughes and W. Kinlock; Committee of Arbitration, H. Laporte, G. E. Forbes, J. E Quintal, F. Birks and D. C. Brosseau.

DEATH OF JOHN GILLARD.

John Gillard, of the firm of W. H. Gillard & Co., wholesale grocers, Hamilton, died Tuesday evening. He had been in poor health for some time, and was unable to attend to business all last summer. Mr. Gillard was fifty-one years old, and was born in Devonshire, England. He came to Canada with his parents in 1856. Four years later he accepted a position with the dry goods firm of F. W. Gates & Co. On that firm retiring from business he bought the stock and formed a partnership with Mr. Crawford. Afterwards he was employed by James Turner & Co., of which firm his brother, Mr. W. H. Gillard, was a partner. The two brothers established the firm of W. H. Gillard & Co. The deceased was a general favorite with the trade and was highly esteemed. He leaves a widow and four children to whom and the firm THE GROCER extends its sympathy.

AFTER THE FAIR.

After the Fair is over,
After the Ferris Wheel,
After the ride on the camel,
After the Dahomy reel;
After the Plaisance music—
Picola, cornet and drum—
Didn't you feel like chewing Somerville's Pepsin Gum?

After the ride in the wheel chair,
After the gondolier,
After you paid for you dinner,
There wasn't much left for beer.
How did you spend the balance
It wasn't a very large sum,
'Twas enough to purchase an old friend,
Somerville's Pepsin Gum.

The streets of Cairo have vanished,
So has the wild east show,
So have the beauties of nations,
And the muscular dance, Oh! oh!
But a sound I cannot get rid of
Is the man calling, bum, bum, bum,
Candy direct from Turkey
As sweet as our "Mexican" gum.

Old Vienna is now in the background,
The Cliff Dwellers are out of sight,
The Esquimaux have snapped all the pennies,
Blarney Castle went up in a fight.
Glass-Blowers from old Bohemia,
Japs, Chinese, and Africans glum,
All return to my memory plainly
As I chew Somerville's Pepsin Gum.

The Trade Review, of Montreal, looks neat, healthy and vigorous in its enlarged form and new dress.

The J. & J. Taylor Safe Works, of Toronto, made a shipment of safes to Hong Kong last week.

H. J. Brady & Co. of the Pacific sauce and vinegar works, Vancouver, announce that Mr. F. Falconbridge no longer represents them on the mainland.

Two more firms have gone into the curing of finnan haddies at Digby within the past week, giving employment to about twenty men. This makes seven firms now engaged in this business at that place.—Chronicle, Halifax.

A new tea firm began business a few days ago in the new Sullivan block, Cordova street, under the style of the East India Tea Company, the Vancover branch being under the management of Messrs. Holmes and Lee. The former has had considerable experience in London, England, as a tea blender, and the latter is well-known in this city. This firm will only handle teas of the very best quality.—News, Vancouver.

TETLEY'S TEAS.

"SIX years ago Tetley's tea," said David Brown, who has represented this firm since it established its Montreal branch, "was hardly known on the American continent, but in six short years it has become a familiar household word and a familiar article in every store. As such many people would like to know who is 'Tetley.' Joseph Tetley & Co. is one of the oldest established and most enterprising firms engaged in the wholesale tea business in London, England. They have been well posted for years past by innumerable friends in the great cities of the United States and Canada as to the teas where were obtainable in both countries, and as to the extraordinary and scanty importations of fine teas. They know that during the last fifteen years millions of people have left Europe ardent lovers of tea, and before residing three years on this side of the Atlatic have discontinued drinking tea altogether, or have come to take two or three sips daily of a decoction which bears no resemblance to that most delicious beverage which they had once held in loving regard as the cup which cheers but not inebriates. Joseph Tetley & Co. yielded to the pressure of their friends and sent out an expert to the United States and Canada, who, after purchasing generally the teas on sale and testing them most carefully, made his report to the London house. This report so impressed Joseph Tetley & Co. that they at once determined to establish branches throughout both countries, and it is to their foresight and enterprise that the American and Canadian people have the opportunity of judging between the teas of China and Japan, as generally in consumption here and held in light esteem, and the teas of India and Ceylon, which are universally drank in Great Britain with the the keenest relish.

"Since Joseph Tetley & Co. opened their first American branch in New York they have established other branches in Chicago, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, and Victoria. Besides these their efforts have been extended to Cape Colony, Natal, New Zealand, Australia, Tasmania, Peru, Chili, Mexico, besides the principal European countries."

"The popularity of any article is a pretty fair test of its merits, and when the imports of this tea considerably exceeds those of the preceding year, 'tis for the tea dealers to ask themselves the cause, and to ascertain if it be not a better article than what they have been handling. One distinctive character of Tetley's tea is that you get 'tea,' not mere bulk of leaves. You also get strength combined with flavor, aroma, tonic qualities and a non-injurious beverage. In fact, you get tea, not a parody on it. That these teas may be invariably sold absolutely pure and of uniform quality, they are packed in leaden packages (which insures the tea keeping perfectly fresh until the lead is cut) of the weight of 1 lb. and ½ lb., bearing on the label the firm's name and also trade mark, an Elephant's Head. It must be understood that Joseph Tetley & Co. do not confine themselves exclusively to packet teas, but that their brands of Indian and Ceylon teas are standard, and can be recommended to the grocer as the best value at the respective prices."

THE GROCERS' CANDIDATE.

THE grocers of Toronto have long complained of the inattention of the City Council to matters concerning their welfare. They have at different times, by united action, compelled the civic fathers to remedy existing evils or enact new legislation; but the need of some one on the spot to watch that nothing inimical to their interest was done has long been felt. Now there is a possibility of the desideratum being secured in the person of A. R. Williamson, whose portrait is here reproduced. Mr. Williamson, who carries on a grocery store at Esther street and Grange avenue, has been a successful business man, just the kind of material in which the present City Council is so lamentably lacking. He is out for Ward 4, and his chances for election are said to be excellent. He has always been an active member of the Retail Grocers' Association, and will get the support of that body. All grocers having votes or influence in Ward 4 should exercise them in the interest of A. R. Williamson.

Several Brantford boys instituted a dime novel club, robbed Ryerson Bros.' wholesale grocery and were arrested. In their den were found full euchre decks, wax candles, toy pistols, cigarettes, clay pipes, tin cups, which were used for drinking ale occasionally, and a brass lock, stolen from Grace Church.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Dec. 21, 1893.

GROCERIES.

THE near approach of the holidays is reflected in trade, the usual Christmas quietness now beginning to assert itself. Business however, is still fair for the season, and travelers report last week a rather busy one with them. This week they are still sending in fair sorting-up orders, showing that the buying has been of a hand to mouth character. One pleasing feature about the situation is the unanimity of the reports regarding payments all conceding that, while there is still room for improvement, they are becoming more satisfactory. Dried fruits are still occupying the most attention, although the demand for them is pretty well supplied. Fine selected Valencia raisins and Malaga fruit are scarce, while the market is almost bare of Eleme figs. Canned goods are occupying but scant attention, while in sugars about the only thing that is moving is granulated, and that not in great quantities. An improved demand has sprung up for fancy Japan rice, and spices are still going out quickly for the holiday trade.

CANNED GOODS.

There has been no material change in this line. Tomatoes, peas, and corn are moving slowly at the unchanged price of 80 to 85c. No offers have been heard from packers. In the salmon line the retail trade is, of course, supplied, and business in this particular line is consequently quiet. Ruling prices are still $1.25 to $1.35 for good red salmon in tall tins, $1.50 in flats; Cohoes, $1 05 to $1.10. Lobsters of the better brands are in fair sorting up demand, at $1.85 to $2.10 for talls and $2.40 to $2.50 for flats. Poor brands of lobster are not wanted at any price. There is a fair demand for canned fruits at these prices:—Peaches, $3 to $3.25 for 3's, $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's; raspberries and strawberries, $2 to $2.10.

COFFEES.

The local market is still very bare of green Rio coffee; in fact, only one house on the street has any at all, and its stock is rapidly diminishing. Advices received by Warren Bros. & Boomer from Rio a few days ago state that no more orders will be received there at present owing to existing hostilities. We quote green, in bags, as follows:—Rio, 22 to 23c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 22 to 23c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 27 to 28c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

NUTS.

The movement in this line is still free. Stocks are low and prices firm in the most seasonable kinds. We quote:—Brazil nuts 13 to 15c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 28 to 32c. a pound; Tarragona almonds, 12½ to 14c.; peanuts, 11 to 12c. for roasted and 8 to 10c. for green; cocoa nuts, $4.50 to $5 per sack; Grenoble walnuts, 12½ to 15c.; Marbot walnuts 12 to 13c.; Bordeaux walnuts 11½ to 12½c.; filberts, 9¾ to 10¼c.; pecans 13½ to 15c.; chestnuts, $4 per bushel; hickory, $2.

RICE.

A good demand is reported for fancy Japan rice at about 5¾ to 6¼c. In other kinds trade is dull. We quote: Ordinary 3⅝ to 3¾c., Montreal Japan 5 to 5¼c., imported Japan at 5¾ to 6¼c.

SPICES.

A good holiday trade is reported in all lines at unchanged prices. We quote: Pure black pepper at 13 to 15c.; pure white at 20 to 28c.; pure Jamaica ginger, 25 to 27c.; cloves, 14 to 25c.; pure mixed spice, 30 to 35c.

SUGAR.

The local market remains much as before. A fair number of orders of small lots of granulated are being received, but in yellows the market is dull. Low grade yellows seem to be a little scarce at the moment on spot. As to price, 4⅝c. is the ruling figure for granulated, although ⅛c. higher than that is occasionally obtained; 3½ to 4⅛c. is the ordinary range for yellows.

Willett & Gray, in their Weekly Statistical, say: Raws—A further pressure to sell Java sugars caused a decline of ⅛c. for all grades of raw sugar, and some sales of new crop Cuba Centrifugals for shipment were included at the decline, while some of the remaining old crop were disposed of at ⅛c. per lb. below new crop sugars on account of deterioration of quality and test. It is possible that under the necessity of planters to dispose of a certain part of the early grinding of the crop that 2¾c. may be made possible, but that price would seem to be low enough even under large prospects. The reports from Cuba indicate a large crop of 1,000,000 tons and a scarcity of money in the island with which to handle it, which may lead to early and free selling. 53,000 tons of the old crop are still on hand against 21,500 tons at this time last year, so that the amount of sugar available for export from Cuba in 1894 appears to promise a full million of tons against about 740,000 tons actual exports in 1893, a very important increase of near by supplies for United States. REFINED.—There has been no change during the week. The trade is moderate only and is on the hand to mouth basis. Foreign granulated can be laid down at 3.40c. in bond, which with 25c. duty proposed by the Wilson Bill would be 3 65c. duty paid.

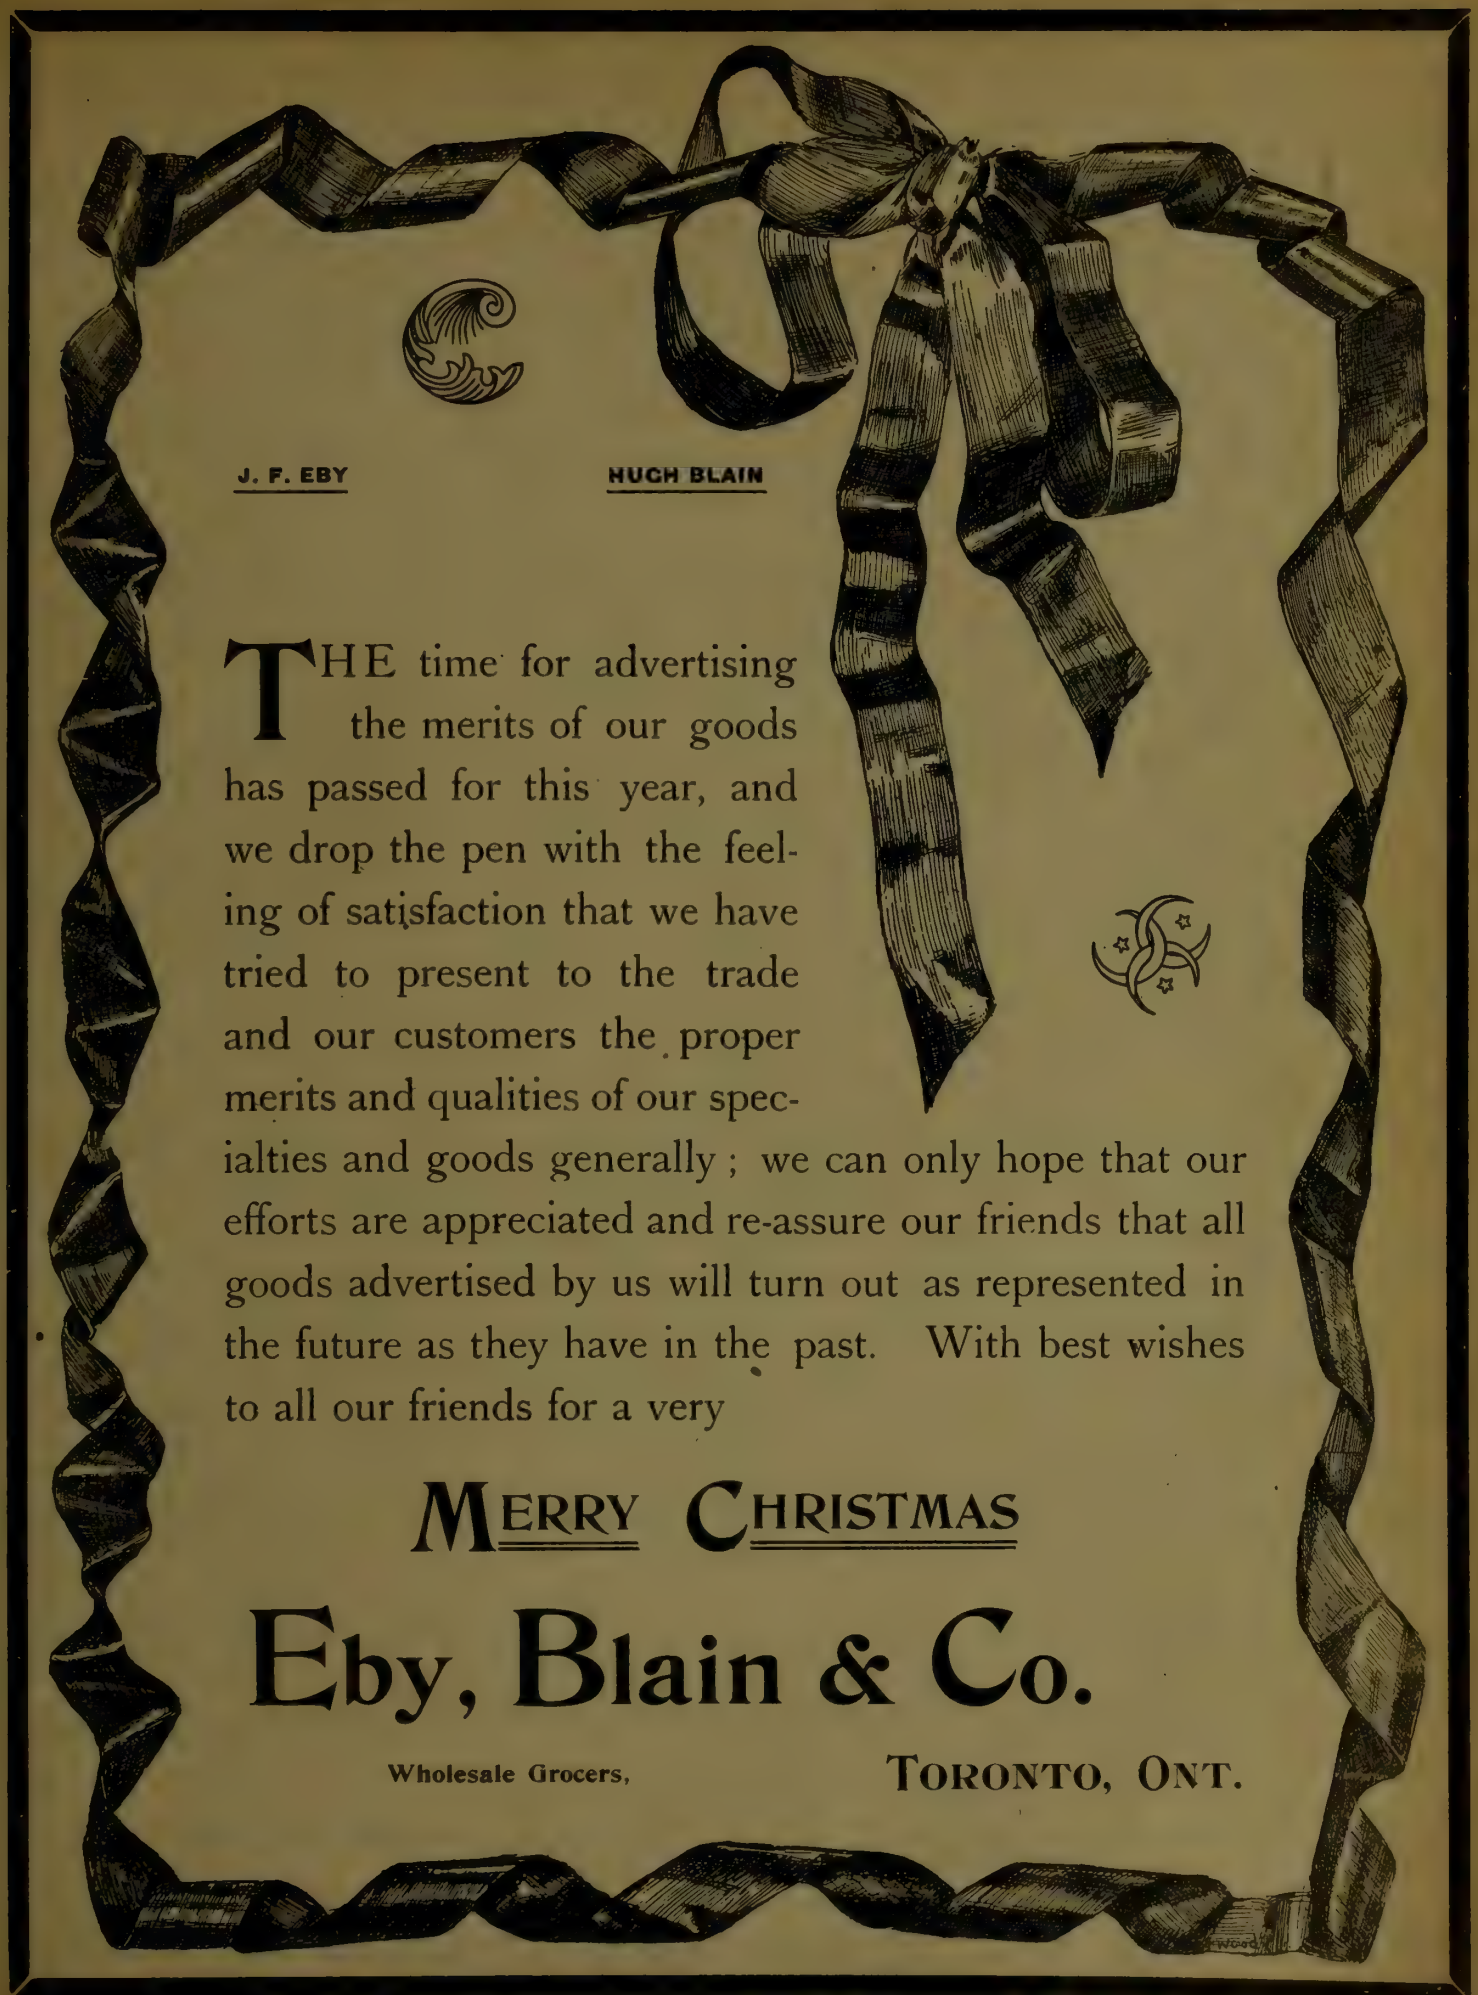
SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is a pretty active demand for both syrups and molasses at unchanged prices. For the better class of syrups selling 2 to 3¼. is being obtained and low grade sells down to 1¾c. The idea as to price for molasses is 30 to 35c. per gallon in barrels and 32½ to 37 in half barrels.

TEAS.

The seasonable quietude in this line seems to be getting a little more pronounced. Medium grade Japans are reported to be occupying the most attention at the moment. Japans are quoted ordinarily at from 14 to 38c.; Indians, Assams and Ceylons at 18 to 45c., and Young Hysons at 35 to 40c. Brokers report a little movement in low-priced Assams and Ceylons and in high-priced fine Ceylons. Advices from England report Assams and Ceylons firm there.

DRIED FRUIT.



The season's trade in this line shows signs of nearing its close. The holiday trade is pretty well supplied in Valencia raisins, although a fair business is still doing. Stocks are comparatively light, while selected fruit is about cleaned out. The idea as to price is unchanged, and we quote: Off-stalk, 4½ to 4¾c.; fine off-stalk, 5 to 5½c.; selected, 6 to 6½c.; layers, selected, 6¼c. Sultana raisins are in light request only. The quality of this fruit was never better; 5½ to 6½c. is the idea as to price. Malaga raisins are not much enquired after, and prices are unchanged. London layers, $2.25; connoisseur clusters, $3; dessert clusters, $3.75 to $4; quarter flats Dehesas, $1.50. Demand for Bosnia prunes is active, and they are so cheap and showing such good value that the French article is receiving, comparatively speaking, but little attention. Bosnia's are quoted ordinarily at 5½ to 7c. in cases, according to quality; French are quoted at 4 to 4½c. in boxes. Demand for currants is pretty well supplied, but for the season keep up well. Common currants are selling at 3¾ to 4c. for provincials in brls. and 4½c. in half brls.; Filiatras, 4¾ to 5c. in brls., 4⅞ to 5¼c. in half brls.; Patras, 5¾ to 6c. for brls., 5⅞ to 6¼c. in half brls., 5 to 6½c. in cases; Vostizzas, 7 to 8½c. in cases, 7¼ to 8¾c. in half cases; Panaritt 9 to 10c. Eleme figs are a scarce article on this market. The second shipment for the Christmas trade has not yet arrived, nor is it now likely to be here in time to be of much use for that purpose. The idea as to price is 9½ to 10c. for 14-oz. and $1 to $1.10 per 10-lb. box. Natural figs are quoted at 6½c. up. Dates are also pretty well cleaned out. Further shipments are on the way but they are not expected to be in time for the Christmas trade; 5½ to 6c. is the idea as to price.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

There is a good deal of poor stuff hanging around, which makes the market appear worse than it really is. Demand is keen for the good article, but the views of holders in the country are above those of the jobbers; they want as high as 20c., which is 1 to 2c. more than the latter are willing to pay, and as large rolls are coming in freely jobbers are turning their attention to them. Creamery butter is quiet and unchanged, with jobbers paying 23 to 24c. for tubs. We quote: Dairy—Choice tubs, 20 to 22c.; large rolls, 19 to 20c.; pound rolls, 22 to 25c. Creamery—Tubs, 25 to 26c., and pound prints sell at the same price.

Cheese shows some improvement, both in regard to price and demand. One reason advanced why the cheese market has been dull on spot of late is that large quantities of late make have been held at the factories, and buyers and sellers could not get together. Lately the improvement in the English market has enabled buyers and sellers to come together again, and it is now expected that all the late make of cheese will be cleaned out at 11⅛ to 11¼c. for export purposes. Ruling prices on the Toronto market are 11 to 11½c. for July and August make and 11½ to 12c. for September and and October kinds.

MARKETS—Continued

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade continues seasonably brisk. The feature of the market is the scarcity and consequent firmness of lemons. Advices from New York state that lemons are scarcer there than they have been for twenty-five years. Demand for them on the local market is active. Oranges are going out freely at unchanged prices, and a big demand is reported for Malaga grapes. Other lines remain as before. California pears are on the market, and they are selling at $2 50 to $3. We quote: Oranges—Floridas, $2.50 to $3. Mandarines and Tangarines, $2 to $2.25 half box. Lemons, Messinas, $4.75 to $5 for 300's, $4.25 to $4.75 for 360's; Floridas, $4 to $4.50; bananas, $1.25 to $2; California pears, $2.50 to $3 per box; Catawba grapes, 3½ to 4c. per lb.; Malaga grapes, $4.50 to $6 per keg. Cranberries, Cape Cod, $7 per bbl.; boxes, $2.25 to $2 50; New Jersey, $7 per bbl.; Canadian, $5 to $6 per barrel; boxes, $2 to $2.15. Apples, $2.50 to $3.50 per bbl. California dried fruit—Apricots, 17½c. per lb.; peaches, 14c. per lb.; nectarines, 15c.

There was a good attendance at Dawson & Co.'s sale Tuesday. Two carloads of oranges were sold at an average price of $2 37 per box. One hundred kegs of grapes averaged $4.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The market here is a little firmer on dressed hogs on account of a demand from Montreal and the fact that the local butchers have been better buyers. Street hogs sell at $6.25 to $6.50, and for rail lots delivered here $6 35 is the idea. Small hogs are fetching the bust price. The feeling in lard is a little firmer, and a number of small lots are going out. There is scarcely any enquiry for provisions, and the little that is moving is principally long clear.

BACON—Long clear, 9¼ to 9½c.; smoked backs, 11 to 11½c.; bellies, 12½ to 13c.; rolls, 9¾ to 10c.

HAMS—Unchanged, at 12 to 12½c. for smoked, and at 11c. for pickled.

LARD—Pure Canadian 11¼c. in tubs, 11¼c. in pails and 10 to 10¼c. in tierces. Compound 8½ to 8¾c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $17 to $17.50, Canadian short cut $18 to $18.50, shoulder mess $16.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores, 5c., hindquarters 6½ to 8c., mutton 5 to 6c., lamb, 6 to 8c., veal 7½ to 9c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Dull and unchanged. Jobbers are getting $1.35 to $1.40 for sacks and barrels and $1.50 for single bushels of choice hand-picked.

DRIED APPLES—Prices firm and market quiet. As high as 6c. has been asked during the week for carload lots, but the price was entertained, buyers' views being 5c. here. The ruling price to retailers is 5¾c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Ideas of holders seem to be getting larger. They have been asking 11c. during the week, but this is something like 1¼c. above the views of jobbers, delivered here. Jobbers are quoting 10¼ to 10½c.

EGGS—Demand fair only with prices steady at 17 to 18c. for cold storage, 22 to 25c. for new laid and 15 to 16c. for limed.

POULTRY—Receipts of poultry have been light during the past week or ten days, holders evidently deferring shipping till the latter part of the week, Prices are a little higher. We quote: Turkeys, 9 to 10c. per lb.; geese, 6 to 7c.; chickens, 30 to 45c. per pair; ducks, 40 to 65c. per pair.

POTATOES—Market steady and demand fair. Carlots are offered on track at 55c. with 50c. bid; out of store 55 to 60c. is quoted. Farmers' loads are selling at 55c.

HONEY—There is nothing doing and prices are unchanged, at 8 to 9c. for extracted white clover in 10-lb. tins and upwards, and 14 to 15c. for sections.

HOPS—Business continues quiet and prices steady. Sales of round lots of '93's are reported at 18 to 20c., and of '92's at 11 to 12½c.

ONIONS—Quiet and unchanged, at 75 to 85c. per crate for Spanish and $1 per bag for Canadian.

SEEDS.

About the only thing to note specially is an easier feeling in alsike. Although as yet no actual change has taken place, there is no saying what day a drop may be announced. The cause is a falling off in the demand. There is very little red clover moving yet, higher prices being anticipated. There has been a little movement in timothy at unchanged prices. We quote: Alsike, $6 50 to $7 for prime to choice, and $7.20 to $7.30 for extra choice to fancy; red clover, $5.50 to $5.75 ordinarily, and $5 90 to $6 for choice to fancy; timothy, $1 to $1.25 for inferior and $1.50 to $1.60 for prime, while choice to fancy bring 15 to 20c. more.

SALT.

Trade is good and jobbing lots are moving quite freely. Prices are unchanged. We quote: Coarse sacks, 60c.; fine sacks, common, 70c.; dairy, in barrels, $1.25; coarse barrel salt, 95c.; American rock, $10.

FISH.

Trade is running fairly well, and the supply is equal to the demand. Fresh sea herrings have been circulating a little through the market during the present week at $2 per hundred; smelts selling at 7½c. per lb.; haddies are a little scarce at 7½c.; oysters in bulk are $1.10, standards, $1,65 for selects. We quote: Fresh sea salmon, 17 to 19c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $4.50 per barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 13 to 15c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2.50 per hundred and 4c. per lb.; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7½c.; oysters in bulk, $1.20 to $1.25 for standard and $1.75 selected; kippered cisco, 2½ to 4c. each; ciscoes, $1.22 per 100; salt mackerel in bulk, 10c. per lb.; pike, 6 to 6½c. per lb.; black bass, 10c. per lb.; haddock and cod, 5½c per lb; steak cod, 7 to 8c.; chicken halibut, 10 to 12c.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW

HIDES—Are improving a little; tomatoes are beginning to inquire quite freely, and it is anticipated among dealers that a change for the better will take place after the holidays. Prices remain unchanged at last week's quotations, namely, 3¾c. for No. 1, and 3c. for No. 2.

SKINS—Are unchanged, with no prospects of an advance. Country dealers are still holding back, awaiting an advance in prices, but until they allow their stock to circulate through the market, they cannot expect any special inducements offered by wholesale dealers.

WOOL—Remains much the same as last report, a little slow. Some choice lots have been moving at 20½c. These are exceptional cases though, and have occurred but rarely, the general run being from 17 to 20c. for pulled and fine combing.

TALLOW—Continues in good demand and dealers are paying a fair price for good quality. Culled tallow, 4½c.; rough, 2c.; select quality, 5 to 5¼c.

tising a honey that the trade should inspect. It is alsike clover, in 60 and 65-pound cans, and sells at 6½c. per pound.

Business is so brisk with Eby, Blain & Co. that their employees are compelled to work till six o'clock Saturdays instead of one o'clock as formerly.

James Turner & Co. have enjoyed a fine Christmas trade. They never had a better stock to do the same with. They sold, they say, at right prices.

Eby, Blain & Co. have this week received shipments of choicest Vostizza and finest Patras currants, both in cases; also finest Vourla Sultana raisins, extra fine.

C. R. Somerville's advertisements on inside of cover and page 49 are worthy of careful perusal. He is a persistent advertiser, and that means a successful one.

W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, report Christmas business brisk, and state that their fruit trade this season has been the most successful they ever experienced.

R. H. Stewart, grocer, Gerrard and Sackville streets, has further added to the improvements noted a few weeks ago, by putting a plate glass window in his store.

Red-label Hillwattee tea is put up in 50-lb. cases, pounds, halves, pounds and halves, or pounds, halves and quarters. Lucas, Steele & Bristol report a steady trade for this brand.

James Turner & Co. have a small lot of choice late fall caught salmon trout, sent them from Manitoulin. If you want a few nice kegs order quickly. Remember these are not summer catch.

W. H. Gillard & Co. are now in receipt of a consignment of the much talked of Panarita currants. They report that the second shipment is fully up to expectations and by long odds the finest quality of currants they have ever seen.

Toronto butchers are much interested at present in a new class of beef that is being placed on the market here for the holiday trade. It is known as ranch beef—that is from cattle raised on the Northwest ranches. It is not of course the first time ranch beef has been placed on this market, but the great difference between that which has been sold on this market in the past and that which is now being shown for the Christmas trade is that while the former was coarse and from common cattle, the latter is extra fine in the grain and from thoroughbred cattle. George Griffin, the butcher at Wilton avenue and Parliament street, has twelve of these cattle hung up in his shop, and they are attracting a good deal of attention. The color of the meat is richer than one usually sees in a butcher's shop, while another peculiarity is the shortness of the neck and shanks, thus reducing to a minimum what is known as waste. The Northwest is evidently able to raise superior beef as well as superior wheat.

T. Kinnear & Co.: We have a lot of currants, good sample, which we are offering the trade at low prices.

Lucas, Steel & Bristol: L. P. & Co. blend is as excellent coffee, and we ask the trade to try a sample tin of it. A trial will convince the buyer of its very excellent quality.

W. H. Gillard & Co.: Pettijohn's Breakfast Food is steadily winning friends throughout the country. A carload which we received not long ago is now almost exhausted. The delicate, invigorating qualities of this cereal recommend it to all requiring a pleasant as well as an appetizing food.

James Turner & Co.: Make up your mind for the coming year for a half-dollar black tea to sell only Ram Lal's. By so doing you will treble your tea trade, bowling out unscrupulous opposition and gift tea enterprises. Those that have done so during '93 are more than gratified with the result.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Dec. 21, 1893.

GROCERIES.

THE same features noted last week characterize the grocery market here this week. All the houses report being busy on goods usually in demand at Christmas time, the chief call being naturally for dried fruit, spices, etc. The orders are mainly small ones, but they are coming in often, so that the aggregate movement is considerable. There is no change of importance to note in values this week, which rule steady in all the leading lines. A fair demand has been noted for sugar at last week's prices, and the same can be said of syrups and molasses, while dried fruit, spice and several lines of canned goods have furnished general activity in a jobbing way. MONTREAL Markets continued has ruled on the quiet side, and otherwise there are no features to note. There are complaints regarding payments from many of the houses, some attributing it to the condition of the roads in the country, which in many sections are said to be very bad. With regard to the cutting to which reference has been made before in these columns, it is hardly as bad as it was, the change being attributed to the fact that the offenders are getting tired Instances of cut rates have been cited in the case of some lines of canned goods, however, and also in fruit and sugar, but they are isolated for as a rule prices are steady as mentioned above.

DRIED FRUIT.

Though compiaints are still being made with regard to low offers on Valencia raisins, the market here is a more satisfactory one to report than the one we had to note a week ago. This is due to the Christmas demand which set in in earnest last week and has kept up ever since. No large orders are spoken of, but they are frequent, and the aggregate movement is considerable. For anything like prime fruit the general run of jobbers maintain firm prices, those noted last week ruling while round lots of off-stalk have changed hands on a fairly steady basis, viz., 4¼ to 5c. according to grade. A line of layers has been offered here from New York, but the quality is not tempting. It is a line of fruit that has been held in bond there for some time. A scarcity of selected off-stalk is still a feature of the market. In a jobbing way we quote as before : Ordinary Valencia off-stalk, 4½ to 5c. according to brand ; fine, 5¼c.; selected, very scarce at 6c., and layers at 6 to 6½c. according to quality. The currant market maintains its steady feeling, and some considerable business in round lots both on city and outside account has transpired since our last on the basis of 3¼ to 3⅜c. for common and 3½ to 3¾c. for good Provincial in barrels and 4 to 4¼c. for Filiatras in cases. We quote jobbing prices ; Provincials at 3⅞ to 4 ¼c.; Filiatras, 4¼ to 5c., and Vostizzas 6 to 7½c., according to quality. One of the features of the week has been the rapid clearance of the new receipts of prunes which arrived during the week, which were all taken from first hands at about 5½c. There are now no Bosnia prunes to be had on the market at present. Figs rule steady and fairly active at former prices, viz., 11 to 12c for fancy, 8 to 10c for ordinary to good and 4¾ to 5c for mat figs. New dates have been selling at 5 to 5¼c.

NUTS.

Nuts have continued active, as noted last week, but there are few new features to note. Further receipts have arrived, and the market has been fairly well supplied with new stock. We quote : — Grenoble walnuts, 11 to 13c. ; pecans, 8½ to 12c.; peanuts, 8 to 11c. per lb., and cocoanuts, $3.75 to $4 per 100; Terragona almonds, 11½ to 12c.; and shelled almonds 23 to 45c.; filberts, 9½ to 10c.; walnuts, 12 to 13c.

SUGARS.

The week has been a quiet one in sugar in a strictly wholesale sense. Wholesale grocers, however, have had a rather good demand in a small way on account of Christmas wants, but as a rule the disposition of buyers of this staple is to take only what they actually want. It is said that a wholesale house is selling granulated at 4⅜c., or 1-16c. under the cost price, but the trade as a whole are not doing so. English advices up to the time of writing have been easy on raw sugar, but local refiners have not been operating much as yet in the matter of next season's supplies. We quote prices for refined sugar from the refineries here as follows :—Grhnulated, 4 7-16c.; yellows, 3¼ to 4⅛c. Jobbing prices are, in most cases, at an advance of 1-16 to ¼c. on these.

MOLASSES.

Barbadoes stock is steady and quiet, a round lot changing hands at 30½c. Demand on the whole is slack, however. We quote the jobbing range as before, 33 to 34c.

SYRUPS.

There has been very little change in syrups, prices ruling steady and unchanged. Canadian in the wood has sold at 1⅝ to 2c. per lb., and American 22c. per gallon from Western buyers.

TEA.

More enquiry has been noted for tea during the week, but it is mainly enquiry and nothing more, the volume of business being small as before. Round lots of Japans have changed hands at 11 to 18½c. according to quality. We quote : Japans, common, 12 to 13c.; medium, 15 to 17c.; fine, 18 to 21c., and finest 23 to 32c.

In blacks a line of a few hundred packages changed hands at 12c., and another lot at the same figure.

COFFEES.

The coffee market is steady, but business is of moderate proportions. We quote: Jamaica, 16 to 18c.; Maracaibo, 19½ to 21c.; Porto Cobello, 19 to 20c.; Rio, 17½ to 19c.; Java, 24 to 30c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

SPICES.

There has been a good business doing in spices, some round lots of pimento and nutmegs moving. We quote : Jamaica ginger, 16 to 18c. for common, and 18 to 20c. for finer qualities; black pepper, 6 to 7c.; pimento, 6 to 7c.; and nutmegs, 65 to 70c. to $1.

RICE.

There is only a small jobbing movement in rice, dealers having stocked up pretty well, and prices are unchanged. We quote: Standard Japan, $3.75 to $4 ; "B," $3.50 ; Crystal, $4.25 to $4.50; Patna, $4.25 to $5.50; Carolina, $6.50 to $7.

CANNED GOODS.

There is no very new feature to report in canned goods, but a fair business has been done, some good sized lots of canned fruit and vegetables moving while mackerel and salmon have also received quite a lot of attention. We quote : Tomatoes, 75 to 80c., corn 75 to 80c., peas 90 to 95c , strawberries $2.75 per doz , raspberries $1.80, salmon $1.25 to $1.27½ for best brands and $1.05 to $1.10 for cohoes, lobsters $1.60 to $1.75, mackerel $1 to $1.05.

GREEN FRUIT.

The apple market is firm under very light stocks, while demand is good at $3.75 to $4.10 per barrel for round lots of No. 1, and $2.50 to $3 per barrel for round lots of No. 2. Grapes are in good demand, Malaga selling freely at $3.75 to $5 per barrel, some fancy fetching $5.50. Florida oranges run from $2 to $3 per box. Lemons are scarce, with demand good. As a consequence prices are very firm at $3.50 to $5 per box.

FISH.

A good steady business is being done in fish. Receipts are fairly liberal, but the demand is good, and all arrivals of fresh and smoked stock are moving out freely at full figures. Pickled fish also show a satisfactory activity, although supplies are rather heavy. Round lots of shore herring have changed hands at $4.35 to $4 50, and genuine Labradors at $5 to $5.25. We quote: No. 1 C. B. herring, $5.50; No. 1 Newfoundland do., $5 to $6; No. 1 green cod, $4.75 to $5; Labrador salmon, $14 to $15 per bbl. ; B. C. do., $12 to $12.50 ; No. 2 mackerel, $12; finnan haddies, 7 to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1 to $1.75 per box; haddock, 4 to 4½c. ; cod, 4 to 4½c. ; boneless cod, 6½ to 7c.; hand picked malpecque oysters, $5 to $6.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

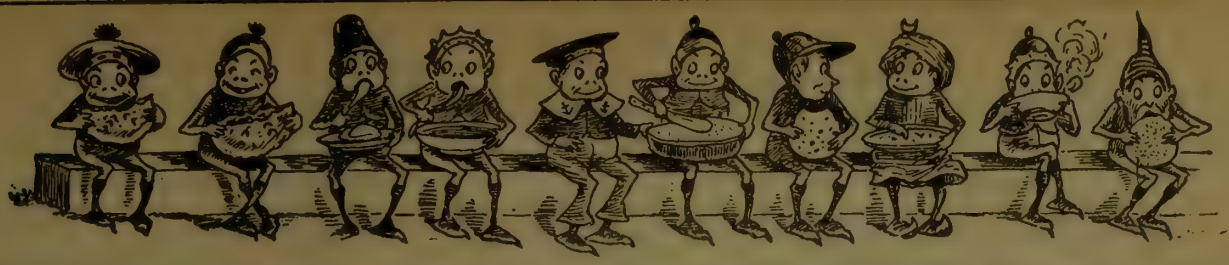
The egg market is quiet. Fresh boiling stock is scarce, all offerings moving out freely at 20 to 22c., while candled are making 17 to 18c. Montreal limed are in good demand at 17 to 18c., and Western ditto 16 to 17c. Receipts of turkeys have been heavy, but owing to a good demand all fine, unfrozen, dry picked stock met a ready sale at 10 to 10½c. Good frozen stock sold well at 9 to 10c. and scalded at 9c. Choice well dressed chickens have been in good demand at 8c. and scalded 5 to 6c. A good demand has been noted for ducks at 9 to 9½c. Geese are quiet at 5 to 6c. Honey is steady, white clover-comb selling at 12 to 13½c., and dark buckwheat 10 to 12c., as to quality. Extracted is steady, at 7 to 8½c. for new and 5 to 6c. for old. Maple syrup is steady and unchanged, 50 to 65c. in the cans and 4 to 5c. per lb. in the wood, as to quality. Maple sugar ranges from 6 to 7c. Hops rule quiet and steady, at 17 to 21c., according to quality, and beans are steady, $1.35 to $1.50 for hand-picked choice, and ordinary $1 to $1.25.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market does not show much change. Pork is moving slowly at steady prices, and lard and smoked meats are quiet. We quote : — Canadian short cut, per brl., $17.25 to $18.25; mess pork, western, new, per brl., $17.50 to $18 ; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11¼ to 12c¼.; bacon, per lb., 11½ to 12½c. ; lard, com. refined, per lb. 8¼ to 8½c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The cheese market does not show any special feature at the moment, business ruling quiet. For what little trade there is doing about 11c. to 11¼c. is the idea on fall makes, while we hear of transactions in some moderate sized lots of earlier makes at 10¾ to 10⅞c.



The butter market is steady in a jobbing way. The stocks are small, business passing in creamery at 23¼c. for November make rather off flavor. September and October goods would probably fetch more money. There is little or no dairy stock to be had. A buyer tried to pick up a small lot of Townships the other day, but could not succeed. What is offering of this grade sells at 21 to 21½c. Kamouraska changed hands to-day at 20½c. We quote :—Finest fall creamery, 23 to 23½c.; Finest Townships dairy, 21 to 22c.; Finest Western dairy, 19½ to 20c. ; Kamouraska, 19½ to 20.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

A round lot of common black teas were sold here on English account at 6½d. f.o. b. London.

In consequence of strong cables from Great Britain and very light supplies here,

FLOUR AND FEED.

Notwithstanding the depression in trade, the streets and stores will be full of Christmas buyers. And the grocer, dry goods, and fancy dealer will make it as attractive as possible for the undecided purchaser to purchase at their store by making pretty a display of goods in their window as they possibly can. Flour and feed merchants should give more attention to this medium of advertising their wares, and although they may not have a large variety with which to dress a window, still a good deal may be accomplished by a little honest work. And what more sensible article for a Christmas present than a bag of good flour. It would be far more acceptible to hundreds of families than many the fancy presents going, which are neither preety to look at nor good to eat.

In Chicago 117,000 men out of work, out of money, out of food. In Chicago elevators there are twenty-one millions of bushels of wheat. Less than half a million bushels made into flour would supply all those men with bread till the flowers of May were in bloom. Half a million bushels at current values is about three hundred thousand dollars. A resident of Chicago was said to have paid a third of the sum for one diamond during the Fair. Wealth and want were surely no more closely allied at any time during the world's history than they are this day in the city that has been more talked of than any other on the earth's surface, during the year that is closing.

If the 117,000 men in Chicago and the thousands in other cities of the United States who are in the same deplorable condition were at work, and eating as all men should be able to eat, the surplus of wheat that is such a depression to the world's markets—and such a rebuke to the wealth that owns it in the midst of hunger—would grow less instead of still increasing, as it continues to do. It would pay the owners of wheat to put it on a hard business foundation—to distribute their surplus, enough to fill the stomachs that will be not full at the "glad Christmas time.

THE MARKETS

TORONTO.

The increase in the visible supply—about a million and a half bushels—in the United States and Canada, and which was not expected, has settled on the markets like a wet blanket, and though prices are no lower—because already so low—no advance can be expected. At this season orders at the mills are scarce under ordinary circumstances, as so many dealers are clearing out for their annual stock taking. Bran and shorts are firm and higher, city mills' prices being $14 to $15.

FLOUR—Manitoba patents, $3.70 to $3.80; strong bakers', $3.50; white wheat patents, $3 25 to $3.40 ; straight roller, $2.80 to $2.95; Ontario family, $2.85 to $3.10 ; low grades, $2 10 to $2.25. These prices are in large lots delivered here to the trade.

MEAL—Rolled oats, $3.80 to $3.85; granulated and standard oatmeal, $3.80 ; cornmeal, common, $3.15; gold dust, $3.40.

FEED—Bran still continues in good demand with a further advance this week, city mills now selling at $14 to $15 per ton; delivered (on track) $12.50 per ton. Shorts steady, at $14 in ton lots ; delivered on track, $13.75. In oats the feeling has been easy all week, although at the close prices are stiffening up; 32½c. per bus. on track is about value. Market prices are 32½c. to 33½c. per bus.; feed corn, 53c. per bus.

HAY—Prices are steady. Pressed on track worth $9 50 to $9.75. Farmers' loads range from $7 to $9, according to quality.

STRAW—The demand is limited, with prices steady. Pressed on track, $5.50 to $6.00 per ton. Market prices are $7 to $8 for sheaf, with loose nominal at $4 per ton.

PEAS—Steady, with sales on the market at from 56 to 57c.

MONTREAL.

The flour market is dull, there being very little doing at the moment, except in strongs, which are now freely offered at $3.50. Winter wheat, $3 60 to $3 80 ; Manitoba patents, best brands, $3.70 to $3.80; straight rollers, $3 to $3.10; extra, $2.90 to $3; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.40 to $3.60; Manitoba strong bakers', best brands, $3.50 to $3.55.

Bran is very scarce. The demand for both bran and shorts exceeds the supply, and prices are very firm. Bran, $15.50 to $16.50; shorts, $16 to $18 ; Mouille, $22.

The oatmeal market is dull and unchanged The movement is of a purely local character. Standard bags $1.90 to $2 ; do. brls., $3.80 to $4.10 ; granulated, bags, $2 to $2.05 ; do., brls., $4.20 to $4.30 ; rolled oats, bags, $2 ; do., brls., $4.20 to $4.25.

The stock of flour in store in Montreal at the close of last week was 48,243 brls. against 43,903 brls. a week ago, and 36,519 brls. a year ago, and the stock of oatmeal, 294 brls. against 319 for a week ago and 129 for a year ago.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

The market is very quiet particularly in flour, a change in freight of 5c. decline where an advance was asked for and which caused a number to order futures, makes a loss in value to amount of decline. Prices at the mills also appear easier. There is, however, an advance in Manitoba wheat which is the one hopeful feature, and it is hoped that the near future will see an advance in flour. Bran is offering about 10c. below last week from the west. Oatmeal is firm. Manitoba flour, $4.50 to $4.60; high-grade Ontario, $3.70 to $3.85 ; medium, $3.50 to $3.60 ; oatmeal, $4.30 to $4 40 ; cornmeal, $2.65 to $2.75; oats on track, Ontario, 41 to 42c.; P. E. I., 38 to 40c ; N.B., 36 to 37c ; beans, hand-picked, $1.35 to $1.40; prime, $1.25 to $1.30 ; split peas, $3.75 to $4 ; barley, $3.75 to $3.85 ; hay, on track, $13 to $13.50, in small lots $14 to $15 ; oats, 38 to 45c.

values on apples rate very firm. Straight car lots brought at auction on Monday $4.10 the barrel.

Wholesalers have been securing supplies of spices during the week, round lots of nutmegs changing hands at 55c.

Mr. Lightbound of Lightbound, Rolston & Co., who has been laid up with a severe cold, was down town again on Tuesday.

Western buyers have been purchasing round lots of American syrup on this market at about 22c. per gallon for finest quality.

There is a general demand in a jobbing way for many grocery specialties on Christmas account. C. A. Liffiton's caffaroma is not being forgotten in this connection.

There are no lemons here, and it is very difficult to fill an order at present. A small lot that came in at the close of last week was cleaned up at full figures, $4 to $5 per box.

A nice line of Porto Cobello coffee was offered here this week at 19c.; also some small lots of Mexican coffees by the same brokers.

Sugar refiners are commencing to receive some offers on raw sugar for next season's supplies, but they do not seem inclined to operate with the tendency of the raw market as it is.

Caverhill, Hughes & Co. note a better business on Christmas account this year than last. Their staff was compelled to work four nights in the week after six o'clock to catch up with orders.

There is a decided scarcity of Bosnia prunes on this market, the great bulk of the receipts during the week having passed out of first hands at 5½c.

L. Chaput & Co. report that despite the severe cutting tactics of some competitors, their trade this year is in excess of that for the corresponding period in 1892.

Rose & Laflamme note some good orders for the line of "Cream Corn" which is admitted to be good value for the money. They are the sole agents for this specialty in the Dominion.

Keen's spices in one-ounce packages are a line of goods that are going well for the holiday trade. Frank Magor & Co. say that the orders from city houses are very good. Their line of Cadbury's specialties are naturally also good sellers at this season of the year.

There is a good demand for fish at the present time, and W. R. Wanham & Co. are offering some choice Scotch specialties of this sort which are well worthy of attention, coming as they do from Marshall & Co. of Aberdeen.

The stock of Sullivan Bros., general merchants, Newmarket, has been sold by the sheriff and realized 51c. on the dollar. Danford Roch, Newmarket, was the purchaser.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 21.

THE trade this week, particularly with the retail people, has been good, and the wholesale trade cannot complain. The cold weather has filled the people with the right Christmas feeling. The snow, which has made "the going" so good, has added much to the general activity and good feeling. The closeness of money seems for a time forgotten, and all have something to spend. Values are easy all round, except in butter and fresh eggs, in which the market is higher.

CANNED GOODS—In this class there is no change of account; canned oysters and beef are both easier. We quote: Corn, 90c.; peas, 90c; tomatoes, 90c. to $1; Canadian canned beef, $2.50 per doz. 2's; American do., $2.60 per doz. 2's; oysters, $2.15 to $2.35; lobsters, $1.75 to $2; salmon, $1.35 to $1.40; haddies, $1.30 to $1.40.

DRIED FRUIT AND NUTS—Values keep very low. From New York raisins and currants are being offered lower than at any time during the season. There would appear to be a chance of currants being higher, but it looks as if raisins were down, at least to stay so for a time. No new prunes, except a few French, are as yet in the market. Prices to-day are:—Valencias, 4½ to 4¾c.; Valencia layers, 5¾ to 6c.; London layers, $2; currants, bbls., 3½c.; cases, 4½c.; dates, 5½ to 6½c.; prunes, 6¾ to 7c.; figs, 10c.; dried apples, 6½ to 6¾c.; evaporated apples, 11 to 11½c.; peanuts, 10 to 11c.; walnuts, 11 to 13c.; Brazil, 13 to 14c.; almonds, 13 to 14c.; filberts, 10 to 11c.; pecans, 12 to 13c.

SUGAR—The market is easier and trade is light. People are not inclined to buy largely, and the quiet season being so near increases this feeling.

MOLASSES—Is in good demand, the week showing a good trade. The market is firm, and everything points to an advance, particularly in Porto Rico. Syrup demand keeps good, and prices, in spite of the lowness of sugar, keeps firm. Barbadoes molasses, best, 31 to 32c.; second, 29 to 30c.; Porto Rico, best, 35 to 36c.; second, 30 to 32c.; Antiqua, 29 to 30c.; Syrup, 35c.

DAIRY PRODUCTS — Butter is getting scarce, and good is eagerly sought. It has not yet, however, got to that point where people will buy poor butter. Eggs when fresh are bringing high figures, but case eggs are hard to sell. Cheese is quiet, and holders are confident of better prices. Prices to-day are:—Creamery butter, 23 to 25c.; dairy, 21 to 22c.; store-packed, 18 to 21c.; cheese, 11c.; fresh eggs, 23 to 25c.; case eggs, 18 to 20c.

FRUIT—Apples are in good demand and would bring high prices were it not they are keeping so badly. The English market has received very few so far from Canada, and for that reason prices are ruling high. Oranges are very low. West India fruit on account of quantity to hand is being sold at a loss. Good keeping cranberries and heavy weight grapes are scarce. Apples, $2 to $3; West India oranges, $4 to $4.50; Florida's, $2.50 to $3; lemons, $4.50 to $5; grapes, per keg, $4.75 to $5; cranberries, $6 50 to $7; bananas, $1.75 to $2.50.

PROVISIONS—Round hogs in the market are easier, 6½ to 7c. for extras. All pork products are in same condition. Clear mess pork, $20 to $21; P. E. I. mess, $18 to $19; plate beef, $14 25 to $14.75; ; pure lard, 12 to 12½c., compound, 10 to 12½c.; hams, 14c.; bacon, 11½ to 12c.

FISH—The trade in which to the West Indies is now large, has only brought fair results this season. The high charges and the chance of a poor market are to the disadvantage of sending goods by steamer. The trade as yet in frozen fish is small, as the fish aee not to be had. Pickled fish are also very scarce, and dried are very firm, and everything points to higher prices all round. Cod fish, large, $4 to $4.20; medium, $3.40 to $3.50; pollock, $1.90 to $2; haddock, $1.80 to $2; bay herring, brls., $3 to $3.25; half-brls., $1.60 to $1.75; Shelburn herring, brls., $4 to $4 to $4 25; half-brls., $2.25 to $2.50.

OILS—The wholesale trade have arranged a set price for all selling oil, which, it is expected, will allow a fair profit on what has been often at cost on account of the keenness of the competition: American, 20c. per gal., brl. free; Canadian, best, 19c. per gal., brl. free; Canadian, second, 13¼c. per gal., brl. free. Terms, net, 30 days.

PERSONAL MENTION.

J. Ross of Sloan & Crowther, and T. Smith of Dalton Bros., Toronto, spent a few spare moments in North Bay last week dressing the window of Mrs. McIntyre.

Albert French, the representative of the Pure Gold Co. in the Northwest, left Toronto for the West Monday.

Percy and Douglas Eby, sons of J. F. Eby of Eby, Blain & Co. are now filling positions in the warehouse of the firm.

STRICTLY BUSINESS.

"I—I hardly know what to say, Mr. Browncliff," said the agitated young woman who acted as assistant postmaster and grocer's clerk at the little village of Peaville, "I—I wasn't expecting anything of this kind."

"That's all right, Miss Frankie," responded Mr. Browncliff, traveling salesman for Pullem & Gummet's candy factory. "That's all right. You can just consider it a square offer. I have a good house and lot, $2,000 in the bank, I'm getting a handsome salary, I am a good judge of girls, and you're the one I want to marry. I've got just five minutes to make a train, Miss Frankie," he added hurriedly, looking at his watch, "and I'll be round again in exactly thirty days for your answer with a full line of samples—save your orders for me and think over what I've said, and I haven't another second to spare; good by. dear!"—Ex.

IRISH WIT.

The porter of a Dublin grocer was brought up before a magistrate on a charge of stealing chocolate, which he could not deny. Upon being asked to whom he sold it, the pride of Patrick was greatly wounded:

"To whom did I sell it?" says Pat; "why does he think I took it to sell?"

"Then, sir," said the magistrate, "what did you do with it?"

"Do wid it? Since you must know," said he, "we made tay with it."

HINTS ON WINDOW DRESSING.

I WILL give a few hints to those who are striving to make their windows the centre of attraction in their towns. First of all, make the centre of the window the centre of attraction. The eye naturally rests upon that which is bright and striking. If you are putting some design in your window, place it in the centre, and work around it on either side, always being careful not to overcrowd, as by so doing the desired effect is lost and your time and trouble wasted.

Be careful how you combine the colors which you place in your window. You may ruin a very pretty design by a poor combination of colors. Study to make pretty designs and to harmonize colors, and you are master of the secret of window dressing.

Avoid overcrowding. You may have your window completed when some one suggests to you that if you would place a line of such a class of goods in such a part of the window, or on a pillow, in such a corner, it would add greatly to the general effect. By following such suggestion a great many very good windows are spoiled. An overcrowded window gives one the impression that the window dresser, being in a great hurry to get through, got some one to help him, and, between them, they managed to fill the window up without regard to design or taste.

Windows may be overcrowded in several ways: When you have a design as the attraction, and build too close around it, the effect is lost. When you make a display of one kind of goods, as gents' furnishing goods, and then try to work in something new; something that has just arrived; something that is as remote from gents' furnishing goods as dress goods are from sugar, your display is entirely spoiled and your time and labor are wasted.—C. A. Hirleman, in Trade.

TASTING TEA.

THERE is a class of men who find constant and remuneratine employment among the large wholesale dealers in teas and coffee of New York that the average reader has never known to exist, says the New York Herald. These gentlemen are known to the narrow confines of their profession as tasters. They sample all of the finer brands and qualities of tea and coffee. The moment a bean or leaf is placed upon their tongues they can almost give a complete history of its quality, age, and even the country from which it has been shipped.

The least defect in proper preparation, the faintest taint of adulteration, is palpable to them in a degree astonishing to a layman.

Of these gentlemen there are about 500 in New York and vicinity, and all of them earn salaries ranging from $5,000 to $10,000 a year. The largest importing tea houses have one and sometimes two of these experts constantly employed testing and passing upon the quality of their consignments prior to final payments.

"I know that my profession is a peculiar one," said one of the prominent experts the other day, and that the majority of tea-drinkers believe that the quality of their favorite beverage is ascertained by a chemical process. In that, however, they are mistaken.

"They may also be led to believe that this profession is easy to acquire, and that no sacrifices are made to it by those who follow it for a livelihood. That is another mistake, even greater than the former. It takes years to acquire that delicacy of taste so necessary to determine the different qualities, and once acquired the sacrifices one has to make to retain it are even greater than the demands made upon the followers of the medical profession.

"If you smoke, the palate immediately loses the delicacy, and even a glass of liquor would do an injury which would require months of care to overcome.

"We cannot partake of rich food or spiced dessert of any kind for the same reason, and are compelled to take extra care in all our food.

"The most prominent opera singers do not take better care of their throats than the tea and coffee experts."

RETAILERS' SPECIALTIES.

It is the fashion for some retailers to put up their own specialties, believing that they can thereby obtain a larger profit. We admit that the provocation is great, particularly when a proprietary article in general demand is sold everywhere at a nominal profit. Probably baking powder is as striking an instance as we could name as offering the retailer an opportunity to get a large profit by himself compounding a powder to be sold under his own label. Recently we asked one of the most prominent and successful retailers in the United States: "Why don't you put up your own baking powder?" He replied: "Because one bad break kills any individual specialty. We did try baking powder, but one bad lot ruined our trade. One bad lot of flour from the mill killed our trade in a special brand. We tried putting up corn-starch under a private label, and even that was a fizzle, on account of one imperfect lot. No, sir; we have learned by experience to stick to our trade and let the experts and those who have all the machinery and skill for uniformly and properly combining ingredients put up the baking powder and other specialties; for, as I said before, one bad break kills an individual specialty."

Experience demonstrates the truth of this statement. We recall B, a flourishing grocer who built up a large trade in a special brand of flour. He was all right until a drummer induced him to try the flour of another mill, claimed to be as good or better, and 50 cents per barrel cheaper. B took the bait, sold the flour, and took most of it back after having confidence in the brand ruined. Stick to a reliable thing. af the profit is small, push the sales the harder and make up a good net result on the theory that "a nimble sixpence is better than a slow shilling."—American Grocer.

TALK ABOUT TEA.

"Last mail orders from London," said a tea man to THE GROCER, "report that owing to exceptionally heavy auctions the market has been somewhat easier for Ceylon teas this week. Other kinds unchanged. Imports for month for London 26,642,000 lbs., against 24,939,000 lbs. last year. Deliveries for London for the month this year are practically the same as last year. The stock in London on 30th November was 88,648,000 lbs., against 82,012,000 lbs. last year. The local market has shown no new feature. General trade has been dull. There have been a few transactions in low Ceylons and Aasams for price, and fine Ceylons and a few parcels of China teas and Japans have been sold where exceptional value offered."

KEEP YOUR FEET SHOD.

At a certain horse race recently, it happened that one of the best horses fell behind, and the discovery was made that the jockey had been racing the horse with loose shoes. The jockey was fined, replaced by another, the horse's shoes were fastened on, and then the horse won the race with ease. We can find a moral in this incident of a horse race. Many a young man begins life handicapped by loose shoes; his principles are loose, his plans poorly formed. The wise young man, remarks an exchange, has his feet tighly shod, his principles are unwavering, his plans definite and stable.

DEPLETED OYSTER BEDS.

A. E. Kemp, oyster expert to the Marine and Fisheries Department, arrived at Ottawa last week from the Lower Provinces, where he has been engaged all summer prosecuting oyster culture. Mr. Kemp made his headquarters at Shediac, where he planted a large bed with about 390,000 oysters. Mr. Kemp believes that in a few years time, with care and cultivation, the depleted beds can be replenished. Mr. Kemp has had a very extensive experience in oyster culture at Whitstable, England, the home of the best oysters to be found in the British isles. He mentioned a curious fact; that the European oyster is sexless; but by the aid of the microscope the sex of the Canadian oyster is distinctly discernible.

The creditors of Ellis & Keighley, spice manufacturers, Toronto, held a meeting at Assignee Clarkson's office on Wednesday. Nothing was decided, and the meeting was again adjourned.

SUPERIOR CANNED FISH.

EVOLUTION is as ever at work in the grocery trade as in the animal, mineral or vegetable kingdoms.

One need only glance back over the last five or ten years to realize this in many respects; but none more so than in the matter of canned goods in general and canned fish in particular.

The editor of THE GROCER was particularly impressed with this idea a few days ago when sampling some cans of kippered and fresh herring that had been submitted for inspection. They were from the famous establishment of Marshall & Co., preserved provision manufacturers, etc., of Aberdeen, Scotland. There have been placed upon the Canadian market during the last few years brands of fresh and kippered herring that were really fine. But to Marshall & Co. must be awarded the palm for the latest and most improved product of the kind placed upon this market. The quality is excellent, and cannot but please the most fastidious who gives it a trial. We know for a fact that persons to whom other brands of kippered and fresh herring now on the market were unpalatable have eaten that from the factory of Marshall & Co. with relish, and have acknowledged so in terms of the highest commendation. It is not, therefore, surprising that in the comparatively short space of time which Marshall & Co.'s products have been on the Canadian market that the sale of them should have assumed extensive proportions.

But the goods of Marshall & Co. do not come to this country with no recommendation to accompany them. They have already "earned their spurs" in other countries. At the great international exhibitions held in Sydney, Melbourne and Adelaide, Australia, a few years ago, Marshall & Co. were awarded the highest and only awards for all kinds of canned fish; and this brand to-day stands second to none in the world. From a glance at the firm's price-list it is learned that its canned goods consist, among other lines, of the following:—Scotch salmon, turbot, fresh cod, real findon haddocks, fried haddocks, herrings, boiled beef, boiled mutton, tripe, soups, finest Aberdeenshire beef, beef marrow fat, sausages, veal, game, poultry, vegetables, tomato conserve, oatmeal and pearl barley, etc.

GLEANED FROM MANY SOURCES.

HAMILTON & FORD, grocers, Vancouver, will move during the next few days from Abbott street to a store in the Sullivan block on Cordova street.

The Laurel cheese factory this year made 50 tons of the article and sold it for $10,000. This is the factory's best year.

Mr. F. A. Fitzgerald, of the Imperial Oil Company, has been asked to run for Mayor in London.

"What's the subscription price of your new paper?" "Two dollars a year." "Is it intended for any particular class of readers?" "Yes; it's for those who have two dollars."

According to the Dominion census there are in Canada 2,320 boot and shoe factories, employing 4,396 hands. It is too bad they cannot secure a pair of hands for each factory.—Toronto Globe.

The best way to ascertain whether coffee has been adulterated or not is to pour cold water on it. If pure it will color the water very slightly; if mixed with chicory the water will take a brownish hue.—Ex.

Fresh eggs are selling in Vancouver at $1 per dozen. Dealers claim that the Calgary eggs sold in large quantities here taste of the sage brush the hens feed upon. In spite of the price of eggs, very few engage in chicken business.—Ex.

Capt. W. J. Sanderson, who had charge of the Agricultural building at Chicago, is authority for the statement that over $10,000 worth of beverages has been destroyed in that building since the cold weather set in. Bottles burst over the entire building in a continuous fusilade.

At a general meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society the following members were elected on the Board of Management:—Thos. Dunnet, president; Robert Cream, vice-president; Warring Kennedy, treasurer; trustees, J. M. Bayne, Joseph Taylor, W. B. Dack, Henry Goodman, R. L. Patterson, Joseph Bonnick, J. A. Ross, H. Lamont, L. R. Wickett.

These are the officers of the St. John, N. B., Board of Trade for the ensuing year:—W. Frank Hatheway, president; W. S. Fisher, vice-president; Ira Cornwall, secretary-treasurer; T. S. Sims, R. Pitfield, members of council.

E. McCarthy of the firm of E. McCarthy & Co. of Regina was in the city yesterday, on business connected with the burning out of their establishment in the recent big blaze at Regina. Mr. McCarthy says that the insurance on his firm's premises has not yet been paid. The building cost $2,700, and was insured for $1,200, while the stock was worth $11,150, and was only partially insured. Mr. McCarthy had an interview with the several agents here of the several fire insurance companies interested, and believes that a satisfactory settlement will be made, Free Press, Winnipeg.

We remember, says B. C. Commercial Journal, having read of a sign placed over a little cottage in a little hamlet in the Motherland which read somewhat as follows:—

"Bibles and Bacon,
Testaments and Treacle,
Godly Books and Gimlets
Sold here."

A cable from London, England, says: The arrivals of apples from Canada are utterly insufficient to meet the Christmas demand. Most of those that arrived last week were from Canada, and, as a result, there was keen competition, prices advancing from three to four shillings per barrel. This advance will, in all probability, be maintained for this week's arrival.

Mr. John Cameron, representing the J. B. McLean Publishing Co., Toronto, was in town recently looking after the interests of that company, who are the proprietors of no less than five papers, THE GROCER, THE DRY GOODS, HARDWARE, BOOKS AND NOTIONS, and THE PRINTER AND PUBLISHER. These are lively, creditable publications, and judging from appearances must be doing well for the publishers. Mr. Cameron has secured a long list of subscribers in this county.—Berlin News.

Robert Bowie, Brockville, J. M. Lottridge, of Hamilton, and Auguste Bolte, Toronto, representing the interests of the brewers of the Dominion, had an interview with Hon. G. W. Foster and Sir John Thompson last week. It is said that the delegation desired a reduction of the duty on malt. They argue that there is not enough profit in the business, and that they cannot charge the retail trade any more because the latter are unable to get more than five cents per glass for beer. In this way the brewers say that the malt duty is altogether a burden on the brewers, and cannot be properly distributed over the trade.

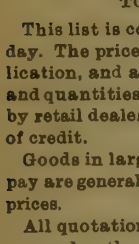
THE CANADIAN GROCER PRICES CURRENT.



TORONTO, Dec. 21, 1893

This list is corrected every Thursday. The prices are solicited for publication, and are for such qualities and quantities as are usually ordered by retail dealers on the usual terms of credit.

Goods in large lots and for prompt pay are generally obtainable at lower prices.

All quotations in this department are under the direct control of the Editor, and are not paid for or doctored by any manufacturing or jobbing house unless given under their name; the right being reserved to exclude such firms as do not furnish reliable information.

Another Christmas is at hand

And as is our custom, we desire, through the medium of the CANADIAN GROCER, to thank our many friends for their liberal support during the present year. We have every reason to be thankful for the immense trade we have done, and with every attention on our part to those who favor us with orders in the future, we hope to be able, yet another year, to be in a position to repeat our thanks. We have done our very best to please you and to retain your confidence and support.

That the year 1894 may be one of prosperity and happiness for all the people of our land, and especially of those with whom we have had such pleasant business relations, is our earnest wish.

Yours very truly,

Toronto Biscuit & Confectionery Co., 7 Front St. East, Toronto

The year which makes its exit at midnight Sunday has been a fairly satisfactory one for leading staples in the grocery trade. Sugars have not been subjected to many rapid declines or advances on the Canadian market. There have of course been fluctuations, but when the prices rose or fell it was, as a rule, the expected that happened. If anything the market in Canada has followed that in New York more closely than usual; or rather, one of the large refineries in Montreal pursued the policy of doing so, and what one did was of course imitated by the others in the country. This has caused prices to fluctuate in this country more than they otherwise would, stocks of refined being at no time really large, while the demand has ruled good during the year. Prices here at the moment are practically the same as a year ago, the quotations then as now being 4⅝ to 4¾c. for granulated. But the first week in January saw an advance of ⅛c. to 4¾ to 4⅞c. From that out till the latter part of March there was no material change. Then there was another advance to 4⅞ to 5c. The first week in April saw another advance of ⅛c., granulated then being quoted at 5 to 5⅛c. By a similar advance a week later the price was brought up to 5⅛ to 5¼c. The first week in May saw granulated selling at 5⅜c., and before the middle of the month was reached another ⅛c. had been added. By second week in June the outside price was 5⅝c., while a week later saw it another ⅛c. higher. The range was then 5⅝ to 5¾c. This was the last of the advances for the year. From that out what changes were made were in the nature of declines. The first drop occurred the third week in July, when 5⅝c. became the idea for granulated, and five weeks later 5½c. was the ruling figure. From that out till October 29 the market ruled steady to strong, but on that date the market took an easier turn, and sold fractionally lower. During the following week there was a series of fractional declines; and 5 to 5⅛c. became the idea for granulated. Before the end of November the price had dropped to 4¾c. The first week in December saw the ruling price 4⅝c., and at that figure it is to-day. It has been asserted that the declines which have been taking place in the United States during the past few months has been largely a move on the part of the Trust there to squeeze holders of raws. But whatever may have been the influences at work, the price of raws was forced down, and to a point, too, lower than they have been for nearly a quarter of a century. Within the last week or so there has been a slight reaction, and holders are announced to be assuming a more independent attitude.

The year has not been a satisfactory one for canned goods; that is at least so far as the jobbers are concerned. The market was a steady one, but the trouble was that it remained too fixed. When the supplies for the year were being purchased most of them assumed that the pack was going to be on the light side and that prices would in consequence appreciate. This led to much speculation in futures. That there was enough and to spare is known by everybody in the trade. The result was that prices dropped to a figure that would not, in some instances at least, return the jobber what he paid for the goods; and there they remained. In other words, he lost money. To make matters worse cutting became a common practice. The lesson taught by this experience has not been ignored. Indeed the trade seems to have taken it to heart. At any rate the tendency to speculate in futures was not nearly so strong last fall as usual. And if they persevere in this in the future trade will be all the more healthy for it. None are at the moment realizing this more than the merchants themselves. Speculation of a kind will always be indulged in. In other words, there is speculation that is gambling and speculation that is legitimate. The man who is far seeing and who is a student of the markets will naturally exercise his faculties to his own advantage by either buying or refraining from buying a certain line of goods. The great evil is where a man is led by a spirit of gambling to plunge, as the sporting fraternity have it.

The year has been, on the whole, a satisfactory one in regard to teas. The Canadian merchants have done well on practically all their importations. The market opened fairly low, and it kept firm for all kinds—Indians, Ceylons, Chinas and Japans—gradually advancing towards the middle of the season. This always ensures a steady market and enables dealers, both large and small, to make profits on their purchases. Towards the end of the season some sacrifices were of course made by shippers in order to clear out consignments on hand, and some remarkable values at intervals appeared. But, on the whole, shippers to this continent have done well this season, and it is safe to reckon that they have had a satisfactory year. It is reported, on the other hand, that shippers to London, England, have not had such a satisfactory season, especially in China teas. The cause largely for this is that the English trade is going almost entirely after Indian and Ceylon teas, China being more and more neglected each year; and as large shipments of China teas are still being made to that port it naturally follows, when they are shoved upon the market, with that old-time demand for them wanting, that prices obtained are not satisfactory. During the last two years some of the largest houses in China have suspended and gone out of business. If it was not for Russia the condition of the China tea trade would be much worse than it is. The Russian still swears by China tea, and no other will he drink, every year some half dozen full cargoes being sent, on an average, from the Flowery Kingdom to the land of the Muscovite.

We cover the ground from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and have double the circulation of any other journal in Canada.

The dried fruit market has been, on the whole, a satisfactory one for the merchants. The quality of all lines, such as raisins, prunes, currants, figs, has been excellent, probably never better, while the price has ruled low; in some instances remarkably so. These conditions naturally stimulated the demand; and if, because of more or less cutting, jobbers and retailers have not reaped all the benefit they might have that is their fault. Nature was generous in the part it played. One great drawback the Canadian trade had was the order-in-council of the Dominion Government prohibiting the importation of the Eleme figs and Sultana raisins from Smyrna. As far as Sultana raisins were concerned, the trade was not so much affected, fair stocks being held here at the time. But in regard to figs it was another thing. When the order-in-council was issued there was scarcely a fig to be had in the country, and the prohibition of the importation of this fruit was a source of serious inconvenience and loss to merchants. The trade felt sore over the matter at the time and sent deputations to interview the Government, but all to no purpose. And they have had good reason since to feel still more annoyed, for the very fruit that was packed during the time when cholera was said to be prevalent, and which it was the order-in-council aimed to keep out of the country, was, after the edict had been repealed, allowed entree. The jobbers argue that if it was safe to allow the fruit into the country in the last instance it was equally so in the first. Then England, with all her experience, was not at all alarmed over the matter, evidently taking the same view of the situation as did the shippers, namely, that cholera was not epidemic, and shipments of fruit therefore continued to arrive in that country from Smyrna as regularly as ever. True the United States, like Canada, prohibited the importation of Smyrna fruit, but there is a suspicion that the edict in this instance was influenced as much by a desire to benefit the fruit producers of California as from a fear that within the foreign article were lurking colonies of the terrible cholera germ. One thing is certain, the edict of the Dominion Government was a bad thing for Canadian merchants; and that without serving any good purpose.

The market for Rio coffee has ruled strong the greater part of the year. An incentive was given to prices early in the season on account of the scarcity of the better grades. Before this another and more powerful influence was brought to bear Civil war broke out in Brazil. That influence is still at work; and is being more strongly felt at present than even a few weeks ago, late advices from Rio stating that no orders can at the moment be received for coffee on account of the hostilities. The price of green Rio coffee on the Toronto market is now 2 to 3c. dearer than a year ago at this time.

Christmas morning cables from Europe were but anything in unison with the sentiment of the season: "Peace on earth and good will toward men." Instead of peace they breathed of war. One hundred and thirty thousand more armed men than there were the Christmas of 1892 are, we were told, standing ready and eager to jump at each other's throats, while Russia, with the co-operation of France, was threatening to force the Dardanelles, make a union of her Black and Mediterranean sea fleets, drive England from the scene, and capture Constantinople. The holiday trade, too, was unsatisfactory, while want and misery was apparent everywhere.

BIG PROFITS ON APPLES.

Apple exporters in Montreal and other dealers in the fruit cannot, like last year, complain of disastrous results and heavy losses. On the contrary, they have had a very profitable season so far, and present prospects seem to point to still better returns on the fruit still remaining in the hands of dealers and shippers on this side the water. There is more than one reason for this state of affairs, but the chief one was the short crop of apples in Canada, which fell away considerably below that of last year. For instance, the exports to date only amount to about 75,000 barrels, whereas last season they ran up to 700,000 barrels. But it was not only in Canada that there was a short crop, for the recent course of the English market seems to indicate that they have not been getting the same quantity of apples from other sources this year as last. Recent cables from Liverpool state that all the Canadian fruit had been cleared up and that the trade there were anxiously awaiting the arrival of other shipments, as the supply of English apples was almost entirely absorbed. In consequence of this condition of affairs prices this year on Canadian apples have rated very much higher than last, and, as is generally the case when the fruit is scarce, Montreal is always the strongest market in the world to buy on. Cables on Saturday reported sales to arrive in Liverpool which netted the seller in the west $4.50 to $5 per barrel, which means a very handsome profit. The average first cost this year was $1 to $1.50 for the simple fruit, which, with 30c. added for packing and 35c. for the barrel, makes a total first cost of from $1.50 to $2 50 per barrel, so that on the sales in question the handsome profit of from $2.50 to $3 per barrel was made. This is a very different state of affairs to that which prevailed last season, when Montreal exporters made losses running all the way from $20,000 to $30,000, not a single shipper making any money on any of the shipments up to the first of January. Last year the first cost was about $1.25 to $150 for the sample fruit. But it is not only in the way of export business that high prices have been realized on apples. Figures have been paid for car lots of the fruit in Montreal that have not been made any time for the last eight or ten years. We know of actual sales of car lots at $4.10 and choice straight car lots of Spys have brought as high as $4.50 per barrel. These figures have never been approached except eight years ago when there was a very short crop, much shorter than the one of the present year. On the whole, therefore, this year's apple deal has been an unusual one.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS DINE.

The Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association held their annual dinner at the Windsor Hotel in Montreal on Thursday evening last. Now the drummer, as he is called, knows how to enjoy himself, none better, for who has the collection of stories, yarns, etc., than he has. He is eloquent himself, as many a buyer throughout the length and breadth of the land can vouch, and therefore can appreciate eloquence from others. With all these advantages, therefore, it is needless to say that the boys had a good time at Montreal last week. They had, and a good deal was also due to the fact that the following gentlemen had the arrangements in hand :—Messrs. F. Birks, G. L. Cains, J. H. Clerk, F. S. Cote, E. H. Copland, W. H. Callahan, J. T. Dwyer, F. X. de Grandpre, M. E. Davis, A. Elliott, I. Friedmann, C. Gurd, Fred. Hughes, P. S. Lassonde, E. D. Marceau, J. H. Morin, W. McNally, T. L. Paton and A. A. Mason, whilst special praise is due to the indefatigable efforts of the secretary, Mr. H. W. Wadsworth, who greatly helped to make the dinner the success it was.

They saw that nothing was wanting, so that when President David Watson, the newly elected president, took the chair at 8 o'clock everything was as it should be. At his table were seated His Worship Mayor Desjardins, Solicitor-General Curran, U. S. Consul General Anderson, Col. Stevenson and Messrs. F. Hughes, Geo. Cains and Geo. Summer, ex-presidents of the Association.

After the good things had been disposed of the chairman read letters of regret from many, among others the Governor-General, Sir John Thompson, Lieut.-Governor Chapleau, Hon. W. Laurier, Hon. L. O. Taillon, Hon. N. Clarke Wallace and Mr. W. C. Van Horne.

The chairman followed this up with a nice little speech. First thanking the members for the honor they had conferred upon him, he passed on to refer to the work the Association was doing, which he claimed was a great and noble work. Its objects were to promote the welfare and interests of its members, by making provision against sickness, misfortune, accident or death, and by relieving the widow, orphan children or representatives of members deceased. The total income for the year 1893 was $20,326. Out of this $13,000 had been paid in death and accident claims, whilst the ordinary working expenses were only $4,866. He then, amid loud cheers, submitted the toast of "The Queen and the Royal Family," which was loyally drunk with musical honors.

These were followed by the toast of the President of the United States. Consul-General Anderson, whose abilities in this respect are well known, made a very humorous reply. He said that after an absence of a few years, enforced by circumstances entirely beyond his own control, it was his privilege and honor to again be a guest of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association. On his return to Canada he noticed, with great pleasure, that Montreal had made wonderful strides in improvements, one of which was the introduction of the electric car service. After speaking some kind words about the Montreal cabmen, he said that Montreal was noted for the cheapest cab service in America, if not in the whole world. The Consul-General concluded his remarks by thanking those present for the cordial manner in which they had toasted the health of the President.

The Vice-President, Mr. Wm. McNally, submitted "The Commercial Interests of the Dominion" in a brief but capital speech, which was replied to by the Hon. Peter Mitchell, who spoke eloquently on the progress of the metropolis and how much the men who were sitting around him had to do with enhancing that progress. He closed with the wish that Canada's commerce would both prosper and increase in the days to come as in the past. A few remarks on the same topic were also delivered in French, by Mr. H. Laporte, the well known wholesale grocer, after which Mr. L. Paton proposed the toast of the railway and forwarding interests, coupled with the health of Solicitor-General Curran.

Mr. Curran spoke of the great progress which had been made in railway enterprise during recent years, and which had tended so largely to open up this great and glorious country, and then went on to show that this progress had been accompanied by a great and growing increase in trade between ths several portions of the Dominion and other countries. The hon. gentleman concluded by thanking those present for the hearty manner in which they had coupled his name with the toast.

The other toasts were "Our Guests," proposed by ex-Ald. Rolland, and responded ed to by Mr. A. T. Lepine. M.P., whilst that of "Our Sister Associations" was proposed by Mr. Marceau and responded to by Mr. C. C. Van Norman, of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Toronto. The toast of the "Mayor and Corporation," proposed by Mr. J. Rogers, was enthusiastically drank, and when the Mayor and Ald. Stevenson stood up to respond they received hearty receptions. The toast of "The Ladies" was in the capable hands of Mr. J. L. Dwyer.

During the evening the pleasure was greatly enhanced by the following gentlemen, who either sang or recited :—Messrs. Charles Terroux, Duquette, Venables and Carmichael.

LABRADOR HERRING FISHERY.

The St. John's, Nfld., correspondent of the Montreal Gazette says :—For several years past the herring fishery has been declining in Labrador. This year it culminated in a total failure, only a few barrels being taken —a mere bagatelle compared with the catch of former years. The cause of the decline is unknown. Probably the failure of the food on which the herring lives may be at the bottom of the trouble, and, in consequence, the herring have gone off to other feeding grounds; but will return to their old haunts when they recuperate. Meantime, the loss to our fishing classes is very serious. Some years ago a similar event took place in Norway, the herring having disappeared, but I think they have now returned to their old quarters. I observe in some Dominion papers complaints that some dealers in the Maritime Provinces have been packing inferior herring and branding them as Labrador No. 1. Very few barrels of the genuine article will find their way this year to market.

Much satisfaction has been felt and expressed here at the high place won by "Munn's Boneless Codfish" at the Chicago fair. That spirited and enterprising firm, who always keep their mind open to new ideas, have well merited the distinction they have obtained. Their boneless codfish, tinned salmon, and refined cod liver oil, prepared after the Norwegian method, are unsurpassed and now hold a leading position in the market. Last summer I had an opportunity of examining their factory in Harbour Grace, and observing their methods of preserving the various articles. It is a model of cleanliness, order, and vigilant care in every detail. The machinery employed in the various processes is most ingenious, and new improvements are constantly being introduced. I understand that their cod liver oil, which is prepared by the freezing process, is found superior to the best Norwegian oil. In the preservation of caplin, too, they are making rapid strides.

Business in St. John's is brisk, and this year's fall trade is likely to be large. The working classes, mechanics, etc., have profited by the employment and high wages consequent on the rebuilding of the burnt portion of the city, and cash is plentiful. The revenue this year is expected to be large owing to the increased importations to replace what was lost by the fire. Houses are still going up rapidly. In another year or two traces of the fire will have disappeared and the city will present a greatly improved appearance.

The cheese factory and 300 boxes of cheese were destroyed by fire on the 20th of December at Cherry Hill, about twelve miles north of Ingersoll. Loss about $2,500; fully covered by insurance.

HONEY—PURE AND ARTIFICIAL.

The arrival of cold weather is like to bring to every one—and especially to him who is far bred—visions of smoking buckwheat cakes and golden honey, remarks an American paper. Strange as it may seem, the two are closely connected—the sale of honey being greatly increased by their advent. And out of that smoke comes memory pictures of the old farmhouse kitchen on that never-to-be-forgotten night when the bees were taken up and the bits of broken honey-comb fell to the youngsters' share.

It may be that the distance between those pictures and the present is not fifty years, yet that half-century has seen the growth of the honey trade. Less than half a century ago honey was an article of luxury; not every farmer's house was supplied, much less those of other people. In summer warm biscuits and honey made a dish fit for the parson; in winter buckwheat cakes and honey were deemed fit for the gods. But there was no trade in honey then; the demand was limited and the supply uncertain.

But now all this is changed. With the great consumption of sweets which marks the present generation, honey has easily held its own. An enormous trade in it has been built up, so that it now forms a part of the grocer's stock in even the smallest hamlet; candy and patent-medicine men use it in enormous quantities, and bakers buy it by the hogshead. There are several firms in this city which regard an order of $1,000, $1,500 or $2,000 just as a large dry goods firm does an order of 50 yards of muslin. Boston, Chicago and New York have become great honey centres, and their quotations effect even those of London, the greatest market of the world. Europe calls for our surplus, and very little is imported.

But great as is this demand, the supply is now sufficient to meet it. Occasionally, as in the past year, there is a shortage and prices advance. But this country is so extensive that a failure in all parts does not readily occur. Of course, just how large the product is no one knows. Several estimates have been made putting the number of beekeepers in this country at 30,000 and the value of last year's crop at $15,000,000.

Honey comes from all parts of the country. There is not a state or territory which does not furnish some. The supply from the South is not so large as one would suppose, considering the climate; in fact, it is rather light. The cause of this undoubtedly is that the bees are not cared for and there is less care taken in shipping the honey, as old-fashioned methods prevail to a great extent. Southern honey also is very different in taste from that of the North. Florida honey is in fair demand as a cheap article.

One matter in connection with the honey business deserves attention—namely, adulteration. It has been said that no article of food has been so persistently and extensively adulterated during the last twenty years as this, and that thereby the trade has been ruined. While there may be a little truth in the statement, it must be taken with many allowances. Most of the stories current are far from true, and while many recipes for making honey out of chemicals are published, no such honey, it may be safely said, has ever been seen on the market. It is probable that all such reports are the outcome of experiments; at least they have never been successfully operated.

So much has been said about this matter that some time ago the United States Agricultural Department began an investigation and published the report last spring. The most approved methods of analysis, both physical and chemical, were adopted; honey was bought in open market in all parts of the country by local chemists of known character, and by them studied and reported on. In a general way the results obtained were that comb honey, sold in the frame, is pure, and that while there is a great deal of pure extracted honey sold, there is also an immense amount of it adulterated with glucose, cane sugar and other cheap materials, sometimes even to the extent of 75 per cent. of the whole. In no case was anything injurious to health found. This adulteration seems to be mainly the work of large dealers. There are two reasons for this adulteration, the one to make money and the other to increase sales. The former is probably not very profitable now that honey is so cheap; the latter surprises one. It is the old story of milk; so many people like watered milk better than the kind that has a "nasty scum" on it (cream). Mr. Perrin of Riverside, Cal., who is perhaps the originator of honey adulteration, writes that several years ago he conceived the idea that the common dark honey could be improved by the addition of good white sugar. While in business in Brooklyn, he used to send out peddling wagons carrying both the pure and the adulterated plainly marked, and frequently of a day's sales 90 per cent. would be of the adulterated. He has many times received complaints that he did not put sugar enough in the compound.

A prominent dealer in this city confirms that statement. Of his sales the adulterated (plainly marked) sells four dozen bottles to one dozen pure. It seems to be a confessed fact that many people do not know pure honey any more than pure milk. There is a pretty sure test of the purity of honey; standing for a little time, especially in cool weather, it will solidify or candy; honey that does not is not pure; yet the majority of people reject candied honey as adulterated.

Most of the States have enacted laws against this adulteration. New York has made it a misdemeanor to adulterate or to sell adulterated honey, and put the law in force in September. But it is impossible to enforce it. It is not always possible to tell when honey has been adulterated; chemical analysis fails often; the polariscope is surer; but so long as the demand for the adulterated is so strong, who can stop it? ask the dealers.

HE WANTED AN AD.

As he shot into the editorial arena he wiped his bald head with his gaudy silk handkerchief.

"I want to be attacked," he said as he winked at the answers-to-correspondents editor.

"The man who attacks people, and who sheds the innocent gore of indignant readers who have had their names spelled wrong in the paper, can be found down the passage, second door on the left," said the mild young man who was inditing an answer to Julia B—'s request for a receipt to remove freckles from her ear.

"You misunderstood my meaning, young man," said the stranger, as he dived into his pocket and produced a 6 x 8 business card, on which was printed:

> B. H. PULKERHAM,
> Dealer in Choice Teas, Unparalleled Coffee, Cheapest Sugars, and all kinds of Family Groceries, Domestic and Imported, at the Great Continental Store and Home Supply Emporium.
> No. 93 Washington Avenue.

"Well, Mr. Pulkerham, what can we do for you?" asked the editor.

"You see, mister, it's just this way," said the grocer as he took a chair. "Business ain't what it orter to be, and ordinary advertising don't seem to draw worth a cent. Now, ever since Sanford, who keeps the tea store on the corner above, was accused of having two wives living—one in the penitentiary and the other hawking fruit in St. Louis—the women flock to his store to buy their groceries. Now, if you would write a column saying that I had eloped with two beautiful daughters of one of our leading citizens, and my wife, for the sake of the family, had kept the horrid secret to herself, it might draw Sanford's customers to my store. I'll go away for a few days, and the sympathy my wife will get will give my business a boom that will tide us over these dull days."

"You are not half as much of a fool as you look," said the editor.

"Well, that is neither here nor there. You send up one of your young men to get some points as to my bad character from the neighbors. Give me a whole column; don't spare me; say that I keep my old grandmother chained in the cellar. Pile it on thick as you have a mind to. I'll pay the bill—full rates. A whole column, remember, on the first page, with a big head-line. So long."—Texas Siftings.

OMNIPOTENT ONENESS.

One thing at a time, because there's not time enough for two things at a time.

The economy of religion, politics, and business focuses its strength into one concentrated point, that by its oneness it may stand in the full majesty of single identity.

The man who thinks he can do everything is the jackass of all trades. No man can do two things as well as he can do one thing. No book or play with more than one leading character has ever gained public approval. The business man who can sell goods as well as he can buy goods is a mighty poor business man both ways.

The strength of success is the oneness of it.

Two lamps do not appear to give twice as much light as one. One might as well mix soup with his fish, and live upon semi-fluid hash, as to attempt to say more than one thing at a time, do more than one thing at a time, and advertise more than one thing at a time. Two good things are not twice as well appreciated as one good thing.

A nail squarly hit on the head and well driven will hold better than ten nails bent in the driving. One point remembered is better than ten points forgotten.

The advertisement which tells everything about the man who advertises, and as much about the goods he has for sale, interesting as it may be to the advertiser himself, and to those in his employ, is weak dish water to the reader.

An advertisement of shawls in the same column and closely connected with a similar announcement of window shades, a lows the window shade argument to detract from it, and itself detracts from the window shade argument.

People like to buy something which is especially advertised. They like to feel that on a certain day the great specialty in window shades, or shawls, or something else, and that they can expect on that day something extra for their money. This is an age of specialties, and regular goods must be advertised as specialties, to attract special attention.

When it is necessary for a firm to advertise a large number of things at the same time, these articles should be divided by lines, borders, or intervening white space, so that each article will have an identity of its own, and not be mixed up with other similar or dissimilar articles.

The woman who desires to buy some sheeting will read and be guided by an advertisement which is all sheeting when she will pass by an advertisement which speaks of sheeting, hose, blankets, handkerchiefs, and other things.

While parlor stoves and ranges are in the same general line, it is far better to advertise the range in one advertisement, and the stove in another, giving each the full identity of itself alone rather than to combine them in one general advertisement

An advertisement, besides advertising only one thing, should attempt to make but one point at a time, for one point will be remembered while a great many points will be forgotten, and too many points allow each point to handicap the effect and strength of all the other points.

There are cases where description must be given, and there is no objection to it, but the descriptive matter can be set in type of reasonable size so as to allow room for the largest heading aud the greatest display, there being sufficient argument or interest in the heading and the opening part of the descriptive matter to make the person read further, if he be a possible customer. The advertisement can have all the advantages of brevity, and yet contain a large amount of descriptive matter, because the advertisment can be practically in three parts—an attractive heading, followed by a short argument in large type and complete in itself, both preceding the descriptive matter.—By Nath'l C. Fowler, Jr.

Burglars broke into J. T. Park's grocery store, Tilsonburg, Tuesday night. They entered by a back window. The till was broken open with a chisel, which they left on the counter. Cash amounting to ten or fifteen dollars was taken. No goods are missed as yet.

John Haines, an employee of Marshall, a London tea dealer, was arraigned at the Police Court in Guelph the other day charged with selling tea without the required license. The defense set up the plea that Haines was the owner of the tea and in consequence was not subject to the license provision of the law. The magistrate reserved judgment until Friday.

Go into almost any town in the orange-growing districts says the Florida Farmer, and you will see the women using the wild sour fruit exactly as our housekeepers use soap. They cut the oranges in halves and rub the flat exposed pulp on the floor. The acid in the oranges doubtless does the cleansing, but at any rate the boards are as white as snow after the application. It is thought that lemons would be better than oranges for this purpose, because of the additional acidity.

Narcisse Quintal, wholesale grocer, Montreal, was, through his counsel, a complainant in the Recorder's Court there a few days ago against the city assessors. He is the owner of property at 192 St. Lawrence street, and in 1892 this property was assessed at $23,000, but this year the assessors made it $30,000. They were asked to reduce this, and did so to $27,000, and on this decision Mr. Quintal appeals, contending that the property has not increased in value, and that no improvements have been made since the last assessment. The papers were sent to the city attorney, the same proceedings having been done in other cases.

Hamilton Spectator: Benony Vansickle of Beverly, president of the Lynden Cheese Factory Co., has sued I. W. Kelly for slander. The statement of claim alleges that Mr. Kelly told several people in the neighborhood that President Vansickle had been caught skimming the cream off the milk in the cans before it was sent to the factory. Also, that the defendant wrote to the directorate of the company notifying them that he was going to stop sending milk to the factory, "because he could not send it honestly and be on an equal footing with our president." Mr. Vansickle claims $5,000 damages. A motion was made in the suit this morning for further particulars.

There are on view in the C.P.R. offices, corner King and Yonge streets, some fine specimens of pineapples and bananas from the Fiji islands. The fruit was brought over on the Arawa of the Canadian-Australian line by Hon. Mackenzie Bowell, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and was picked Nov. 24. The experiment proves the ease with which a trade in fruit can be done, as no special efforts to protect the exhibit were taken. The pineapples especially are fine specimens.—Empire, Toronto, Dec. 22.

There were present: Messrs. John Rainsford, Clinton; Wm. M. Gray, Seaforth; Mr. Webster, Mooretown, and Thomas Carter, Sarnia. The matter under discussion was left open, to be taken up again at an adjourned meeting to be held at Clinton.

PURE GOLD "AT HOME."

Harmony between employer and employees is not by any means a condition that is common. Where, therefore, such a happy state does exist people are not long in finding it out. It stands out upon the horizon of the business world like a mountain upon the plain, and is seen far and near.

ALEX JARDINE.

Among the comparatively few firms in which this harmony exists is that of the Pure Gold Manufacturing Co., of Toronto. This was reflected in the "At Home" held at Harry Webb's Thursday night of last week. There were some seventy couples present. They comprised the employees of the firm and their friends, and they were all there partaking of the bounty of Mr. A. Jardine, the proprietor of the firm, all the expenses being borne by him.

Excellent was the arrangement, and affable and in good spirits the company. It was not surprising that under such conditions the "At Home was a success. There was only one circumstance that in any way tended to alloy the pleasures of those present; that was the absence of their employer through indisposition. "I am so sorry Mr. Jardine is not here to-night," were in effect the remarks THE GROCER overheard more than once during the half dozen hours or more that were so pleasantly wiled away dancing to Glionna's music, or playing cards or the many other games provided. Next to Mr. Jardine, the success of the entertainment was due largely to Messrs. J. D. Roberts and George Anderson, the manager and accountant respectively.

It was about 11:30 p.m. when the guests were summoned to the banqueting hall, where they sat down to a supper gotten up in Webb's well-known style. Mr. George Anderson presided, and his first duty after the different courses had been exhausted was to read letters of regret at being unable to be present from Messrs. A. Jardine and James Strachan and telegrams expressive of the same from Messrs. A. Frend, Robert Jardine, and W. H. Dunn. Mr. A. Jardine's letter read as follows:

Will you kiudly convey to the members of Pure Gold Manufacturing Co.'s staff and friends my sincere regret that on account of my recent illness, from which I have not quite recovered, I do not feel able to be with you this evening. I have looked forward with pleasure to this gathering at about the close of another year, fully believing that it would do us all good to ment together in a social way like one large family. Many of you have been connected with the Pure Gold Manufacturing Co. almost from its commencement, and I am quite sure feel like members of one family, although living in different homes; and this is right, and the stronger the family feeling becomes, and the more loyal each member of the family is to every other member the better it will be for all. Let us then endeavor to strengthen the family feeling as the years go on, each one doing his part and helping to build up the good character of the family and of the business with which he is connected.

I trust that you will spend a most happy and enjoyable evening together, and that we will have many more such evenings, at which I will always hope to be one of the members. With best wishes, I am,

Yours faithfully,

ALEX. JARDINE.

Toronto, Dec 21st, 1893.

One paragraph from Mr. Strachan's letter was particularly to the point: "I would like to have gone to night for the sake of Auld Lang Syne, to shake hands with the old friends, and to show that although not enjoying a share in the profits I still have an interest in the business."

The letters read, Mr. T. Lister, amid much applause, sang the following verses, which had been composed for the occasion, to the tune of the "Maple Leaf Forever."

"THE PURE GOLD GOODS FOREVER."

Ten years ago, I'd have you know,
A. Jardine said to himself,
I'll make pure goods and sell them too,
They shall be on each shelf.
How nobly he has kept his word,
And we shall all endeavor
To do our best to have folks shout
The Pure Gold goods forever.

CHORUS—The Pure Gold fame will never wane,
The name shall live forever,
Here's health and wealth to A. Jardine,
The Pure Gold goods forever.

Our name is known from zone to zone,
People rise and call us blest,
The grocers and the public know
That pure goods are the best.
Our motto is, to be on top,
And promptly to deliver
The finest goods in Canada,
The Pure Gold goods forever.

On one thing we can all agree.
Pure Gold goods can not be beat;
In quality, nor yet in price
Our foes can not compete.
Then if success our efforts crown,
We all must pull together
From "Drummer" down to office boy,
The Pure Gold goods forever.

The toast, "The Pure Gold Company," brought Mr. Frank Gallow to his feet. His reply was brief and to the point. It dealt with the rapid growth of the firm's business, the harmony that existed between employer and employees, and expressed regret that Mr. Jardine was unable to be present to speak for himself.

GEORGE F. ANDERSON.

Next Jas. Miln favored the company with a song, and then, to one at least of those present, came a surprise. The chairman rose and informed the company that Manager Roberts was on the following Monday to take "for better or for worse" a young lady living in Ottawa.

While Mr. Roberts was rubbing his nose and trying to hide himself behind a diminutive plant, Mr. Sutton rose and said, while the guests craned their necks and became excitedly interested: Our friend Mr. Roberts is about to repeat words of great solemnity, "I will love and cherish through sickness and health, through prosperity and adversity, etc., until death." But what I want to say is that the employees of the Pure Gold wish you a long period of prosperity wherever you and yours may be placed. (Hear, hear, and applause.) I will give you that injunction, "It is not good for man to live alone." (Mr. Gallow—Rub it into him.) I have had forty years' experience. When I was young I used to pray that I might be saved from a bachelor's life and from a bachelor's home. (Laughter.) Now I have muchpleasure on behalf of the Pure Gold employees and our commercial co-workers of presenting you, Mr. Roberts, with these beautiful pieces of furniture. (Just then some one unveiled a large parlor secretary and a parlor cabinet.) Now, sir, we hope that when you look at them they will remind you that the employees of the Pure Gold endorse the steps you are about to take. (Loud applause.)

Mr. Roberts was taken by surprise and was completely non-plussed. "You know how I feel about this thing. All I can say is that I thank you from the bottom of my heart," said he feelingly, as everybody applauded loud and long.

The pieces of furniture were more than usually elaborate.

Mr. Jephcott spoke for the ladies. James Lester and Fred. J. Ramsay followed with songs, and the guests returned to the ball room, where dancing was resumed and kept up with eclat for another two or three hours.

THE GROCER apologises to Mr. Jardine for having surreptitiously obtained a photograph of him from which to reproduce the accompanying cut. But it was the only way it could be obtained; and then everything is fair in love and war—and in newspaper work. A photograph of Mr. Roberts, the manager of the company, was produced in THE GROCER of October 27.

PERSONAL MENTION.

W. Law of the firm of Law & Co., Victoria Harbor, is no longer a bachelor, and many are the congratulations that are being heaped upon him thereat. He was married on the 20th inst. to Miss Blanche Gray of Coldwater. Her father is John Gray, and George Gray, the world's champion shot putter, is a brother. THE GROCER tenders its congratulations to the newly-married couple.

Francis J. Gillespie, general merchant, Uptergrove, is a candidate for the reeveship of Mara. Mr. Gillespie is at present deputy-reeve, and his friends say there is no question regarding his being found in the higher position next year.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

There is very little doing in dry goods except the filling of a few sorting orders for winter goods, and none of the houses expect much change until after the turn of the year.

A new feature this week is the easy tone on cotton goods, which is characteristic chiefly of colored lines, which are depressed owing to rather heavy stock. In fact it is said that some of the mills intend to shut down. Prices on white and grey cottons have been marked down from 7 to 8 per cent., or equivalent to about ½c. per yard. Demand for these goods however on spring account has been good and continues so, mill agents stating that their establishments have been booked a considerable way ahead on these goods.

In connection with colored cottons, it is stated that what some sellers feared has happened, viz., that American goods are being offered here at inside figures. But although the report has circulation we could not ascertain anything definite about the matter as to what the quantity was or the price, and it is worthy of remark that the trade as a whole don't attach much importance to the matter.

Remittances are fairly good on the whole except from the Northwest which, as usual, is behind other sections. Returns from Quebec and Ontario on the contrary seem to be satisfactory.

Glover & Brais' travelers, during the ensuing season will offer to the trade what should prove to be good selling lines of gents' furnishing. In neckwear especially they will offer a variety of designs at values which are bound to make them good sellers. The variety of their assortment of stock is another feature.

Gault Bros., as usual, will be in the van in the matter of tweeds, both imported and domestic. Their samples, which they are preparing at present, show a fine range of Scotch tweeds. The colors next spring will as last year run principally to quiet tones, which should make very handsome suitings.

Mathews, Towers & Co., whose travelers have been out already with spring samples, say that the indications are favourable. They carry a full range of blazers, neglige shirts, white dress shirts, unlaundried shirts, collars, cuffs, etc., etc. In braces one special line, the merits of which have been fully described before, promises to be a very good seller.

S. Greenshields, Son & Co. will offer on spring account this year a range of dress goods which they claim will be hard to surpass. In black goods, especially for ladies' wear, they will have some fabrics that won't remain long on the shelves of any buyer.

During the fall, in September, October and November, Thouret, Fitzgibbon & Co. booked heavy orders for gloves, hosiery, etc., which are among their specialties. They finished up their work in gloves on spring account during November and the early part of December and report that their well-known line of "Jammet" goods proved better sellers than ever.

TORONTO MARKETS.

Another quiet week has passed in the wholesale dry goods trade, broken only by slightly increased demands from city retailers during the last few days of last week. The rush for holiday goods at the city stores led to the necessity for sorting orders with prompt delivery. Out-of-town dealers could not order up to the last moment because of the time it would take for the goods to reach them.

Travelers are mostly in town, but will go out again almost immediately, carrying full ranges of spring and summer goods. Everything woolen will be laid aside, and cotton goods of all descriptions taken up.

Dress goods for spring show no special feature. One house has a line of broken-check goods of very pretty colors and taking patterns, and which they claim to have found a most rapid seller. Shots are shown in great profusion both in plain and fancies, and also in fancy weaves. Ombre effects are a new thing and quite taking. These are all in light-weight woolens. A few light-weight hopsackings and fancy diagonals are shown. Wool delaines in dark grounds and smaller patterns than usual are shown by most of the houses in long ranges.

Cotton goods are rumoured to be easier, but so far no confirmation has been obtained of this. The colored cotton mills are not behind with their orders, and if they are much ahead a slight discount may be obtainable on certain classes of colours. It can be safely said that the price of cottons does not tend upwards.

Ten carloads of human bones were recently shipped from Mexico to the United States. They are to be used for fertilizing and sugar-refining purpose.

Beginning Dec. 18th, the flour rate from Duluth to New York will be 30 cents per 100 pounds, or 60 cents a barrel. On the Lake Michigan route, via Milwaukee or Green Bay, the rate is 28 cents. These rates are 15 cents a barrel less than the rail rate in force at the close of navigation, and are the lowest ever obtained by millers at Duluth.

The annual meeting of the patrons of the Northport cheese factory, was held last week The salesman's salary was reduced to twenty-one dollars and Mr. Ira David, who has had the position for the last six years, resigned. Mr. T. C. Demill was then selected with S. Cronk, Eben Fox and R. J. Crothers as directors. Mr. James Collins has been engaged to manufacture the cheese next year.

Though a man may have a rasping voice

It's sweeter than music when
He says: "Here's what I owe you."

DON'T PREVARICATE.

It is singular how the impression still holds in some minds that a person may be a little too honest for his own good; that a certain amount of untruthfulness and dishonesty is needful, especially in trade, says an exchange. And yet each one individually persists in preferring to deal with honest people. A professional man in a responsible position who had numerous appointments in his gift, set aside a very skilful employee for deliberately attempting to deceive him. He was deaf to the appeals with regard to his ability, saying:

"When a man lies to me once, that is all I want to do with him."

There is nothing so fatal to a young tradesman as the whisper, even, that he prevaricates; that you cannot depend on his word about his goods, and that he does not hesitate to defraud to the extent of a few pence, or a dime. Not many will "multiply words" about such trifles, but they quietly drop off trading at that place.

A lady was asked why she preferred shopping in the city, even for little things, to buying them at the stores in her own village? She replied in substance, that she had been repeatedly deceived and over-charged in several stores she mentioned, and advantage was taken of her ignorance of goods. "No, in the large stores in the city," she said, "they have one price for all; the goods turn out as represented. Every article sold and the clerk who sells it, even the cash boy who delivers it at the wrapping counter, is noted down, so that employees have no opportunity of defrauding on their own account. Honest intentions are stamped on every department, and even country buyers feel themselves safe."

Perhaps it is this feeling which has largely helped to make the leading stores of great cities such a centre of country trade for all the region round about. Another reason is that customers are not importuned to buy. One leading retailer relates that in his boyish years he felt shy of entering the grand stores, and he made up his mind that when he owned one it should be a place where country people would feel at home, and where they would not be pressed to buy what they did not wish. It seemed like a boy's day dream in those hard-working years, but the energy and steadfast principle he brought to bear on everything he undertook soon made his "manifest destiny" apparent to many thoughtful observers.

There are others now in small establishments in country places who are in process of training for a similar future. One I have in mind, whose small store is always well filled, and the people go out of their way, and pass two large establishments in order to shop there. Goods are always as represented, and please rather better when viewed at home than in the store. Everything is fresh and tasteful, and you unconsciously carry away the impression that the young man is even more desirous of obliging you than of selling you goods. Nobody will take the trouble of bringing home from the city what they can get at W——'s.

J. D. ROBERTS MARRIED.

A few months ago J. D. Roberts was taken in to manage the business of the Pure Gold Manufacturing Company. Now he has taken in a young lady to be both manager and partner in his household. The lady's name was Miss Johnstone, daughter of W.J. Johnstone, inspector of standards in the Inland Revenue Department, Ottawa. The interesting ceremony took place in Ottawa Monday last, the officiating clergyman being Rev. Dr. Paterson, of St. Andrews, Quebec. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts are spending their honeymoon in the West, and THE GROCER hopes that the sunshine of happiness will ever follow them.

TRAVELERS ELECT OFFICERS.

The annual meeting of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association was held in the Y.M.C.A. parlors, Hamilton, Tuesday afternoon. The reports presented were satisfactory. Thomas Gain and E. Fielding were appointed a committee to make arrangements for better hotel accommodation. A proposition to publish a monthly magazine was discussed, and E. Fielding and H. Matthews were appointed a committee to further consider the suggestion. H. Matthews and E. Fielding were appointed delegates to the Y.M.C.A. Convention, to be held in Toronto in January. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: H. Matthews, Toronto, president; R. Coleman, vice-president; E. Fielding, Toronto, secretary; R. M. Stuart, Hamilton, treasurer; Rev. Mr. Shorey, Toronto, chaplain. The meeting adjourned, to meet in Toronto on Feb. 23.

MAKING FLOUR.

Flour was formerly made by simply grinding wheat at one operation to the finest possible flour, and then separating by sieves the flour from the bran, necessarily grinding in much of the bran with the flour and discoloring it, while much of the very best material was separated with the bran and lost, explains an exchange. The later common method is to grind very coarsely the wheat several times, using strong blasts of air between each grinding to separate the bran from the granulated interior portion, and at last crush it to flour, relieved of all the bran. The new electric method consists in passing the middlings under revolving hard rubber cylinders, electrified by contact with sheepskin. The particles of bran fly up to meet the rubber, from which they are turned off in a side channel, and purified middlings freed from bran, passing through rollers to become fine flour.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Dec. 28, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The wholesale men are taking life easy this week. There is some replenishing of stock on the part of retailers. Their wants are of course largely for goods of a holiday character, and are therefore easily supplied. The travelers will resume their respective routes Tuesday next. The holiday trade seems to have been on the whole fairly satisfactory, stocks remaining over being small; in fact in some instances they are practically cleaned out. This is particularly so in regard to selected Valencias, to replenish which shipments are now on the way from New York. The holiday trade in green fruits was particularly good, both with wholesalers and retailers. There have been no changes in prices during the week, although Valencia raisins are 2s firmer on account of higher freight rates. Sugars, too, if anything, are steadier than a week ago, but there is not much doing in them, particularly outside granulated. Slight improvements are still reported in payments. The trade is making preparations for taking stock.

CANNED GOODS.

Nothing new has developed during the week. The movement is of course naturally light at the moment. Tomatoes, peas and corn are moving slowly at 80 to 85c. A few of the better brands of salmon are selling at $1.25 to $1.35 in talls and $1 50 in flats. A few of the better brands of lobster are also going out at $1.85 to $2.10 for talls and $2.40 to $2,50 for flats. Demand for canned fruits is limited, and prices are unchanged. We quote: Peaches, $3 to $3.25 for 3's, $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's; raspberries and strawberries, $2 to $2.10.

COFFEES.

There is still a good demand for the better Rio coffee that is in stock here, but no new features have developed during the week. We quote green, in bags, as follows:—Rio, 22 to 23c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 22 to 23c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 27 to 28c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

NUTS.

A little sorting up is being done in this line at unchanged prices We quote:—Brazil nuts 13 to 15c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 28 to 32c. a pound; Tarragona almonds, 12½ to 14c.; peanuts, 11 to 12c. for roasted and 8 to 10c. for green; cocoa nuts, $4.50 to $5 per sack; Grenoble walnuts, 12½ to 15c.; Marbot walnuts 12 to 13c.; Bordeaux walnuts 11½ to 12½c.; filberts, 9¾ to 10¼c.; pecans 13½ to 15c.; nuts, per bushel, hickory, $2.

RICE.

There is no change, demand being almost nil except for fancy imported. We quote: Ordinary 3⅝ to 3¾c., Montreal Japan 5 to 5¼c., imported Japan at 5¾ to 6¼c.

SPICES.

Demand keeps up fairly well for spices without change in prices. We quote: Pure black pepper at 13 to 15c.; pure white at 20 to 28c.; pure Jamaica ginger, 25 to 27c.; cloves, 14 to 25c.; pure mixed spice, 30 to 35c.

SUGAR.

There seems to be a little more confidence in prices than there was a week ago, and the refiners refuse to make any concessions whatever. The ruling price for granulated is still 4⅝c., and 3½ to 4⅛c. is still the range for yellows.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Trade has fallen off some in both syrups and molasses. Stocks of syrups are light, and some difficulty is experienced in getting supplies of certain kinds. As to price, syrups run all the way from 23c. up to 48 and 50c. per gallon, while 30 to 35c. for New Orleans molasses are the ruling figures.

TEA.

There is not much doing in teas at the moment, but the market rules strong; but next month will probably see the usual seasonable activity set in. Japans are receiving the most attention, and fair quantities of Indian and Ceylon teas are going out. Ruling prices are: Japans, 14 to 38c.; Indians, Assams, Ceylons, 18 to 45c.; Young Hyson, 35 to 40c.

DRIED FRUIT.

There is scarcely any off-stalk Valencia raisins on the market, and selected is difficult to find, but some car lots are on the way from New York. Advices this week state that Valencia raisins will cost 25 per cent more than a month ago to lay down in Toronto on account of higher freights. We quote: Off-stalk, 4 to 4½c.; fine off-stalk, 4¾ to 5c.; selected, 5½ to 5¾c.; layers, selected, 5½ to 5¾c. Sultana raisins are quiet and unchanged at 5½ to 9½c. Malaga raisins remain unchanged as before. We quote: London layers, $2.25; connoisseur clusters, $3; dessert clusters, $3.75 to $4; quarter flats Dehesas, $1.30. There is an increased demand for Bosnia prunes at 5½ to 7½c.; cask fruit will be here this week and they will sell at about 4 to 4½c.; French prunes are quiet at 4 to 4½c. in cases, and 3¾c. in bags. Demand for currants is still fair and prices remain unchanged. We quote: Provincials 3¾ too 4c. in brls. and half brls.; Filiatras, 4 to 4½c. in brls., and 4¼ to 4¾c. in half brls.; Patras, 5 to 5½c. in brls., 5¼ to 5¾c. in half brls, 4⅞ to 6⅜c. in cases; Vostizzas, 6½ to 7½c. in cases, 6¾ to 7¾c. in half cases; Panariti 9 to 10c. A part of the long-expected second shipment of Eleme figs arrived Friday last, and these were distributed for the Christmas trade, but the greater part does not seem to have reached here till this week. These were in consequence too late to be of much benefit to the holiday trade. The figs now on the market do not run uniform, some so-called 10-pound boxes only weighing about 8 pounds. Retailers are therefore advised to buy by the net weight; 10 to 11c. is the idea as to price. Natural figs are quoted at 5¼ to 6½c. Dates are in good demand at 5¼ to 6c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

People are asking for good butter, but this article is rather scarce. There is, however, an abundance of second quality stuff, which has a tendency to keep the market dull. There is no export demand for dairy butter, the little movement that there is being for local consumption. There is no enquiry from the Coast for creamery butter, except for the winter article, for which holders are asking 24½ to 25c. for December make and 25c. for January. We quote: Dairy—Choice tubs, 20 to 22c.; large rolls, 19 to 20c.; pound rolls, 22 to 25c. Creamery—Tubs, 25 to 26c., and pound prints sell at the same price.

The feeling in cheese is still firm. Stocks held in Canada are not so heavy as they were at this time last year, and there is none offering. Demand fair at 11 to 11½c. for late makes.

GREEN FRUIT.

The Christmas trade was satisfactory both in regard to volume of business and to collections. Between Saturday and Tuesday evenings four carloads of lemons arrived on this market, and they have been all pretty well absorbed. The market is firmer on lemons, and it is likely to maintain its strong position for another month. Oranges are firm, and they are pretty well cleaned up. Bananas have been in little better demand, but prices remain as before. Apples are much higher and first-class fruit sells up as high as $4 50 per barrel. The demand is not heavy, nor are offerings by any means free. Handlers look for a lower market about the latter part of February or the beginning of March, but it will be on stock that they would not be warranted in shipping. We quote: Oranges—Floridas, $2.50 to $3. Mandarines and Tangarines, $2 to $2.25 half box. Lemons, Messinas, $4.75 to $5 for 300's, $4.50 to $4.75 for 360's; Floridas, $4 to $4 50; bananas, $1.25 to $2; California pears, $2.50 to $3 per box; Catawba grapes, 3½ to 4c. per lb.; Malaga grapes, $4.50 to $6 per keg. Cranberries, New Jersey, $7 per bbl.; Canadian, $5 to $6 per barrel; boxes, $2 to $2.15. Apples, good to choice, $3 to $4 50; second quality, $2.25 to $3. California dried fruit—Apricots, 17½c. per lb.; peaches, 14c. per lb.; nectarines, 15c.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The market is somewhat unsettled for dressed hogs. The demand is still for light hogs, running from 100 to 150 pounds, and for these weights as high as $6.50, or even better, is being paid. For anything above the weights specified the price is easier. Demand last week for smoked meats was a little more active, particularly long clear. Prices are unchanged.

BACON—Long clear, 9¼ to 9½c.; smoked backs, 11 to 11½c.; bellies, 12½ to 13c.; rolls, 9¾ to 10c.

HAMS—Unchanged, at 12 to 12½c. for smoked, and at 11c. for pickled.

LARD—Pure Canadian 11¼c. in tubs, 11¼c. in pails and 10 to 10¼c. in tierces. Compound 8½ to 8¾c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $17 to $17.50, Canadian short cut $18 to $18.50, shoulder mess $16.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores, 5c., hindquarters 6½ to 8c., mutton 5 to 6c., lamb, 6 to 8c., veal 7½ to 9c.

MARKETS—Continued

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—No change. No transactions in lots are announced, but good beans are being jobbed out in small lots at $1.35 to $1.40 ordinarily, while choice hand-picked would probably fetch 10c. per bushel more than the outside figure.

DRIED APPLES—There is no apparent disposition on the part of any one to do business. Holders are asking 5½ to 5¾c. and jobbers are selling at 5¾ to 6c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Quiet and unchanged at 10¼ to 10½c. in a jobbing way.

EGGS—The conditions are much the same as before, fresh still being quoted at 17 to 18c. and pickled at 15 to 16c.

POULTRY—The Christmas market was cleaned up fairly well, about the only thing left over being a few turkeys. Prices are much as before. We quote: Turkeys, 8½ to 10c. per lb.; geese, 6 to 7c.; chickens, 30 to 45c. per pair; ducks, 40 to 65c. per pair.

POTATOES—The market is a little easier, the idea for carlots on track being 52½c., while out of store 55 to 60c. is quoted.

HONEY—Dull and unchanged at 8 to 9c. for extracted white clover in tins, and 14 to 15c. for sections.

HOPS—Market quiet and unchanged at 18 to 20c. for new and 11 to 12½ for 92's.

ONIONS—Quiet and unchanged at 75 to 85c. per crate for Spanish and $1 per bag for Canadian.

FISH.

There is nothing new to report this week. Business continues quiet, and of course will remain so this week. Prices are unchanged. We quote: Fresh sea salmon, 17 to 19c.; skinned and boned cod-fish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $4.50 per barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 13 to 15c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2.50 per hundred and 4c. per lb.; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7½c.; oysters in bulk, $1.20 to $1.25 for standard and $1.75 selected; kippered cisco, 2½ to 4c. each; ciscoes, $1 22 per 100; salt mackerel in bulk, 10c. per lb.; pike, 6 to 6½c. per lb.; black bass, 10c. per lb.; haddock and cod, 5½c per lb; steak cod, 7 to 8c.; chicken halibut, 10 to 12c.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW

HIDES—Are not quite as brisk as they were, owing to stock-taking which is being carried on at the present time by the different dealers, although some good sales are reported at prices varying according to quality. We quote 4c. for No. 1 and 3c. for No. 2.

SKINS—Are the same as last week, nothing much doing. However dealers think there will be a change ere long; in fact it is reported that the prospects are brighter than they have been for some time for a good trade at the beginning of the year.

WOOL—There is no change. A change, however, is hoped for soon. Prices remain at last week's decline. For extra quality of pulled wool dealers are paying 17 to 18c., and for fine combing 20c.

TALLOW—Is in good demand and dealers find it difficult to supply the trade. Prices are about the same as last report. We quote: Culled tallow, 4½c.; rough, 2c.; select quality, 5 to 5¼c.

SALT.

Trade is a little quiet at present, although some good sales have been made both in car and job lots. We quote: Dairy, $1.25; coarse sacks, 58c.; fine sacks, 70c.; barrel salt, coarse, 95c.; American rock, $10 per ton.

SEEDS.

There has been no material change in anything but alsike. That has declined 30 to 50c. per bushel, according to grade. Medium and low grades have declined more relatively than the finer grades, the foreign demand for the latter not having dropped off so perceptibly. Red clover is moving slowly at the old prices, and much the same may be said of timothy. We quote: Alsike, $5.75 to $6.25 for good to prime seed, and $6.50 to $7 for choice to fancy. Red clover, $5.50 to $5.75 ordinarily, and $5 90 to $6 for choice to fancy. Timothy, $1 to $1.25 for inferior and $1.50 to $1.60 for prime, while choice to fancy bring 15 to 20c. more.

PETROLEUM.

Trade continues brisk on the Toronto market at unchanged prices. We quote: 5 to 10 barrel lots, imperial gallon Toronto—Canadian, 12½ to 13c.; carbon safety, 16½ to 17c.; Canadian water white, 18½ to 19c.; photogene, 22c.

The Petrolia Advertiser in its weekly report, says: The Oil Exchange has once more been resuscitated and the crude end of the business is assuming an activity that has not been noticeable for some months. The above quotation of $1 for crude is for oil in warehouse tanks, or in other words for warehouse receipts. The direct delivery system, which we have so strongly condemned for some time, is practically a thing of the past, and refiners will have to come to market to buy. As an instance of the feeling on the Change we may state that a buyer's option for March oil was sold yesterday at $1.05. The buyer immediately duplicated his offer, but although there were several producers on the market there were none ready to sell at that price. That crude will find a ready sale at $1.10 in January we have no doubt. By next week we expect to see an important change in the market. Refined is being shipped at the above quotations and business is brisk.

MARKET NOTES.

Alsike seed is from 30 to 50c. per bushel lower.

The Toronto market has been about cleaned out of blue fruit.

Perkins, Ince & Co. are in receipt of a shipment of Turkish layer figs.

Eby, Blain & Co. are in receipt of their second shipment of Panariti currants.

J. T. Daly of Toronto and Thomas Griffith of Welland, both grocers, are dead.

Oppenheimer Bros, wholesale grocers, Vancouver, B.C., have been incorporated.

Valencia raisins are 2s. dearer than a month ago on account of the higher freights.

Clemes Bros. received two carloads of bananas this week which are turning out well.

Sloan & Crowther have a fresh supply of Eleme figs in 10-lb. and "seven crown" boxes.

The first consignment of salt was received this week by the Toronto Salt Works, from the new salt wells at Windsor. The quality is excellent, being manufactured by the "vacuum process." This company intends making a specialty of dairy and table salt, which will be much superior to any manufactured in this country.

Apples have sold on the Toronto market this week as high as $4 per barrel by the carlot.

Dawson & Co. have this week received one car of fine lemons and three cars of oranges.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are in receipt of a shipment of Arguimbau's layer Valencia raisins.

Saturday last saw the largest day's business that Dawson & Co.'s store at Brampton ever had.

Edgar & Macdonald, groceries and provisions, Toronto, have dissolved. H. G. Macdonald continues.

W. H. Gillard & Co. report that their shipment of fine layer figs are going out fast and are of fine quality.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are offering canned salmon at $1.10 per dozen, which they claim is prime red sockeye fish.

Smith & Keighley are in receipt of a shipment of Halolwee dates, which they claim to be offering at low figures.

Hugh Walker & Son of Guelph have just received a car of fancy Florida oranges, which they say is extra quality and right in price.

Davidson & Hay are in receipt of a shipment of Eleme figs, in two-pound, "seven crown," and ten-pound boxes; also Hallowee dates.

Smith & Keighley received a shipment of Eleme figs this week which should have arrived in time for the Christmas trade, and they are now offering them at low prices.

Much of the success with which Tetley's tea has met on the Canadian market is due to the push and energy of David Brown, who has represented the firm since the Montreal branch was started," said a gentleman from the east the other day.

Shipments of the famous "Guild Hall" brand of lemons, every box of which contains a certificate, have been received this week by McWilliams & Everist and Clemes Bros.

Charles R. Cooper, manager of the Toronto Salt Works, has been granted the exclusive right to handle and take charge of the city trade for the new salt firm at Windsor, Ont.

The stock of groceries, etc., of R. J. McKill, Simcoe, has been sold at 60 cents on the dollar. The stock was invoiced at $946.86, and the purchaser was George McKill, of Simcoe.

Old as it is in name, and established as it is in reputation, the firm of Huntly & Palmer, the well-known English biscuit manufacturers, it is still full of push and energy. During the week wholesale trade has received samples of the firm's Universal Biscuits, in small tin boxes, the contents being packed in tissue paper and cotton-batting to prevent them being broken in transit across the Atlantic.

W. H. Gillard & Co. direct the attention of the trade to their baking powder advertisement on another page, where they offer special value in this line. The "Diamond" has stood the test, on a market where competition is keen, for one year, and to-day it commands a very large sale. Special brands of baking powder put up by Gillard & Co. are meeting with great success, and many retailers confine themselves exclusively to one brand under their own label.

Perkins, Ince & Co.'s famous "Secret Blend," which has been prepared every Christmas for the last twenty years or more, received a great deal of attention last Saturday. The mixer of the "blend" is an adept, and the interest created in it was so great that most of the wholesalers, their travelers and their clerks called in to sample. All pronounced it good and surpassing anything they had in stock or ever expected to have. And now they are looking forward to next Christmas.

It would appear that Gillard & Co.'s special brand of black tea, "Imperial Congou," is a special favorite in the Northwest. In a letter received from their Northwest representative, Mr. John Moust, it is stated that never before had he seen such success attend the sale of any special line of tea offered in that territory, and his business experience covered many years. Not only did the consumers express complete satisfaction as to the quality of the brand, but retailers remarked that a steady trade for Imperial was worth more to them than many other lines in their business combined. Over one hundred chests have been sold over Mr. Mouat's ground during the past two months.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Dec. 28, 1893.

GROCERIES.

There were few features this week in the Montreal grocery market, the only movement there was to note being in dried fruit and lines of holiday goods, which was of a moderate character. Values generally are firm, there being no change to record in any of the leading lines. Tea is quiet, and the same is to be noted in regard to coffees, which do not reflect the weakness reported from New York. Spices are unchanged, and sugar and molasses have been in moderate demand. Canned goods and fish are as previously noted. Payments are fair for the season.

DRIED FRUIT.

Dried fruit has been the most active line of the grocery market, there having been considerable enquiry for Valencia raisins. Round lots have been placed at 4c. per lb. for ordinary, 4½c for prime fruit, the latter being very scarce in this market. The same can be said of layers, which have changed hands in straight lots at 5½c. per lb. We quote for a jobbing business as follows : Ordinary Valencia off-stock, 4½ to 5c. according to brand ; fine, 5¼c ; selected, very scarce at 6c, and layers at 6 to 6¼c. according to quality. Currants show a somewhat firmer tone, and some holders here predict an advance in the near future. They say that their advices from primary markets cite advances, and expect this to have an effect on the local position. Sales of round lots are being made in this market at 3½c. per lb. for Provincials in bbls. and in cases 3¾ to 4c. We quote jobbing prices : Provincials at 3⅞ to 4¼c ; Filiatras, 4¾ to 5c, and Vostizzas, 6 to 7½ according to quality.

There have been free receipts of figs this week, and fine fruit has sold for 8 to 9c. in round lots. We quote 8 to 10c. according to quality.

Receipts of dates have been fair, with a moderate movement at 5 to 5¼c.

Prunes continue scarce and firmly held at 5½c.

NUTS.

Nuts have been fairly active. There are no special features to mention, prices remaining unchanged, as follows : Grenoble walnuts, 11 to 13c. ; pecans, 8½ to 12c. ; peanuts, 8 to 11c. per lb., and cocoanuts,

FLOUR AND FEED.

No further comment is necessary as to the world's wheat prices than the fact quoted recently by the Liverpool Corn Trade News, that a cargo of No. 1 California wheat was sold for prompt shipment at 27s. 7½d. per 500 lbs., or exactly the sum charged for freight a dozen years ago.

The Winnipeg Commercial maintains that figures will show that farmers hold their wheat when prices are high and sell when prices are low. It admits that one reason for this is that it takes more bushels of wheat to pay the farmer's obligations when price is low that when wheat brings a high price, but it maintains, nevertheless, that a high price tends to make farmers hold their wheat, while a low price acts in the opposite way. The dispatch with which this year's crop has been marketed bears this out, as a total of approximately 7,000,000 bushels has already been disposed of.

According to advices received at the Department of Trade and Commerce, the direct trade between Canada and the West Indies is growing rapidly. The last steamer despatched from Halifax had included in the cargo 3,000 barrels of Canadian flour.

It has been generally admitted that the exorbitant duty of 30c. per bushel on barley going into the States, which was virtually prohibitive, was a great blow to Ontario farmers, who were thus cut off from the main source of demand for one of their principal cereals, and to this cause is attributed some of the depression which subsequently settled down on the farming interests of Ontario. Should, therefore, the American duty on barley be reduced as proposed, from 30c. per bushel to an ad valorem duty of 20 per cent, it would mean a reduction of about 20 cents. per bushel off the present values. With 20 cents per bushel off the present tariff, a good margin can be allowed between Canadian farmers and grain dealers and American buyers. If the reduction in the duty of barley goes into effect it will mean an increase in our export of about $4,000,000 per year.

Next to the United States, Russia is the greatest grain producing country in the world. Its rye product is greater by far than that of any other nation, and furnishes half the food for the armies of continental Europe. The Russian wheat crop is about half that of the United States, but it is nearly all exported, the coarser grains forming the principal food of the people. Twice as much barley is raised in Russia as is raised in the United States; the oat crops are about the same in the two countries, but Russia raises only about one hundredth part as much Indian corn as is raised in the States. The total grain harvests of the two countries are 1,800,000 bushels for Russia and 2,900,000 bushels for the United States.

Since the close of navigation the grain trade with the Northwest has been dull, and the prospect is that it will continue so. During the heavy rush in the early season, it appears that farmers marketed a sufficient quantity of grain to relieve their pressing needs for cash, and the rest of the crop will come out slowly. The highest estimate of wheat held by farmers is 4,000,000 bushels. Oats have been selling above an export basis, owing to the belief that the crop is short of local requirements, but the tendency is towards lower prices.

THE MARKETS.

TORONTO.

The flour market continues dull and is likely to remain so till after New Year's. City mills report a flourishing local trade incident to the holiday season, but nothing doing for outside account. Millfeed still continues in good demand, with a further advance this week.

FLOUR—Manitoba patents, $3.70 to $3 80; strong bakers', $3.50; white wheat patents, $3.25 to $3.40; straight roller, $2.80 to $2.95; Ontario family, $2.85 to $3.10; low grades, $2.10 to $2.25. These prices are in round lots delivered here.

MEAL—Rolled oats, $3.80 to $3.85; granulated and standard oatmeal, $3.75 per brl.; cornmeal, common, $3.10; gold dust, $3.25 to $330.

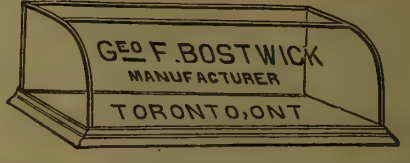
FEED—Bran is scarce and in good demand, city mills selling at $15 per ton; delivered (on track) $14 to $14 50. Shorts higher at $15 per ton in small lots; delivered on track, $14.50 to $15 per ton In oats the feeling is towards a little higher prices, cars on track selling at 32½ to 33c. per bus. Market prices are 34 to 34½c. per bus.; feed corn, 48 to 50c. per bus.

BARLEY—Farmers' loads are selling at 45 to 49c. per bus., according to quality.

HAY—Prices are steady, with a feeling toward higher values, choice farmers' loads selling from $9 to $10 per ton. Pressed on track, $9.50 to $9.75.

STRAW—Offerings light with a good demand, pressed on track selling at $6.00. Market prices are $7 to $8 for sheaf, with loose nominal at $4.50 per ton.

PEAS—Steady, with sales on the market at 57 to 58c.



ST. JOHN, N. B.

Feed is scarce, particularly bran. The reason is given that American buyers are getting a lot from Ontario mills. Flour is easier and market is in an unsettled estate. Large quantities have been received by the merchants here during the past week. The advance in freight from the west after the first of the year will help the prices. It is felt there must soon be a change. Manitoba flour, $4.40 to $4.50; Ontario, best, $3.60 to $3.85; medium patents, $3.50 to $3.60; oatmeal, $4.25 to $4 35; cornmeal, $2.60 to $2.65; middlings, $19.50 to $20.50; oats, N. B., 34 to 35c; P.E.I., 37 to 38c; Ontario, 40 to 41c.; hand-picked, $1.35 to $1.45; prime, $1.30 to $1.35; pot barley, $3.75 to $3.85; split peas, $3.75 to $4; hay, on track, $12.50 to $13, small lots $13 to $13.50.

$3.75 to $4 per 100; Terragona almonds, 11½ to 12c.; and shelled almonds 23 to 45c.; filberts, 9½ to 10c.; walnuts, 12 to 13c.

SUGARS.

Refined sugar remains quiet at last week's rates, granulated having changed hands in fair quantities chiefly for Western account at 4 7-16c. in the refineries. Sales of dark yellows have been made at 3¼ to 3⅜c., while choice brights have brought 4 to 4⅛c. Reports from travelers state that stocks are very low throughout the country, as buyers are operating very cautiously, being afraid of a further decline.

MOLASSES.

Stocks of Barbadoes molasses on this market are very scarce and prices are firm in consequence. We hear of sales at 30c. in round quantities, but for jobbing business sellers are firm at 33 to 34c. for Barbadoes.

SYRUPS.

Syrups are quiet, a few medium-sized lots of Canadian in the wood having changed hands at 1¾c. We quote 1¾ to 2c., according to grade. There is very little call for American, what demand there is coming from the west. Prices are unchanged at 19 to 25c.

TEA.

Tea has been very quiet, a few round lots of Japan having changed hands at 11c. for inferior grades. Blacks are quiet, the only sale reported being a line of 100 packages at 8¾c. cost and freight. We quote: Japans, common, 12 to 13c.; medium, 15 to 17c.; fine, 18 to 21c., and finest 23 to 32c.

COFFEE.

There has been little doing in coffee and the market is unchanged, the easiness in New York having no effect here as yet. We quote: Jamaica, 16 to 18c.; Maracaibo, 19½ to 21c.; Porto Cobello, 19 to 20c.; Rio, 17½ to 19c.; Java, 24 to 30c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

SPICES.

There has been a moderate movement in spices, principally nutmegs, for which 55 to 60c have been paid. Prices are steady, as follows: Jamaica ginger, 16 to 18c. for common, and 18 to 20c. for finer qualities; black pepper, 6 to 7c.; pimento, 6 to 7c.; and nutmegs, 65 to 70c. to $1.

RICE.

There is only a moderate movement in rice as buyers are well supplied. We quote: Standard Japan, $3.75 to $4; "B," $3.50; Crystal, $4.25 to $4.50; Patna, $4.25 to $5.50; Carolina, $6.50 to $7.

CANNED GOODS.

The demand for fish and vegetables has been fair, salmon changing hands at $1.07½ for good brands while round lots of tomatoes have realized 70c. We quote: Tomatoes, 75 to 80c., corn 75 to 80c., peas 90 to 95c, strawberries $2.75 per doz., raspberries $1.80, salmon $1.25 to $1.27½ for best brands and $1.05 to $1.10 for cohoes, lobsters $1.60 to $1.75, mackerel $1 to $1.05.

GREEN FRUIT.

Apples are very firm under light supplies. We quote No. 1 at $4 to $5; No. 2, $3 to $3.50. There is a fair sale for Almeria grapes at $4 25 to $5 per keg. Oranges are in big demand. Floridas have brought $2.25 to $3, according to size and quality, and Valencias $4 to $4.75 per case. There are practically no lemons on the market, holders asking as high as $6 per box.

FISH.

There has been a good steady movement in fish at unchanged prices. Pickled fish have furnished most of the movement. We quote: No. 1 C. B. herring, $5.50; No. 1 Newfoundland do., $5 to $6; No. 1 green cod, $4.75 to $5; Labrador salmon, $14 to $15 per bbl.; B. C. do., $12 to $12.50; No. 2 mackerel, $12; Finnan haddies, 7 to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1 to $1.75 per box; haddock, 4 to 4½c.; cod, 4 to 4½c.; boneless cod, 6½ to 7c.; hand picked malpecque oysters, $5 to $6.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

The egg market is steady. Prices are unchanged. We quote: Fresh boilers, 20 to 22c; Montreal limed, 17 to 18c; candled, 17 to 18c, and western limed, 16 to 17c. The poultry market was well cleaned up to-day. The few small lots arriving all found a ready sale, receivers having little to carry over except some small lots of culls. We quote: Turkeys, 10½ to 11½c; geese, 7 to 8c; ducks 9 to 10c; chickens, 7½ to 8½c. White clover honey in the comb fetches 12½ to 13c, and dark buckwheat 9 to 12c. Extracted is slow sale at 7 to 8½c. for new and 5 to 6c. for old. Maple syrup meets with a little more demand. We quote cans at 50 to 65c. and in the wood, 4½ to 5c. per lb. Maple sugar is unchanged at 6 to 7c. A few choice hops have moved at 21 to 23c. There is a moderate jobbing in beans at $1.35 to $1.50 for choice hand-picked. Potatoes are quiet, and there are frequent complaints as to quality, We hear of sales of Early Rose and Hebrons in car lots at 60c per bag on the track, Onions are quiet and steady at $2.25 per bbl.

PROVISIONS.

A fair enquiry is noted for smoked meats on spot, and lard is in fair demand. There is a very small call for pork. We quote:—Canadian short cut, per brl., $17.25 to $18.25; mess pork, western, new, per brl., $17.50 to $18; hams city cured, per lb, 12 to 13c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11¼ to 12c¼.; bacon, per lb., 11½ to 12½c.; lard, com. refined, per lb. 8¼ to 8½c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

There is nothing new to report concerning the local cheese market, there being practically nothing doing. The range is still 11 to 11¼c. The supply of butter is small and the market holds strong. No further sales of importance are noted, but there is a good jobbing movement at about the following figures:—Finest fall creamery 23 to 23½c.; Finest Townships dairy, 21 to 22c.; Finest Western dairy, 19½ to 20c.; Kamouraska, 19½ to 20.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Coffaroma has had a remarkably good Christmas sale this year.

Round lots of black tea have changed hands on English account at 8¾c. cost and freight.

London cables to brokers here on raw sugar state that cane is dull while beet is irregular, December-January being quoted at 12s. 4½d.

Joseph Tetley & Co. call attention to their "ad." and the offer it makes. They want to demonstrate to grocers that their teas are what they represent them to be.

W. R. Wanham & Son have done a good jobbing trade in their lines of Scotch fish delicacies during the week. They are the sole agents for Marshall & Co. of Aberdeen.

According to mail advices from Patras the currant crop is estimated at 180,000 to 190,000 tons.

There is no demand locally for American syrup, but good lots have changed hands on western account at full figures.

Round lots of granulated sugar have left the refineries here on Western account at 4 7-16c., and there appears to be less cutting than formerly on the part of jobbers.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. 28.

During the holiday season there is little to report in the way of business. Among the retailers the Christmas trade was good, though below last year. The good weather of the week was spoiled by a heavy rain storm on Saturday, and being the last business day before Christmas it was a great disappointment to the storekeepers, to whom it meant dollars and cents. The people of St. John are feeling keenly on the fact that Canadian money is being used to subsidize steamers which do the larger part of their business with American ports, Portland and Boston becoming the winter ports.

CANNED GOODS—In this line prices remain firm and a good business is reported. With the exception of some of the best brands of lobsters stocks are large. Prices: Corn. 90c.; peas, 90c; tomatoes, 90c. to $1; salmon, $1.40 to $1.45; lobsters, $1.50 to $2; oysters, 2's, $2.15 to $2.35; Canadian canned beef, 2's, $2.50; American do., $2.60.

DRIED FRUIT AND NUTS—New peanuts are being offered via Norfolk at low prices. New dates, except a few French, have not got to hand. Currants and raisins continue low. California, London layer and cleaned currants are being sold more largely than any previous year, and are giving good satisfaction. New California prunes are quoted this week. Malaga grapes and Brazil nuts are higher. We quote: Filberts, 10 to 11c.; Grenoble walnuts, 13 to 15c.; French walnuts, 11 to 12c.; Brazil, 15 to 16c.; peanuts, 10 to 11c.; almonds, 13 to 14c.; Valencia raisins, 4½ to 5c.; layers, 5½ to 6c.; London layers, $2 to $2.25; prunes, 7¼c.; California prunes, 12½.; currants, bbls., 3½ to 4c.; cases, 4 to 5c.; cleaned currants, cartoons, 8 to 9c.; dried apples, 6½c.; evaporated apples, 11 to 11½c.; dates, 5½ to 6c.. figs, 10 to 12c.

SUGARS—The market is as last week. Granulated, 4¾ to 4⅞c.; yellows, 3¾ to 4c.; Paris lump, 6 to 6¼c.; powdered, 6 to 6¼c.

MOLASSES—The market is quiet, except what was done at an auction sale this week when some 200 casks early crop Barbadoes were sold in 50 cask lots. This molasses had been held for higher figures, and reports are that sales would not square the cost. This year a great deal of Barbadoes has turned sour. This fact is now being explained by shippers, who say that an abnormal growth has developed itself on the outside of the keg. New Porto Rico will be offered, it is expected, in about a month. The demand for this molasses is growing. Barbadoes, best, 31 to 32c.; second, 29 to 30c.; Porto Rico, best, 35 to 36c.; second, 30 to 32c.; Antiqua, 29 to 30c.; Syrup, 30 to 35c.

DAIRY PRODUCTS—Eggs are slow and only extra fresh can be moved at all. Butter is firmer and demand good. Good butter is hard to get. A lot of extra creamery changed hands during the week at 22½c. net cash. Cheese is held very firm. A small lot of early made cheese changed hands, it is reported, at about 10¼c. Eggs in case, 18 to 20c.; fresh eggs in market, 20 to 24c.; creamery butter, 22 to 25c.; dairy, 20 to 22c.; store-packed, 18 to 20c.; cheese, 10¾ to 11c. in small lots.

FRUIT—Four carloads in four days is the report from one wholesale house, while all report good business. Apples are slow, though when in request bring good prices. Apples, $2.25 to $3; oranges, Dominica, $4 to $5.10 per brl.; Floridas, $3 to $3.50 per box; lemons, $4.50 to $5; onions, $2.75 to $3; Malaga grapes, $5 to $6.50 per keg.

PROVISIONS—Lard is off ¼c. In other respects the market is as last week, with not much demand. Clear mess pork, $20 to $21; American mess, $18 50 to $19; P. E. I. mess, $18 to $19; plate beef, $14.25 to $14.50; extra plate, $14.50 to $14 75; pure lard, 11½ to 12½c.; compound, 9½ to 10½c.

FISH—Higher this week. The sharpest advance has been in codfish, which are scarce. Pickled fish also show an advance. Smoked medium herring are scarce. The receipts in lengthwise are better. In frozen fish the trade seems to get smaller on account of it being impossible to get supplies. One merchant said he had an order for 10 tons, which at present it was impossible to fill, at least from this point. Smelt are now in the market. Cod fish, large, $4.25 to $4 50; medium, $3.50 to $3.75; haddock, $1.80 to $2; pollock, $1.90 to $2; bay herring, brls., $3.25 to $3.50; half-brls., $1.75 to $1.85; Shelburn herring, brls., $4 to $4.25; half-brls., $2.25 to $2.50; medium smoked herring, 12 lengthwise, 9c.

OILS—The price is now uniform among the dealers: American, 20c.; best Canadian, 19c.; second grade, 13¼c. No charge for barrels. Terms, 30 days.

AUSTRALIAN BUTTER IN CANADA.

Last week The Commercial referred to the efforts being made to place Australian mutton upon the markets of Western Canada. There is another Australian commodity which has been introduced, which would hardly seem likely to find much of a market here. We refer to Australian butter. British Columbia consumes a considerable quantity of butter in excess of local production, and heretofore this deficiency has been drawn from Manitoba and Eastern Canada. Previous to the completion of the Canadian Pacific railway, British Columbia imported considerable butter from the Pacific coast States, principally from California. With the completion of the transcontinental railway, Manitoba and Eastern Canada butter began to supplant the California article. The placing of a duty of 4 cents per pound upon butter imported into this country assisted in shutting out the States article and overcame the disadvantage in the matter of higher freight rates, which had to be borne by the eastern butter. The cheap water freights from California, as compared with the long railway haul from Manitoba and the East, gave the California article an advantage in the matter of freights. The British Columbia people had also acquired a taste for the California article, which tended to prolong the imports from the latter place. Gradually, however, butter from Manitoba and the East came into use, and now a large number of car lots are taken annually in British Columbia. Creamery butter from Ontario and creamery and dairy butter from Manitoba now make up the principal supply of the British Columbia markets. The quantity of Manitoba creamery butter sent to British Columbia is limited only by the available surplus to be obtained here. Our shippers have a call for all the creamery butter they can supply, but as the industry has not yet progressed sufficiently in Manitoba to meet the full requirements of the Pacific province, the supply has to be supplemented by creamery from Eastern Canada. In dairy butter Manitoba furnishes all that is required, and occasionally British Columbia markets are overstocked with Manitoba dairy.

Now the California butter has been largely shut out, a new competitor enters the field. Since the establishment of the Canada-Australia steamship line, some consignments of Australian butter have been received in British Columbia ports. The Commercial cannot speak of Australia's ability to compete in the Canadian Pacific markets in butter. The fact that that country has been sending butter of fine quality to England, is something in her favor. It will seem strange, however, if Australia can send any considerable quantity to a dairy country like Canada. To be sure there is an expensive railway haul between our dairy regions and the Pacific coast cities, but the duty of four cents per pound is more than an offset to this. In case of the removal of the duty, which is a possibility of the perhaps not distant future, Australian butter might prove a strong competitor to the home commodity, in the coast markets. While the duty remains, however, the domestic article is not likely to suffer much from Australian competition, we fancy.—Commercial, Winnipeg.

BUSINESS MEN AND CLERKS.

The world credits the American business man with being industrious and careful, and to those qualities, quite as much as to his native shrewdness, is attributed his wonderful success, remarks a contemporary. He is a worker in all that word implies, and all unite in accrediting to him a closer attention to the details than is given by men of other countries. Employees overlook this fact, and they look upon their employer as a man who has profited by their labor, not stopping to think of the hours and toil that he has passed through. The workman has his fixed hours for labor, and when the day's work is done his mind is not tormented with thoughts of the morrow, but with the employer there are no stated hours for his work; his only limit is the few hours given to sleep.

The hours of his shop when superintending his work are his easiest hours. His severest toil is that of providing ways and means of conducting his business. To do this he must find customers, watch commercial affairs, look to credit, see that the work produced is such as will sell, guard against waste in every department, be ready to meet competition without loss, and to systematize the workings of the factory and office that loss may be reduced to a minimum, and the office may always be provided with funds to meet all demands upon it. His life is one continuous round of labor, and the closer attention he pays to the details, and the more prosperous the business, the better it is for the workman. Then, too, the more active the man the closer his connection with the business and with his relationship to his workmen, and the less the friction between employer and employee.

GOD'S DESSERT.

His people have feasted on barley,
  His people have dined upon wheat;
His people have fed upon plenty,
  And corn is piled thick at their feet.

God stands a-tiptoe and sees us,
  Amidst all our plenty, in sin;
Forgiving, he orders, to please us
  A glorious dessert brought in.

The angels pile plums on our table,
  Plums that are purple and red;
No people in legend or fable
  With ever such splendors were fed.

The arm of the angel outstretches
  Thro' fields that are prefumed and broad—
He is piling our lap full of peaches,
  He plucks from the gardens of God.

Again His arm is outstretching,
  Lest the spirit of autumn escapes;
The arm is gathering and fetching,
  And loading our sideboards with grapes.

The red-cheeked apples are rounding
  Their forms in the autumn-tide sun,
With pears in their bounty abounding
  Ere glorious fall-tide is done.

This is the feast of the splendid
  That aye to everyone comes,
Rosy-cheeked apples are blended
  With grapes and peaches and plums.

Sit down to the o'erladen table,
  Long, loaded, heaped fully and broad;
Come feast ye as much as you're able,
  With gifts that are given of God.

—THE KHAN.

W. A. BRADSHAW CANED.

There is no friction between W. A. Bradshaw, proprietor of the Toronto Soap Co., and his employees; and no soap is used to obviate it either. It is because Mr. Bradshaw knows how to use his employees and the employees know how to appreciate his treatment. This good-fellowship was given expression to Wednesday, when twenty-one employees of the firm presented Mr. Bradshaw with an address and gold-headed cane suitably inscribed. W. Colville, one of the travelers, read the address, which expressed appreciation of Mr. Bradshaw's kindness as an employer; pride at the signal success which the firm had attained under his management; and hope that the harmony now existing will always be maintained. Miss Alice Bebington did the caning. Mr. Bradshaw feelingly replied, and then followed cheers and "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

THE FIRMNESS IN CURRANTS.

The firmness in currants, says Produce Markets' Review, London, is probably due to a combination of circumstances rather than to any one particular cause. The determination on the part of the merchants to sell, which was evidenced from the arrival of the very first vessels, has had the effect of keeping them much clearer of anything in the shape of an accumulation of stocks than usual; and with the good demand that has lately prevailed from the dealers, they have been enabled to dispose of as much as they desired, and the previous forcing tactics have been rendered unnecessary. The fact, also, that the exchange has gone down, owing to more confidence being felt in the new Greek Government, has naturally led them to demand some enhancement in price; and, indeed, the fall in the exchange has been heavier than the rise in values, so that the net result to the grower shows no real improvement. The good demand, the comparative scarcity of many descriptions, and the lowering of the rate of exchange, together with the increased confidence that the new Government in Greece will take some active steps to assist the growers, are probably the legitimate and sufficient reasons for the enhancement of values established last week being maintained up to the present time. The assistance of the Government is expected by different persons to take different forms. By some itis said that the export duty, which has lately had to be paid in gold, will in all probability be made payable in paper currency, and. indeed, some of the London papers have reported this as having been proposed, and as having met with support. Others contend that it is probable that some compulsory limit will be put upon the exports of fruit to the various consuming countries for the purposes for which it has hitherto been employed; and that the remainder will be taken over and held back by the State, to be forced off in some way or other, for wine-making or distillation. So far as the market of the United Kingdom is concerned, it is tolerably clear that these proposals would have a different and opposite effect. The first would be the means of encouraging shipments, and, so far as it goes, would tend to lower prices here; while it is obvious that with a sufficiently firm assurance that any large weight of fruit would be entirely removed from the ordinary countries of consumption and diverted to fresh channels, there would be ample justification for a return to more or less normal prices for the two-thirds or so of the crop that under these conditions would be available for grocery purposes.

CANNED GOODS AND TIN PLATE.

The canned goods industry of the United States represents an enormous consumption of tin plate. To this may be added a vast amount of use in the carriage of kerosene, lubricating oils, and other articles of production and export. The export of tinned goods in 1892 has been tabled as follows:—

Breadstuffs, prepared and shipped in tins	$1,714,000
Canned salmon	1,738,000
Other canned fish	225,000
Canned fruits	2,498,000
Canned beef	7,876,000

This exhibit represents a total of $14,051,000, and though by no means inclusive of all canned or tinned articles, is sufficient to give an approximate idea of the magnitude of the trade. We consume nearly three-fourths as much tin plate as the whole world, outside of the British lines. This fact is significant,as most of the tin plate used outside the United States is drawn from Welsh supplies. It emphasizes the vastness and importance of American canning industries, the products of which are rapidly finding their way into every country on the globe, and also the opportunities of the American tin plate industry.—Ex.

HOW A FAT MAN EARNED $10.

"You may laugh at my fatness," said a jolly obese fellow to a reporter, "but it's stood me a good turn. Not long ago, when I was in hard luck, I was walking along Front street. A man stopped me and asked if I wanted to make ten dollars. That was just the thing for me, and I was't long in answering that I was 'on the make.' He hired me, and I stood most of the next day in such a manner as to hide the big sign of sheriff's sale on a small flag which was placed against a sign. Few passers-by could see any evidence of a sale. The scheme was finished off to a nicety by a darkey, who, for a consideration, rang a child's toy bell instead of the big things usually used on such occasions. The result was that the man bought his own stock at a mighty low figure."

POULTRY FARMING.

Eggs (Island) 60c. per dozen, packed 30c., are recently reported quotations, and these doubtless will be enhanced before the Christmas demand is supplied. Five cents for an egg is a good price, and ought to amply remunerate poultry keepers; but frequently, even at that figure, one is forced to be content with what very much resembles the packed article. There is probably no part of the Dominion better adapted for poultry raising that many sections of this province, yet many eggs, both fresh and packed, come from Ontario and the United States. And the same may be said of poultry. For the recent Thanksgiving day it was announced that quantities of Washington turkeys were to be on the Victoria market; but they failed to come to hand, and in consequence many people who had given their orders in advance were at the last moment compelled to depend upon every-day, but none the less substantial and satisfying, roast beef and mutton. But why should consumers be forced to purchase foreign eggs or foreign poultry; for no matter the price paid one cannot always get the home-raised articles?

There is a comfortable living to be had by many people if they will only pay attention to poultry farming and the raising of small fruits and vegetables. The capital necessary is not large; the avocation does not involve a very great deal of experience or labor; but it does require a considerable amount of stick-to-it-iveness, with which success is assured to the man or woman who does not think the pursuit unworthy of attention. We have watched with some interest the proceedings of the gentlemen who have held their stated meetings in this city with the object of augmenting the interest in this line of pursuit, and we look forward with not a little pleasure to the exhibition that is shortly to be held at Nanaimo. Why should not this province at least supply its own demands? We have the climate and everything else in our favor, and there is a market at our doors for everything that there is to offer, with first-class prices and substantial profits.—B. C. Com. Journal.
